U. S. Information Center

OLC-WB, Stuttgart

APO 154, c/o Postmaster, N. Y.

As the twins recently celebrated their second birthday, it occurs to me that I haven't let you know our whereabouts since we were preparing to cart them off to France three months after they joined the family. All has gone well with us since, briefly in the following manner:

We were in Paris for over a year, while Bob worked on his doctorate thesis for the Sorbonne. I had an interesting job with the Embassy there, and we were fortunate in having a nice apartment—a rare thing indeed in that town where there are, I swear, more Americans than French. We were continually running into old friends, but strangely enough, none from Duke. I guess I should have started an alumni chapter; actually, I suppose we were considered rather snobbish, working for the Embassy instead of ECA, living on the Right Bank instead of the Left, and having occasional moments of central heating and almost enough hot water for daily baths. It was a fine year, and the children thrived.

After finishing his thesis, Bob got a job as head of the Information Center here, a Cultural Affairs position with broader scope because of the tremendous job to be done on the Germans. Library, concerts, lectures, plays, children's affairs—anything you might imagine that could give information of the outside world, something the people haven't had since 1934. This work fascinates both of us. Of course, to my mind, it is probably the most interesting spot in the world today, though some of the Americans who have been here several years don't agree.

I suppose by now the music department, or somebody, has received a set of Dad's* records which I had sent from Washington. I hope they will be useful to you, and that you will enjoy them. My idea was to have someone carry them after I had warned you that they were coming, so I hope none were broken, and that they got into the right hands.

I think often of Alpha Chi, the Chronicle, and the Duke Players, and of all of you in Durham. Which reunion I'll be able to attend, I can't say, but I'm looking forward to it. I wouldn't be at all surprised if the Alumni Fund is still going strong, so enclose a check.

THIS MONTH'S COVER

Duke's new basketball coach, Harold Bradley, gives instructions to his star player, Dick Groat. Coach Bradley, who took over at the beginning of the season has proved efficient as a cage mentor, and is well liked on the campus. Dick Groat, stellar guard, has made for himself the reputation of being the best athlete ever to play on Duke's hardwood.

We have all 3 Types of Composition

WHEN setting type we give due consideration to the ultimate purpose . . . In deciding whether to use linotype, monotype or hand composition, we first ascertain the function of the particular piece of work. Each method was designed for a specific service, therefore initial cost is beside the question. We shall be glad to assist you in deciding which of the three will do the best job for your particular problem. Our composing room service is planned for today's demands.

The Old Year

At this time of the year it seems appropriate to stop for a few minutes and see what the old year has put on the credit side of the ledger. The staff of the Alumni Office remembers pleasantly the many ways in which the alumni family has cooperated to make the past twelve months noteworthy in the history of the institution.

We Like to Think About:

—The many hours spent in preparation for special occasions, such as Homecoming, Founders' Day, Commencement, class reunions—of how the alumni responded and returned enthusiastically to share these pleasant occasions;

—The alumni who have taken to their hearts the combining of the Loyalty Fund and Development Program into the Development Campaign and the several thousand who have volunteered their services to President Edens to help in this program;

—The alumni in three areas who have organized new alumni associations;

—The local alumni officers of such associations as New York City and Buffalo, N. Y., who are mailing newsletters periodically to their members;

—Those alumni who have called to the attention of the Admissions Office outstanding students in their community;

—Alumni who have served on scholarship committees, such as the Angier B. Duke Prize Committee;

—The more than 10,000 alumni who have been prompt in sending their changes of address;

—The alumni who have given new scholarships or have contributed to old ones;

—The Class of 1925 which had the largest percentage of participation of any class in its activities and gift to the University on the occasion of its 25th reunion;

—The officers of the General Alumni Association, the class officers, local association officers, and the thousands of other alumni who have served Duke in the past twelve months.

Enthusiastic interest and support by the alumni assure the University that it will be able to intensify its program and increase its services to mankind.

The New Year

As we look to the New Year we see the days, weeks, and months ahead clouded by unsettled conditions and by a feeling of unrest such as this country has never known. However, in spite of these, we are counting on our alumni to have a place in their thinking, in their hearts, and in their everyday life for Duke University.

We Hope:

—That you will visit the campus as often as possible;

—That you will drop us a line when you change address, for this is particularly important now;

—That you will call on the Alumni Office for any service it can render you or for any information it can furnish you about Duke or its alumni;

—That you will cooperate with the officers of your respective association and class.

We hope that you will do the above things, for constructive and enthusiastic interest on the part of the alumni means much to Duke University.

We wish for each of you a Happy New Year.

Development Campaign

Some time in the next few months a fellow alumnus will get up from his desk or stop her household duties to call on you and remind you that Duke is counting on you to have a part in the Development Campaign.

When this call comes, please give thoughtful attention to the request and give according to your ability. Alumni are being asked to invest in Duke's future by subscribing in minimum shares of $25.00 per year. Surely each of you will find it possible to grant such a reasonable request.

AIR VIEW OF THE WEST, OR UNIVERSITY, CAMPUS

Duke Moves to Meet Emergency

Speed-up Program Starts in June. Committee Will Advise Students on Draft.

Moving to meet serious educational problems created by a growing national emergency, President Edens has announced that a "speed-up" program to enable students to graduate in three years will be instituted at Duke in June.

Similar to the program adopted by the University during World War II, the new curriculum will make it possible for students to by-pass traditional summer vacations and complete in six Summer Session terms of six weeks each work normally accomplished in two semesters of the regular academic year.

"The University deems it essential to provide opportunity for high school graduates to begin their college training at the earliest possible date," President Edens stated. He added that: "High school seniors are urged to apply at once for enrollment in the Summer term of 1951 beginning in early June. This would enable them to complete the major part of a half year's work before the usual opening in September."

With the drafting of 18-year-olds an imminent possibility, and with a tightening up of deferment regulations that concern college students, it is evident that colleges and universities face difficult responsibilities. Duke has thus taken the lead in formulating a well-defined policy for safeguarding opportunities for higher education by qualified students.

The implied purpose of the program is to encourage students to begin or continue college work until it is mandatory that they must withdraw from the University to enter armed service. The speed-up program, it is felt, will allow larger numbers to graduate before being called through the draft.

"This program," the President commented, "is in line with the advice of national leaders and high school counselors who are urging young people to begin their college work as soon as possible, because of the imminence of military service."

Under the announced acceleration, a student enrolling as a freshman in June, 1951, will graduate in June, 1954. If drafted before graduation, he will at least have completed a greater part of his work than would be the case under normal conditions.

Freshman registration for the Summer Session will be on June 12. The customary series of placement tests and the program of orientation will begin a few days earlier.

In spite of the speed-up, every effort will be made to protect the quality of education at Duke and to permit the student to derive maximum benefit from his work. High standards are not to be sacrificed.

An Advisory Committee

Another recent step taken to help the University and its students face problems spawned by the national emergency is the formation of a special faculty-staff advisory committee, which will offer counsel to students on questions related to military service.

In recent weeks a growing student anxiety has been reflected in the numbers of men approaching deans for information and advice. The advisory committee is established to channel such requests to faculty and staff members who are accumulating all available information on the subject of the draft and its effect upon University students.

Members of the committee will assist individual students confronted with a decision to continue or discontinue their education. The committee will be large enough to make possible personal interviews and to answer requests for information without delay.

Second Gift of $1,500,000 Offered

Contingent Upon Raising of Matching Sum

A second gift of $1,500,000 to the Duke University Development Campaign was announced earlier this month by President Edens.

Like the General Education Board's gift in December, this latest proffered donation is contingent upon the raising of a matching sum by alumni and friends.

The donor has asked to remain anonymous. President Edens termed the donor's generosity to Duke "an act of faith in higher education and an act of confidence in Duke University."

This brings to a total of $3,000,000 the amount that has been offered to the University providing other contributors give an amount that matches it dollar for dollar.

Every dollar that an alumnus or friend now gives during the Development Campaign will bring another into the University. Two great acts of generosity, which were also expressions of confidence in Duke's ability to give increased service to mankind through intensified programs of education and research, have brought before alumni and friends an exceptional opportunity to help Duke build for the future.

National Campaign Is Opening

Opening of the general campaign throughout the nation will be signalled by a meeting on Feb. 6 in Charlotte, N. C., to begin the general canvass in Mecklenburg County.

Shortly thereafter campaigns in other areas will start just as soon as soliciting organizations have completed preliminary work and are ready to go.

Three million dollars must be raised between now and June 30 in order to reach the 1950-51 goal of $8,650,000 and provide the matching funds needed to assure the two contingent gifts of $3,000,000.

Within the next few weeks it is anticipated that alumni in almost every part of the country will be contacted by fellow-alumni who are serving as campaign workers in their home areas. These campaign workers will be well informed as to the purposes and procedure of the Development Campaign and will be able to give prospective contributors information that should encourage generous giving.

It is not planned that campaigns in every locality be opened simultaneously. The pattern will be similar to the highly successful one followed by the Loyalty Fund solicitations during the past three years. Campaigns will begin one at a time during February and the three months of spring, timed so that the 1950-51 drive for gifts for major projects will end at Commencement in June. This will leave the month of June for a clean-up campaign, if it is necessary to reach the goal.

New Chairmen

Meanwhile the appointment of campaign chairmen and the organization of local committees is being pushed rapidly ahead.

Most recently enlisted chairmen are John B. Harris, '24, in District 4 of North Carolina; W. Herbert Smith, '23, in northwest South Carolina; and William M. Courtney, '38, in northeast Florida. These three alumni leaders, who in the past have served Duke in various ways, received an expression of appreciation from President Edens for their acceptance of important campaign posts.

Support at Home

While preparations are being made to open campaigns in numerous cities and counties both inside and outside North Carolina, two groups close to home have just about completed their Development Program drives and are showing exceptional results.

The City of Durham campaign, in which business firms and non-alumni individuals participated, currently stands at more than $220,000 from approximately 175 contributors. Final report of the Durham campaign was due at a meeting scheduled for Friday, Jan. 30. Thus funds for remodeling West Campus Union, the Administration Building and parts of Page into a Student Activities Center are virtually assured.

The Faculty-Staff campaign, begun early this month by a committee headed by Dr. Frank T. DeVyver, has at this writing raised approximately $60,000. Actively engaged in the campaign as workers are 50 faculty members, including at least one for each major instructional department in the University, and a four-man staff committee headed by Walter G. Cooper, personnel director.

The success of these two campaigns is particularly significant and is especially encouraging as the national campaign gets underway. The people closest to the University, in the city that is its home

Large Gifts Announced

Two large gifts, one by a firm and one by a friend of the University's were recently announced.

The first was a gift of $105,000 by Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company to be used for research projects related to the tobacco industry as a whole.

The second, announced on Jan. 25, is a gift of $100,000 to the Development Campaign by Mr. David Owens of Charlotte, N. C., vice-president of Ivey's Department Store and a close friend to the University. Mr. Owens generous gift was the first of the Mecklenburg County Campaign which is just getting underway.

and upon its own instructional and administrative staffs, are the most capable of making a critical appraisal of Duke's needs and its opportunities for future service. Their very tangible expressions of loyalty and confidence should do much to warm the hearts of far-flung alumni to the causes which the University serves and encourage their active support.

Duke to Meet Emergency are Dr. Paul M. Gross and Dr. Herbert J. Herring, both University vice-presidents closely associated with students on the campus. Chairmen of committees to coordinate advisory functions of appointed faculty members are Dr. Alan K. Manchester, dean of undergraduate instruction, and Dr. William Archie, assistant dean in charge of freshmen.

The anxiety of the student body is increased by uncertainty as to present and contemplated draft policies. While current regulations have been set forth in directives from Washington, students feel that there is some doubt as to how local draft boards will interpret them. Most perplexing, however, are repeated announcements that changes in regulations are forthcoming, but no one seems to know just when or to what extent. As might be supposed, this gives rise to rumors of all sorts of pending action that will affect students. Fortunately, undergraduates at Duke are evincing a cautious attitude toward such rumors, and the University to date has not lost, through voluntary withdrawal, as many students as some other institutions. But it is expected that the end of the fall semester this month will see quite a few dropping out to enlist, rather than risk being drafted in the middle of the spring term.

Campus Busy with Activity

Top Students

Honorary class scholarships valued at $350.00 each have been awarded to 17 students in recognition of outstanding grades.

The scholarships, given annually to the five top ranking students in the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, are awarded on the basis of the previous year's work and are applied toward tuition.

Senior class winners are: Arnold I. Roth, Birmingham, Ala.; Bowen E. Simmons, Opp, Ala.; Sanford Radner, Munroe, N. Y.; Thomas E. Morgan, Jr., Jacksonville, Fla.; William L. Baldwin, Durbam; W. Kenny Withers, Jacksonville, Fla.; and George Binda, Medford, Mass.

Three students, Baldwin, Withers, and Binda, who are enrolled under Public Law 346 for veterans, tied for fifth place in the senior class. They received cash awards of $100.00 each.

Duke Debate Team Wins First Place

Duke's negative debate team, composed of Dennis O'Donovan of Miami, Fla., and Henry Clark of Reidsville, won first place in a debate tournament held late in November at the University of South Carolina. The affirmative team, made up of John Maxwell of Bethesda, Md., and Tom Sanders of Asheville, tied for second place.

In winning first place in the tournament, the Duke team, coached by Joseph C. Wetherby, assistant professor of speech, won out over debate teams from 15 Southern colleges and universities. The debate question for the tournament was: Resolved: the non-communist nations of the world should form a new international organization.

The South Carolina tournament was the first major tournament attended by a Duke debate team this year.

"Best Debater"

Hunt Ricker, sophomore from Tampa, Fla., won the title of "best debater" in a field of more than 70 contestants from Southeastern colleges.

The event, the Dixie Debate Tournament, was held at Charlotte early in December. It attracted 36 debate teams from 12 colleges and universities, and was sponsored by Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., and Wingate College, Wingate.

Two of Duke's 10 teams entered in the tourney were awarded places in the "Top Ten" teams selected by the judges. Members of the two teams were Hunt Ricker; Dan Castor, Tampa, Fla., sophomore; Richard Thigpen, Charlotte, senior; and William Werher, College Park, Md., sophomore.

Joseph C. Wetherby, assistant professor of speech who accompanied the teams, stated that none of the Duke team members had ever before participated in an intercollegiate debate.

Sixty-nine Candidates

Sixty-nine students are now working toward graduate degrees in English and American literature, Dr. Paull F. Baum, director of graduate studies in English, announced.

Eighteen students began graduate work in English this fall, and 46 are now in residence at Duke. Some 37 students are working toward the Ph.D. degree, with 11 studying American literature and 26 majoring in English literature.

Duke fraternity men have been getting better grades than non-fraternity students, contrary to a downward fraternity scholarship trend reported by most colleges and universities in the country.

Dean Robert B. Cox, dean of undergraduate men, stated that every one of the 19 fraternities at Duke topped the all-men student scholastic average of 1.24 quality points per semester hour during the academic year 1949-50. Fraternity members earned an over-all average of 1.38 quality points while over the same period non-fraternity students recorded a score of 1.15.

"This is the first time at Duke that the fraternity average has surpassed the all-men scholastic rating in recent years," Dean Cox declared. He pointed out that in 1949-50 only 50 per cent of the fraternities made grades higher than the non-fraternity average, and at most colleges throughout the country, the fraternity averages are below the all-student average. Much of the credit for the scholastic gain should go to the Scholarship Committee of the Duke Inter-Fraternity Council, which has staged a "back-to-the-books" campaign. A trophy and individual plaques are awarded to the fraternity showing the most scholastic progress.

Duke fraternities have received national recognition of their scholarship achievements in a series of Scholarship Newsletters published by the National Inter-Fraternity Council.

Future Teachers

Fifty future teachers mingled with teen-agers at Durham High, Carr Junior High, and East Durbam Junior High as Duke education majors began their practice teaching by observing classroom procedure.

After a two-month delay caused by a change in contract with the Durham School Board, the students got their class assignments on the first day after Christmas vacation. Before the end of January they are expected to have completed at least ten of the 45 required hours of observation to meet requirements for a North Carolina certificate.

Before the end of the year, students in practice-teaching must have spent another 45 hours in actual teaching and 18 more in conferences with the critic teacher, the supervisor and the director of the program.

Recent Medical Achievements Add to Health and Happiness

Medical science at Duke is quietly achieving major and minor triumphs in the never-ending battle against diseases, ailments and accidents which shorten and torment human lives.

The discovery and isolation of a cancer-causing virus, advances in the treatment of gastric ulcers, a new use of ACTH in treating severely burned skin tissue, and the effects of ACTH in relation to high blood pressure are just a few recently announced accomplishments to be added to the many contributions that Duke doctors have made toward a healthier and happier mankind.

Cancer Virus Isolated

One team of Duke scientists ended a long struggle by many medical researchers by isolating and photographing the tiny virus that causes fowl leukosis, a type of cancer in chickens that is closely related to the human cancer, leukemia.

Announcement of the discovery was made in an article in Proceedings of the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine by a team composed of: Dr. Joseph W. Beard, professor of surgery in charge of experimental surgery and associate professor of virology; Mrs. Dorothy W. Beard, R.N., research associate in surgery; Dr. D. Gordon Sharp, A.M. '37, Ph.D. '39, assistant professor of biophysics in experimental surgery and biophysicist to Duke Hospital; Edward A. Eekert, and T. Z. Csaky.

The importance of the find is the ability to study directly the causative agent of the disease and perhaps find a way to cure or prevent it. Implications of such a discovery are great; fowl leukosis costs the poultry industry $75,000,000 every year. The scientists emphasized, however, that the report is just a preliminary one, and it is too early to predict any success in efforts to kill the virus or develop a vaccine against it.

Leukosis virus is small—so tiny, in fact, that it will pass through the invisible pores of an ordinary unglazed china dinner plate. When magnified 15,000 times and photographed by the electron microscope, it is shaped like a tadpole with a head about 60 one-millionths of an inch in diameter and a tail somewhat longer.

Fowl leukosis affects certain cells in the bone marrow, causing young cells to multiply in tremendous numbers. These are thrown into the blood stream to form a sort of "floating cancer." The normal red cells are killed and replaced by the cancerous cells, which collect in vital areas causing paralysis or blindness. The chickens die of anemia and starvation.

The Duke team made thousands of tests before determining that the fatal virus is carried from chick to chick through the breed, through plasma, or by virus infected cells. Again and again they whirled virus-laden plasma at high speeds in a centrifuge, gradually separating components until the tiny killer was isolated.

The fowl leukosis virus is minute enough to pass through the invisible pores of an ordinary unglazed china dinner plate, but when magnified 15,000 times and photographed by the electron microscope, it looks like this.

Isolation of virus by Duke scientists is nothing new. A Duke team in 1937 purified the first known cancer-causing virus, that of rabbit papilloma. The dread Newcastle disease virus was isolated a few years ago.

Wonder Hormone Heals

While the above work was going on, another Duke team struggled to save the life of a nine-year-old boy, badly burned four and a half years ago. Eighty-five blood transfusions kept him alive while the doctors desperately attempted to graft skin on charred tissues. Forty-two attempts failed; the transplanted skin tissue melted away and vanished within a week. It looked hopeless.

Then the doctors decided to try ACTH, the wonder hormone that controls and eases so many crippling, stuhorn and painful diseases. A four-man research team consisting of Dr. Frank L. Engel, assistant professor of medicine and instructor in physiology; Dr. Samuel P. Martin, associate in medicine and bacteriology; Dr. Benjamin F. Edwards and Dr. Theodore B. Schwartz reported the results of the test at the second ACTH Conference held recently in Chicago.

The child was given the hormone for two days, and then small experimental skin grafts were attempted on the small patient's chest burns. Eighty per cent of them survived. Two more grafting procedures were tried—again success, as healthy new skin began to grow spontaneously on the edges of the less severely burned areas. ACTH, as it has many times before, was easing a child's pain and saving his life.

Possible Cause of Blood Pressure

Duke doctors have been busy studying ACTH for some time. Only last spring they established a connection between high blood pressure in persons with nephritis (kidney disease) and the amount of ACTH produced in their own pituitary glands.

The disease may be caused by the amount of ACTH produced in the body. Furthermore, eating a diet low in protein seems to decrease the gland's output of ACTH and thereby lowers blood pressure.

Dr. Philip Handler, professor of biochemistry, and Dr. Frederick Bernheim, professor of pharmacology, have been making investigations of the hormone. Implications of their discoveries may be important in the treatment of high blood pressure and heart disease in humans.

Subjects of the Duke experiments were rats with high blood pressure produced by removing one kidney and partially damaging another. Drs. Handler and Bernheim proved that when these rats were fed large amounts of protein, their blood pressure rose quickly. When they ate low protein diets, the pressures dropped back to normal.

Seeking an explanation, the Duke scientists gave ACTH to rats that had been eating small amounts of protein. In four hours their blood pressure rose from normal to a high level—about as high as if they had been eating the high protein diet. Then they gave the hormone to rats that had been eating larger amounts of protein. Although these rats already had high blood pressure, the level went no higher. In the same way, ordinary rats with undamaged kidneys were not affected, regardless of what they ate.

The investigators concluded that, in rats with kidney disease, high blood pressure occurs only when the animal is making sufficient amounts of ACTH. They also obtained evidence suggesting that eating a low protein diet results in a decreased secretion of ACTH by the pituitary gland, thereby explaining the effects of such a diet on high blood pressure.

All this may answer many questions about diet and about the action of ACTH. When scientists have discovered why a low-protein diet affects the body in this way, they may be on the way to a solution to the problems of high blood pressure and kidney disease in humans. However, there is much work to be done before a final conclusion can be drawn.

Ulcer Drug Successful

More advances were recorded for Duke medicine when Dr. Keith S. Grimson, professor of surgery, recently described excellent results from a new drug, Banthine, used in the treatment of peptic ulcer.

Banthine, a trade name for the generic jaw-breaker beta-diethylaminoethyl-xanthene-9-carboxylate methobromide, has been found helpful in blocking the transmission of nerve impulses which cause spasms in the stomach and upper intestines. These spasms often result in massive hemorrhages, considerable pain, and the need for operation. The new drug relieves the pain and helps to eliminate or delay surgery. It is available only on a doctor's prescription.

Dr. Grimson, speaking before the fourth annual Clinical Session of the American Medical Association at Cleveland, announced the results of a study made by him and two Duke alumni associates, Dr. C. Keith Lyons, M.D. '46, and Dr. Benjamin H. Flowe, M.D. '49, which involved 100 patients.

The treatment began back in March 1949 and these patients will be followed through at least five years of close study before any definite conclusions will be made. Results of the tests so far, however, have been encouraging. Of the 100 patients covered in the study, 62 had shown symptoms, pain, spasms and some massive hemorrhaging, indicating a need for operation. After treatment with Banthine varying from five to 45 weeks, only 10 of the 62 subsequently required surgery.

Of the 52 not yet requiring an operation, 20 (38 per cent) experienced continuing complete relief from pain, 23 (45 per cent) satisfactory relief and only nine (17 per cent) suffered brief recurrences.

Of the other group of 38 patients not needing surgery at the time they were placed on treatment, 24 (63 per cent) experienced continuing complete relief, 12 (32 per cent) satisfactory relief and only two (5 per cent) had brief relapses. Clearly this demonstrates the great possibilities for the new drug.

Dr. Grimson cautioned against any sweeping optimisms and conclusions by stating that it was still too early to foretell the extent of the protection offered by the drug. Although there is no evidence of chronic toxicity or evidence of increasing tolerance with use, there are some side effects including dilated pupils, dryness of the mouth and relaxation of the bladder. Patients are required to take Banthine every six hours, sometimes every four hours, day and night. Much depends upon their co-operation with this schedule.

The surgeon concluded by saying that gastric ulcers with their associated risk of malignancy should be still treated in the conventional surgical manner with "medical management being indicated only when prompt and complete healing is demonstrated."

Continuing medical progress at Duke Hospital and the School of Medicine is accomplished by the teamwork and co-operation of competent doctors working steadily and indefatigably in research. The work of these able scientists in making Duke one of the leading medical centers in the South is a source of great pride to the University, its community and alumni, and to the city and state in which Duke is located.

Alumnae Week End

The announcement concerning Alumnae Week End on April 6, 7, and 8, which appeared in the December ALUMNI REGISTER, has met with widespread approval according to information received in the Alumni Office. The idea of returning to the campus during regular school time, rather than during spring vacation, appeals to alumnae of all ages. Final plans are being made and a complete program will be mailed to alumnae within the next few weeks.

Dr. Gloria M. Wysner, an authority on the Near East, who is the only woman ever named as a consultant to The International Missionary Council in Association with the World Council of Churches, is to be one of the featured speakers. Her book, Near East Panorama, is being used this year as the official mission study book for many churches including the Methodist, Presbyterian, and Episcopal.

Dr. Wysner is in the Near East at present, but will return shortly before Alumnae Week End. Her address, therefore, will be timely, and based on first hand information.

State Supreme Court Member

Jeff D. Johnson, Jr., '22, recently sworn in as Associate Justice of the North Carolina State Supreme Court, climaxed a career of service to the people of his state as an attorney and legislator.

North Carolina voters recognized his outstanding ability and long service by confirming in the November elections his earlier nomination by the State Democratic Committee to fill the vacancy created by the death of Associate Justice A. A. F. Seawell.

Within moments after taking the oath of office from Chief Justice W. P. Stacy, Justice Johnson donned his robe and joined his new colleagues in a review of appeals from the Ninth and Twelfth Districts.

The soft-spoken, friendly new associate justice is the antithesis of a staid and solemn individual one might expect in the State's highest court. His gift for catching and remembering names, his quiet, unassuming manner, and his personal warmth have won him an untold number of friends during his long career as a popular North Carolina lawyer. Steadfast in purpose, unswerving in honesty and indomitable in the defense of a right, he has commanded the respect of all who have known him. An example of this esteem is the fact that he as a Democrat has carried the election in every office he has held in a solidly Republican county. His combination of humanitarianism, keen intellect and great capabilities will certainly be reflected in decisions handed down from the Supreme Court.

Justice Johnson's participation in State affairs dates back to 1936 when he was a member of the State Senate which passed such legislation as old age assistance and aid to dependent children, and the Unemployment Compensation Act. Four years later he was appointed chairman of the important Senate Committee on Roads. He introduced and pressed the passage of a bill making the Motor Vehicle Bureau a separate State department. He was regarded by his colleagues as a "liberal."

Born on June 6, 1900, Justice Johnson is a "Tar Heel" from way back. His ancestors settled in areas around Garland in Sampson County before the Revolutionary War. As a boy, he worked and played on his father's farm at Garland, a farm which the elder Johnson still operates in addition to his lumber business. The young Jeff Johnson attended the Garland High School and Trinity Park School in Durham, and enrolled at Trinity College in 1919. Originally he planned a business career, graduating with an A.B. degree in the class of 1922, but later he switched to law and returned to Trinity to study under the late Dr. Samuel Fox Mordecai. The admiration he had for this great teacher, plus a gamecock determination to succeed, inspired him to lead the class of 1926 in scholarship, followed closely by Fred C. Owen, '26, of Durham, and Bryce R. Holt, '23, A.M. '24, of Greensboro, who is now U. S. Attorney for the Middle North Carolina District.

To defray his college expenses, Justice Johnson worked as representative of a clothing store and boarding house, secretary of the Trinity College Athletic Association, taught school for a year, and played semi-professional baseball during the summers.

He was a stellar first baseman for the Trinity College nine, and, in his senior year, was a member of the team that won State and Southern Conference championships. Later, after turning down an offer to join Pittsburgh's farm-club at Wichita, Kansas, in the Western League, he played on various semi-professional teams in the Carolinas and in Mississippi. He declined an offer to manage the Meridian Club in the Cotton States League in 1926 in favor of continuing his law studies.

Three of his former teammates at Trinity are now city school superintendents: J. O. Sanderson, '24, of Raleigh; L. E. Spikes, '24, M.Ed. '34, of Burlington; and Charles F. Carroll, Jr., '21, M.Ed. '30, of High Point. Other friends and teammates included Joseph E. "Smokey Joe" Caviness, '22 (who pitched with a World War I bullet in his chest), of Lillington; Fred Folger, '23, of Mt. Airy; Neal Salmon, '20, of Lillington; and L. B. Hathaway, '21, of Winston-Salem, who is now president of the Physical Education Directors of the Carolinas.

In 1926 Justice Johnson began his law practice at Clinton. Two years later he was town attorney, a job he held for 13 years. He was also chairman of the Sampson County Board of Elections for six years.

Justice Johnson was married to the former Miss Virginis Frances Faison in 1935. Mrs. Johnson, a graduate of the Womau's College of the University of North Carolina, was at that time a school teacher. They now have three children: Frances Faison, 13, Mary Lily, 11, and Jeff, III, nine.

Justice and Mrs. Johnson make their home at 304 Main St., Clinton, in a large, comfortable century-old house. They attend the Methodist Church, where Mrs. Johnson takes an active leadership and where he is chairman of the board of trustees and former chairman of the board of stewards. Justice Johnson is also a member of such groups as the American Legion, of which he was a former Post commander, Masons, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu Phi legal fraternity, Red Friars, Tomhs, and Omicron Delta Kappa.

The new associate justice relaxes from his legal duties by reading widely of history and biography and listening to good music. An occasional hunt and quiet family diversions make up the rest of what little leisure time he has.

Benjamin F. Few, '15, has been named President of Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co., effective February 1, 1951. A Director and senior Vice-President of the Company with which he has been associated since 1916, Mr. Few succeeds J. W. Andrews who is retiring.

Mr. Few is a trustee of the University and National Chairman of our Development Campaign.

California Senator Is a Duke Alumnus

Senator Richard Milhous Nixon, LL.B. '37, adds a strong voice to the 1951 United States Senate after recently defeating Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas in the California senatorial race. He joins Senator Knowland to give the Republicans both seats from a large and fast-growing state that will have an important voice in the 1952 presidential campaign.

During his two terms in the House of Representatives from 1946 to 1950, Senator Nixon was credited with being a vigorous fighter for a thorough-going inquiry into the influences of Communism in the government. Perhaps his biggest achievement was breaking the Hiss-Chambers case by issuing a subpoena leading to discovery of the famous "pumpkin papers." This was accomplished when he was a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. He also figured in pressing prosecution of eleven Communist leaders and Judith Coplon. Recently he succeeded in getting Lee Pressman to testify before the committee.

The only California Representative to receive two committee appointments at the same time during the session, Senator Nixon also served on the Education-Labor Committee. In this capacity he played a considerable part in drafting and supporting the Taft-Hartley Bill. He was regarded as advocating a consistently "middle-of-the-road" approach and fought the Truman administration's "Fair Deal" program. He also served on the Herter Foreign Aid Committee.

"Capital Cloakroom"

North Carolina Democratic Senator Willis Smith, '10, Duke University Trustee, and California Republican Senator Richard M. Nixon, LL.B. '37, were recent guests on the major network radio program "Capital Cloakroom." By interviewing members of the legislature, the program attempts to inform the listening audience of personal views and activities of the men the nation sends to Washington. Mr. Smith and Mr. Nixon, two of Duke's outstanding contributions to the political field, were among a small group of new Senators interviewed on the program. They each outlined some of their opinions on the world situation and what they think should be done about current international problems.

On November 7, 1950, election day, California's new United States Senator Richard M. Nixon, LL.B. '37, Mrs. Nixon, and their two daughters, Julie and Tricia, went to the polls in Whittier, Calif. The election resulted in victory for Senator Nixon over his opponent Helen Gahagan Douglas.

In 1948 Richard Nixon was chosen by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce as one of the 10 outstanding young men of the entire country.

In the bitter California election campaign, Senator Nixon emphasized his work with the House committee and charged that Mrs. Douglas followed the Communist Party line in voting against the group. The substantial majority he obtained over Mrs. Douglas, who ran with powerful Administration and Labor backing, indicated the effectiveness of his appeal.

Senator Nixon's start in politics was itself something of happenstance, and certainly a curious one in the great game of seeking public office. In 1945, a committee of 100 persons in California's 12th district, which includes 24 medium-to-small towns east of Los Angeles, advertised for a candidate to run for Congress on the Republican ticket.

The gesture afforded amusement, and aroused derision on the part of politicians. Not a bit daunted, Mr. Nixon, then 32 and still in the Navy, answered the advertisement, became the candidate, and defeated Democratic Representative Voorhees by a substantial majority. In 1948 he polled 86.9 per cent of the vote after receiving, under California's cross-filing system, both the Republican and Democratic nominations.

The new Senator, son of a California citrus grower, was born in Yorba Linda, Calif. He graduated from Whittier College and Duke Law School, and practiced law in Whittier, Calif., from 1937 until 1942.

Although Richard Nixon was of Quaker parentage, he waived Quaker immunity in the last war, and saw duty in the South Pacific, earning two battle stars and attaining the rank of lieutenant commander in the Navy.

In 1940, Senator Nixon was married to Patricia Ryan. They have two daughters, Julie and Tricia. The Senator's younger brother, Edward C. Nixon, is now a junior at Duke University.

Duke Well Represented On State Legislature

The 1951 General Assembly of North Carolina boasts sixteen Duke alumni in its membership. Five of the 50 Senators received their education at Duke, as did eleven of the 120 Representatives. Two more legislators are husbands of Duke alumnae, one is the son of an alumnus, and one is the father of an alumnus.

Returning from the previous Senate is Sam Campen, '10, Pamlico. Joseph T. Carruthers, Jr., '29, LL.B. '32, Guilford, has also had previous senatorial experience.

Among the new Senators are Thomas B. Sawyer, '38, Durham; James P. Lowder, '16, Stanly; and E. T. Bost, Jr., LL.B. '33, Cabarrus.

Representatives who are returning from the last session are Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, Greene; Lee Whitmire, '20, Henderson; and Fred S. Royster, '30, Vance.

Others who have had previous experience in the House of Representatives are

S. E. Burgess, '34, Camden; Bruce Ethridge, '99, Dare; and Oscar Barker, '23, Durham.

Paul G. Stoner, LL.B. '31, Davidson; Richard T. Sanders, LL.B. '39, Durham; David H. Henderson, '35, LL.B. '37, Mecklenburg; B. I. Satterfield, '22, Person; and W. N. Ireland, '29, Yadkin, are new Representatives.

James H. Pou Bailey, Wake Senator who has had previous senatorial experience, is the husband of Fiquet Pate Bailey, '44. Croquette Williams Hewlett, '33, is the wife of Addison Hewlett, Jr., Representative from New Hanover.

Another new Representative is Howard O. Woltz, Jr., son of Howard O. Woltz, Sr., '21. F. L. Gobble, Sr., father of Dr. F. L. Gobble, Jr., '41, is a new Senator from Forsyth.

Price Control Assistant

William H. Tate, '34, Chicago, Ill., and Washington, D. C. attorney, has begun his new duties as special assistant to Michael V. DiSalle, director of price stabilization, with offices in Washington.

Mr. Tate, who was formerly attorney for the federal alcohol control administration in Washington and Chicago, has been admitted to the Bars of Illinois, Indiana, District of Columbia, and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mrs. Tate is the former Ruth Hart, '35. They have three children.

New Shell Oil Department

W. M. Upchurch, Jr., '31, LL.B. '36, is the manager of the recently formed Employee Publications Department in Shell Oil Company's head office in New York City. The new department was created in recognition of the steadily increasing importance of providing informational and educational material to all Shell employees.

Mr. Upchurch joined the Shell Development Company as personnel director in 1942. Until that time he was director of the Duke Appointments Office and of Student Activities as well as manager of Quadrangle Pictures. Mr. Upchurch served in all three capacities at the same time. His former duties have since been broken down into two separate jobs. During one summer, he also directed the Chapel Choir.

In 1944, Mr. Upchurch left the Shell position to enter the Navy. After returning in 1946, he worked in the Personnel Department of the Shell Development Company until the time of his new assignment with the Employee Publications Department.

Service Addresses Please!

The Alumni Office is eager to keep up with all alumni in the armed forces, even though it involves frequent changes. Please keep them informed.

Christmas cards were sent to all alumni in the armed forces in the Pacific area for whom the office had addresses. The following letters give some idea of what this sort of thing means to the alumni.

I appreciated your card very much and got a lot of pleasure out of showing my friends the photograph of the Chapel. It's awfully comforting to be remembered by friends back home; for as you can guess, Christmas here is rather dismal except for the thoughtful remembrances such as yours.

Please give my very best regards to all my friends back at Duke. I hope that perhaps the New Year will see my return.

Lt. (jg) Grover S. Patterson, MC USNR 497961, M.D. '47
Hq Co, 1st Engr. Bn., 1st Marine Div., FMF
F. P. O., San Francisco, Calif.

I received your Christmas greeting and the beautiful Chapel night scene brought back many cherished memories.

So far, I haven't run into any Duke friends here in the 1st Marine Division, though there probably are some from the Marine V-12 program.

We landed at Incheon on September 15 and captured Seoul. From there, we reloaded and landed at Wonsan, proceeding to Hamburg and then to the Chosin Reservoir. I was not among the encircled Marines, having returned to Hamburg three days prior to the attack. We left Hungnam by sea and ended up here.

The Marines form a wonderful fighting outfit. Fortunately, our own Engineer casualties have been light thus far.

I'll certainly be glad to get back to civilization and my wife and daughter.

I'd appreciate any alumni news you can send. I get the Medical Alumni News.

Dr. Harvill Is President of University of Arizona

One Duke University graduate has succeeded another to the presidency of the University of Arizona.

Dr. Richard A. Harvill, A.M. '27, former member of the Duke economics faculty, will assume the post of president next July. He will succeed J. Byron McCormick, S.J.D. '33, who has resigned the presidency to return to his professorship in the University of Arizona Law School. Dr. Harvill was unanimously appointed by the state board of regents to fill the new post.

A graduate (with distinction) of Mississippi State College in 1926, he received his doctorate at Northwestern University in 1932.

His teaching career has included instructorships in economics at Mississippi State, and in economics and business administration at Duke. Dr. Harvill went to the University of Arizona in 1934 as assistant professor of economics, and after serving as visiting professor of economics at the University of Buffalo in 1937-38, he remained there in an assistant professorship until 1939 when he returned to Arizona as associate professor of economics.

In 1942-43 he was assistant district price executive in the Office of Price Administration at Phoenix; from 1943 to 1946 he was district price executive in the same office.

Dr. Harvill returned to the University of Arizona campus for the third time in 1946 as dean of the graduate college and professor of economics. In 1947 he was named to his present post of dean of liberal arts.

Mrs. Harvill is the former Geroge Lee Garner, A.M. '30, and they live at 1326 East Mabel Street, Tucson, Ariz.

Bishop Garber Succeeds Retiring Bishop Peele

Bishop Paul Neff Garber, former Duke University Divinity School dean, will become administrative head of the North Carolina and Virginia conferences of the Methodist Church on February 15 with the retirement of Bishop William Walter Peele, '03, from the post. Bishop Peele is relinquishing his duties because of ill health.

Although he will perform no official duties in connection with the Richmond area, Bishop Peele will remain on the active list of bishops until he is due for compulsory retirement because of age when the Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference of the Methodist Church meets in Roanoke in July, 1952. A native of Gibson, N. C., Bishop Peele was assigned to the Richmond area when he first was elected a bishop in 1938.

For the past six years, Bishop Garber has spent most of his time in turbulent postwar Europe as chief of the 13-nation Geneva area. Barred from much of his official territory in Central and Southern Europe, he will continue to hold the post of bishop at Geneva while serving here as the acting head of the Richmond area.

Bishop Garber taught church history at the Duke Divinity School before serving as dean from 1941 to 1944. Ordained as a Methodist minister in 1926, he was elected bishop in 1944 and assigned to the Geneva area. He is a former pastor of Trinity Methodist Church in Durham.

Alumni Affairs Assistant

Thomas D. Donegan has replaced C. Heber Smith, '43, who recently resigned, as assistant to Charles A. Dukes, '29, director of Alumni Affairs, and as advertising manager of the Duke ALUMNI REGISTER.

Mr. Donegan has been doing work toward his masters degree in history at Duke. He is a veteran of World War II, having served as a Captain in the United States Army. Mr. Donegan, his wife, and their six-year-old son, Tommy, are living in the Westover Park Apartments, B-1, Durham.

College Honors Louis Jaffe

The entire October issue of the Trojan Echo, magazine of the Norfolk Division of Virginia State College for Negroes, was dedicated to the memory of Louis I. Jaffe, '11, because of his great interest in the growth of the college.

Mr. Jaffe, editor of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, died of a heart attack last March 12 at the Norfolk General Hospital. He was a national figure in the newspaper profession, and devoted much of his time to the advancement of the principles and practice of freedom, opportunity and education.

A $10,000 Louis I. Jaffe Scholarship Fund has been started by the college to perpetuate his memory. It was felt that Mr. Jaffe himself would prefer this to a floral tribute.

Bethune, Jr., '48, member of the nominating committee.

Cage Team Starts Impressive Season

Running through a racehorse schedule in its first season under the leadership of Coach Harold Bradley, the Duke University varsity basketball team has looked impressive.

The Duke outfit has clinched a spot in the hearts of the basketball fans of the Duke campus and surrounding territory. In its first home outing, the Blue Devils tied nationally ranking N. C. State 67-67 at the end of the regulation game, then dropped a 77-71 decision in an overtime period.

While the Blue Devils were expected to have a fair-to-good team, play at times thus far in the season has been nothing less than sensational. Biggest factor in the success of the team has been the brilliant play of junior guard Dick Groat. Through the North Carolina State game of January 6, Groat had scored no less than 314 points in 13 games.

Four times this season Groat has broken the Duke record for most points scored in a single game. Prior to this season the record was 30, tallied by All-America Ed Koffenberger in 1947. Groat scored 31 points against Hanes Hosiery in the first game this season to break that mark, then rebroke the record with 34 points against Washington and Lee. His 36 points against N. C. State reset the mark.

Besides Groat, the most outstanding players for the Blue Devils have been Capt. Scotty York, a much improved cavorter at guard; Dick Crowder, John Engberg, and Bill Fleming, junior forwards; Keston Deimling, the best sophomore on the squad, who plays forward and center; Dayton Allen and Jim "Red" Kulpan, both junior centers; and Dick Johnson, a sophomore guard.

The Blue Devils opened the season with a 76-71 win over Hanes Hosiery, then followed with a 72-60 win over the McCrary Eagles. Both of these teams downed the Devils last fall. Groat led the scoring against Hanes with 31, while Crowder dropped 15 points. Against McCrary, John Engberg was the top scorer with 15 points, while Dick Groat and Scotty York each had 14.

Duke scored a 20-point win over Virginia in its first match against college opposition December 9. Groat again was top scorer with 20 tallies.

In games played in Virginia Military Institute's new gym the following weekend, the Duke crew remained unbeaten in five contests by downing V. M. I. 86-66 and Washington and Lee 97-69. The lopsided win over W. and L. constituted the most points ever scored by a Duke basketball team in a single game.

The sensational Groat was the top scorer in both of the games played at Lexington, Va. He tallied 27 points against Virginia Military Institute, then sauk a record-breaking 34 points against Washington and Lee. In his performance against the latter outfit, Groat dropped 14 of 15 free throw attempts and had connected on eleven straight at halftime. Dick Crowder was runner-up against the Generals with 26 points.

On December 22, Duke made it six games without defeat by edging George Washington at Washington 70-67. The Devils froze the ball the final three minutes of play. Groat led the scoring with 21 points, while Center Dayton Allen had 13 and Keston Deimling, soph forward, had 11.

The following night against the nation's No. 1 team, Bradley University, at Peoria, Ill., Duke dropped its first game by 93-58. Groat again was top scorer, this time getting 26 points against the Bradley powerhouse.

The Devils dropped an 84-69 decision to Colgate on opening night, but came back to trounce North Carolina 71-63 on the second day and pull the biggest surprise of the entire tourney by beating Tulane University 72-71 on the final day of the tourney. The surprising part of the Tulane game was that Duke trailed by 29 points at halftime and at one time during the contest trailed by 32 points. Dick Groat, by scoring 32 points against Tulane, copped the tourney scoring championship with a total of 71 tallies. He marked up 16 points against Colgate and 23 against rival Carolina.

Apparently tired from a tough schedule, the Devils dropped their next three engagements. Canisius won 69-57 on New Year's Day in a game played at Buffalo, N. Y. and two days later against Penn, the Quakers won 85-76. Against Canisius Groat took off high scoring honors with 11, but it was his poorest night's work of the season. Deimling and York were runners-up in the scoring against Canisius with ten points apiece. Against Pennsylvania, Groat was high scorer with 23, while sub center Jim "Red" Kulpan was runner-up with 15.

The loss to N. C. State was the most heart-breaking of the season. Duke led by eight points near the end—the Devils' first lead of the game—but the State crew tied the count at 67-67 with less than a minute to go and the score ended that way. State won easily 77-71 in the overtime period. Duke fans had one consolation out of the loss, however. In that, their Dick Groat outscored Sam Rauzino, the State ace, 36 to 32.

A field goal from near mid-court by Captain Scotty York with only ten seconds left in the game gave the Blue Devils their winning margin in a 60-58 victory over South Carolina. Dick Groat led the Duke scoring with 21 points, while Dick Crowder had nine and Red Kulpan had eight. Slim Jim Slaughter, six feet, eleven inch center, paced the South Carolina scoring by ringing 34 points.

Duke won another thriller at home on January 13 by edging West Virginia 77-73 as Groat again led the Duke individual scoring by hooping 28 points, including ten free throws. West Virginia's high man was big Mark Workman, six-nine center, who sank 22 tallies.

Duke was upset by a scrappy band of William and Mary Indians in their last game prior to exams. William and Mary won 74-57 on its home court, sophomore forward Bill Chambers leading the upset by sinking 28 points. Duke's high scorer was Groat again, but he was held to 16 points. Bill Fleming had 12 points and runner-up honors for Duke.

Death of Coach Gerard Mourned by Many

The death of Kenneth C. (Gerry) Gerard on January 17 was mourned by the entire University community and by the hundreds of alumni who were counted among his many friends.

"Gerry" Gerard relinquished his post as cage coach just this year to take a leave of absence due to ill health. For many months he had been under the constant care of a physician and for the past few weeks he had been in a critical condition.

The death of the popular coach, who was also one of the South's top athletic officials, occasioned sincere and glowing tribute to his fine character and splendid sportsmanship in newspapers throughout the region of the Southern Conference. The attention devoted by newspapers to his death and past career was a profound testimony of Gerry's multitude of friends and the esteem in which he was always held.

Twice during the past three years, as Blue Devil cage coach, Gerard took teams that were plagued by ill luck and a lack of material into the finals of the Southern Conference Basketball Tournament, and won for himself honors as Conference Coach of the Year. Although during his eight years at the helm of the Blue Devil eagles he won two conference championships and went to the tournament finals six times, these last three years gave unimpeachable evidence of his courage and will to fight.

For during these last years recurrent illness and a major operation created constant fear that "Gerry" might never recover from the ailment that eventually caused his death.

Typical of the tribute paid him throughout the South were these remarks by his University colleagues:

President Hollis Edens said, "Coach Gerard lived and worked in the highest tradition of good sportsmanship and his quiet courage and innate goodness won the respect of those who knew him."

"Gerry Gerard's colleagues everywhere have lost a good and great friend," E. M. Cameron, director of athletics said. "On or off the playing fields he was always the 'good sport.' He was never too busy to do a favor or pass along a kind word. He was always the good friend, and in consequence his friends were legion."

Southern Conference Commissioner and former Duke football coach, Wallace Wade said: "It has rarely been my fortune to have worked and lived with such a man. His life is an example to all of us and the people of this region and all over the Nation will never forget him."

Funeral services were held in the Duke University Chapel on January 18, with Dr. H. E. Spence, professor of Biblical Literature, and Professor James T. Cleland, preacher to the University, officiating. Assisting were the Reverend R. E. Brown and the Reverend Kelsey Regeu. Interment was in the new section of Maplewood Cemetery.

Born at Mishawaka, Ind., on July 14, 1903, Gerard was an outstanding athlete in high school there. He entered the University of Illinois in the fall of 1925, and soon became a star at track and football. He was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Dick Crowder Chosen Athlete of the Week

A record number of West Virginia rebounds and a substantial contribution of points and rebounds in the South Carolina game won the Greensboro Daily News Athlete of the Week award for Dick Crowder recently.

In these days of the high scoring players, those boys who score less than 20 points in a game often find themselves in the "also played" sentences of basketball reports. But Dick took at least half of the 36 rebounds the Blue Devils snared in the West Virginia game, which ended 77-73 in Duke's favor. According to many observers, this turned the tide in the important Southern Conference contest, for

He was graduated with a B.S. degree in physical education from Illinois in 1928. After coaching for a year at Athens (Pa.) High School, he returned to Illinois as an instructor in physical education. In 1931 he came to Duke as an instructor in physical education and as director of intramural athletics.

He established at Duke an intramural athletic program that is now ranked as one of the best in the nation. In 1935 he organized and coached the first Duke soccer team, and in 1943 he became basketball coach when Coach Eddie Cameroun moved up as athletic director and wartime head football coach.

Gerry's success in basketball was phenomenal. In eight years, his Duke teams went to the finals of the Southern Conference tournaments six times and won two championships. He was named "Coach of the Year" twice during the last three seasons.

He was made an honorary member of the Duke Chapter of ODK, national leadership fraternity.

Coach Gerard was past president of the Southern Conference Football Officials Association and was rated the number one football referee in the Conference. He officiated at Conference basketball games before he began coaching, and was in great demand as a track official. He also did play-by-play radio announcing of basketball games.

In 1935, Coach Gerard married Ellen Moses, '29, of Norfolk, Va., who survives. Other survivors are his two daughters, Joan, 14, and Nauey, 7; his mother, Mrs. W. C. Gerard, of Mishawaka, Ind.; a sister, Mrs. William L. Pippenger, of Mishawaka; and a niece, Carol Pippenger, of Mishawaka.

West Virginia's ace Mark Workman gets most of his points with tap-ins and under-the-basket shots.

Harold Bradley, Duke basketball coach, said: "Crowder's fine play, especially in getting the ball off the defensive backboard, helped immeasurably in the victory over West Virginia. If he continues to play as well as that he will be one of our most valuable men."

Dick's scoring average was not bad during the week either, for he made 18 points against West Virginia, and nine against South Carolina. He took 10 rebounds in the 60-58 conquest of the South Carolina team.

A six-foot, 195-pounder, Dick Crowder comes from High Point, N. C. He is secretary of the men's student government at Duke, and is a pre-ministerial student.

Three Executive Posts

Three members of the English department have been named to executive posts in the South Atlantic Modern Language Association.

Dr. R. Florence Brinkley, dean of the Woman's College and professor of English, was named chairman of the English Section. Dr. Francis E. Bowman, associate professor, was elected president of the Section on Teaching of English, and Dr. Lewis Leary, professor of American Literature, was elected secretary of the American Literature Section.

Dr. Crum Elected to ODK

Dr. Mason Crum, associate professor of Biblical literature, has been elected to membership in the South Carolina Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honor society.

Dr. Crum, a native of South Carolina, is well known in the field of religious education and a frequent contributor to leading periodicals. He is also the author of a number of works including Gullah: A Story of Negro Life in the Caroline Sea Islands, The Project Method in Religious Education, and The Story of Lake Junaluska.

Dr. Sponer Presents Paper at Cambridge

Dr. Hertha Sponer, professor of physics, presented a paper on electronic levels in naphthalene at a meeting of the Faraday Society at Cambridge University, England, during a recent tour of Europe.

Collaborating with Dr. Sponer in preparation of the paper was the late Dr. Gertrude P. Nordheim, former Duke part-time instructor in physics and wife of Dr. Lothar W. Nordheim, professor of physics.

During the tour, Dr. Sponer lectured at universities in Lund, and Stockholm, Sweden, and Uppsala in Norway.

Grant Awarded Dr. Kempner

Dr. Walter Kempner, associate professor of medicine and noted specialist in the rice diet treatment for high blood pressure, has been awarded a $40,949 research grant.

The funds will be used for continued research by Dr. Kempner and his associates in studies of hypertension and diseases causing hardening of the arteries.

The U. S. Public Health Service made the award on the recommendation of the National Advisory Heart Council.

Placement Association Head

Miss Fannie Y. Mitchell, director of the Appointments Office, was recently elected president of the Southern College Placement Officers' Association for the coming year.

Miss Mitchell and other officers were elected as the Association ended its fourth annual convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

Dr. Proctor Resigns as Education Head

Dr. Arthur M. Proctor, '10, professor of education, recently resigned as acting chairman of the Department of Education because of ill health, and Dr. John W. Carr, Jr., '15, was appointed to succeed him.

In speaking of Dr. Proctor's resignation, Dr. Edens said, "The weight of his many duties made it necessary for Dr. Proctor to ask relief. Fortunately he has agreed to remain on as professor of education." Dr. Proctor has been a member of the Duke staff since 1923.

Dr. Carr, who has been on the faculty since 1926, has assumed two other posts in addition to his duties as acting chairman: director of graduate studies in the department and assistant director of the Summer Session.

The new chairman, a specialist in the field of child education and a frequent and well-known contributor to national education journals and other publications, was principal of the Advance and West Durham Schools before coming to Duke. He also served as superintendent of the Schools of Durham County from 1920-24.

Arts Council Receives $5,000

A gift of $5,000 from an anonymous benefactor for improved art exhibition facilities was announced recently by Mrs. Calvin B. Hoover, president of the Duke Arts Council.

The money will be used to replace inadequate gallery lighting and provide the latest, ultra-modern fluorescent lighting fixtures. According to Dr. Katharine E. Gilbert, professor of philosophy and chairman of the Department of Aesthetics, Art, and Music, present lighting provides only 20 per cent of the illumination necessary to show the paintings to best advantage.

In addition to improved lighting, the gift will provide for the installation of six metal and glass constructed museum cases. These will be used to exhibit ceramics and textile art, old manuscripts and other similar objects. Special locks will safeguard valuables lent for display.

A number of major events are scheduled by the Council for the coming months. On February 2 there will be an exhibit of water color paintings by the modern Swiss artist Paul Klee. At the time of his death, several years ago, Mr. Klee had gained world renown as one of the greatest of modern painters. His works are highly valued by connoisseurs. The Council's exhibit will consist of a number of the artist's works loaned by Dr. Joseph A. McClain, Dean of the School of Law. Other Klee water colors will be supplied by Yale University and the Phillips Gallery, Washington.

The Arts Council is sponsoring a concert in April by two nationally known vocalists: Miss Norma Heyde, soprano, of the University of Michigan, and William Hess, tenor, of New York City. They will be accompanied by the Duke Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Allan H. Bone, assistant professor of music.

Du Pont Awards Fellowship

Duke University, along with several other institutions in the country, has been awarded a post-graduate fellowship in chemistry by E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, Inc., of Wilmington, Del.

Selection of candidates for fellowships and choice of projects are left up to the universities receiving the awards. Each of the post-graduate fellowships provides $1,400 for a single person or $2,100 for a married person, together with an award of $1,200 to the university for the next academic year.

Granting of the fellowships continues a company plan to encourage graduate research in chemistry. It has been extended to take in several other fields also. The du Pont Company has made 78 post-graduate awards and post-doctoral fellowships to 47 universities, and grants-in-aid to 10 universities to "stock-pile" knowledge through the advancement of fundamental research. It is expected that the program will help maintain the flow of technically trained men and women into teaching and research work at universities and into technical positions in industry.

Unique Chapel View

This latest aerial photograph featuring a new angle of view of the Gothic beauty which characterizes the Duke University Chapel has been presented to the University by Mr. Wyman Viall.

An aerial photographer from Raleigh, N. C., Mr. Viall made the oil tinted print, a 20 by 24 inch mount in a gold 34 by 36 inch frame, which now hangs over the fireplace in the West Campus Union lobby.

The picture offers a different artistic perspective of the qualities of height, massiveness and disposition, and emphasizes the cruciform plan, formed by the transepts and nave, that is typical of medieval European ecclesiastical architecture.

Each new Chapel picture is in some way different, in some way displays another aspect of the intricate grandeur of the structure.

Alumni who desire copies of the photograph may obtain information about them by writing to Mr. Wyman Viall, Aeropix, 8½ West Hargett Street, Raleigh, N. C.

FRIENDS OF GOD

By Costen J. Harrell, '06, D.D. '40.
Abingdon-Cokesbury Press.

Dr. Harrell, '06, D.D. '40, bishop of the Charlotte, N. C., area of the Methodist Church, has published a new edition of his many inspirational observations in Friends of God. The book, consisting of 43 brief meditations, each followed by a prayer, was brought out on September 5.

Bishop Harrell deprecates the tendency "to excuse sin by explaining it." He points out that excuses do not excuse, stating: "Of late we have become experts in this business. Some of our false modern prophets are telling us with an air of superiority that our behavior is chargeable to our inheritance; that we are caught in the stream of life and are no more responsible for what we do than driftwood on a river."

He goes on to say, "Faddists are disposed to attribute all evil deeds and tendencies to physical disorders. But how account for the fact that the physically whole are sometimes moral reprobates? Others excuse the wrongdoer on the ground of unfavorable environment. And yet profligates and criminals come out of godly homes, as the rankest weeds grow in the richest soil. Or perhaps weak sentimentalism dulls our moral sense. We pity the culprit until he becomes a martyr in our eyes. We sentimentalize the fallen and weave their sins into a romance. But 'all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten' the hand of a murderer, nor all our maudlin tears change a wrong into a right."

Dr. Harrell also holds degrees from Vanderbilt University and Randolph-Macon College, and is a trustee at Emory University. In more than 40 years of service he has held pastorates in Virginia, Georgia, and Tennessee.

Among Bishop Harrell's other books are The Way of the Transgressor, The Radiant Heart, The Prophets of Israel, In the School of Prayer, The Bible: Its Origin and Growth, and The Word of His Grace.

FRUITS OF FAITH

Costen J. Harrell, '06, D.D. '40, and Mack B. Stokes, B.D. '35, contributors.
Abingdon-Cokesbury Press.

Two Duke alumni, Bishop Costen J. Harrell, '06, D.D. '40, and Mack B. Stokes, B.D. '35, are among the authors of an important new book, Fruits of Faith, a comprehensive symposium edited by J. Richard Spann and published on September 5.

Dr. Harrell, bishop of the Charlotte, N. C., area of the Methodist Church, and Mr. Stokes, professor of theology, Emory University, are members of a panel of 18 outstanding writers who pooled many years' experience in the fields of preaching, teaching, counseling, church and college administration, prison reform, and labor relations to write a volume on the unequalled impact of Christianity on world culture.

The theme of the book is well expressed in the words of John Frederick Olson, professor at Syracuse University: "Christianity is a creed for heroes. . . . Centuries of experience have only deepened Christian confidence. There have been those who were despairing and hopeless—as for example, Jerome, who, from the security of a Palestinian monastery, watched the Roman Empire collapse. But more courageous souls have formed our faith . . . heroic realists ready in the face of apparent disaster to call for a city of God, raised on the ashes of the past."

The book is divided into three sections on: (1) The Faith, (2) Fruits in the Individual, and (3) Fruits in Society.

THE UNITED STATES: A SURVEY OF NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ronald Press

Dr. Hugh T. Lefler, '21, A.M. '22, is co-author of a new history, The United States: A Survey of National Development, just published by The Ronald Press.

Dr. Lefler, who for some years headed the Department of History at North Carolina State College, is professor of History at the University of North Carolina.

The United States is a textbook for college courses in American History. It is characterized not only by expert synthesis and interpretation, but by an abundance of detailed factual information. It will be useful on the shelves of the alumnus as well as in the classroom of the undergraduate.

A historian of substantial reputation, Dr. Lefler has published numerous works in his field. They include The Papers of Walter Clark and The Growth of North Carolina. At present he is engaged in compiling the records of the vice-admiralty court of colonial North Carolina, an undertaking commissioned by the American Historical Association.

NINETEEN MILLION ELEPHANTS AND OTHER POEMS

By Helen Smith Bevington
Houghton Mifflin

Mrs. Helen Smith Bevington, assistant professor of English, has recently published a lighthearted collection of sophisticated verse. Gay and gracious, the poems contain a kind of intellectual playfulness that is usually light in texture but often deep and very literate.

She comments on diverse subjects ranging from witty reflections on eighteenth century literary figures to personal and serious recollections of her childhood. There are poems of airplane flights at night, landscapes, and scholars; there is a girl in a jeep and a homesick child in a railroad car. Whether it is the eccentricities of Sam Johnson, the Third Avenue "L," or "19 Million Elephants," the dextrous Mrs. Bevington handles all with equal felicity.

Mrs. Bevington, who is the author of a previous book of humorous verse entitled Dr. Johnson's Waterfall and Other Poems, has taught English at Duke since 1943.

SOUTH AMERICAN IMPRESSIONS

By Dr. Juan Castellano
Appleton-Century-Croft

Dr. Juan Castellano, associate professor of Romance Languages, has written a true-to-life account of a trip by jeep from one end of South America to the other. Composed in Spanish especially for the use of intermediate language students in college, the narrative is mostly in dialogue form and is both amusing and informative in its description of South America.

The book is a personal chronicle of Dr. Castellano's adventures on a journey taken in 1947 with a friend, Dr. George N. Mayhew, from Vanderbilt University. Traveling from Caracas, Venezuela, the two professors motored some 8,000 miles through Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, and Argentina. Their experiences ranged from misunderstandings with the Venezuelan customs officials to the problem of obtaining automobile tires in remote localities.

Stressing idiomatic Spanish of value to students, the book contains a vocabulary and exercises by Mrs. Marjorie Carter Dillingham, a former Duke faculty member. Tentative plans have been made for publication of a popularized English translation.

THE LIGHTS OF HOME

By John Cline, '17, A.M. '40, Ph.D. '48

The Reverend John Cline, '17, A.M. '40, Ph.D. '48, of Carthage, N. C., has published a book of his own poetry. The Lights of Home contains 300 poems on as many different subjects.

The title poem is indicative of the general contents of the book. It deals with the simple yet meaningful joys of home as a haven of rest, a pillar of strength, a luring light to guide in the darkness, a forecast of permanent happiness in a future home. A perusal of the table of contents indicates the widespread interests which are treated: Faith and Wisdom, Neighborly Chats, October Days, Palaces of Prayer, Excuse-Makers, and hundreds of others dealing with almost every phase of the manifold interests of life.

The book has the rather odd arrangement of publishing the poems as they were written chronologically, rather than by topics. Since the book is to a great extent the expression of Dr. Cline's reactions to life, it is quite fitting that this arrangement should be followed since it shows the ripening wisdom and maturing reactions of the author.

The reader is able to look through Dr. Cline's eyes at life's simple, beautiful and glorious experiences and feel with the author the emotions which a minister feels as he enters into partnership with both his people and his Maker in interpreting life. The book should provide thoroughly enjoyable reading.

THE ARMY AIR FORCES IN WORLD WAR II

By Dr. Richard L. Watson
University of Chicago Press

Dr. Richard L. Watson, assistant professor of history, is a major contributor to the fourth volume of the projected seven-volume war history, The Army Air Forces in World War II, just released by the University of Chicago Press. The history is a comprehensive account of Air Force organization, war plans, and development of new equipment, as well as combat operations.

Dr. Watson, who was a major in the Army Air Force Historical Division serving as project director of research on the history of the war in the Southwest Pacific area, has written a four-chapter account of the air arm's part in the middle phase of the South and Southwest Pacific campaigns. Collaborating with Dr. Watson on one of the chapters was Kramer J. Rohlfisch of the history department at San Diego College, San Diego, Calif.

Another Duke faculty member, Dr. Arthur B. Ferguson, assistant professor of history, has written several chapters on strategic bombing for Volumes I and II of the Air Force history. Dr. Watson also contributed extensively to the first two volumes.

Co-editor of the project is Dr. Wesley Frank Craven, '26, A.M. '27, professor of history at Princeton University.

Before completing his course at the University of North Carolina, Dr. Cuninggim determined to enter the ministry of the Methodist Church, and studied at the Vanderbilt School of Theology. Obtaining his degree there, he returned to North Carolina to begin active preaching. He spent a summer in graduate work at the University of Chicago, and this extended into a four-year course at that institution.

While at the University of Chicago, Dr. Cuninggim wrote a pamphlet on better training for ministers through correspondence courses and other university extension methods. This so impressed Southern Methodists that it was decided to put his ideas into practice at Vanderbilt, and he was made head of the new work. Thus he inaugurated one of the first departments of religious education in the South. He remained in charge of this work until 1914, when he returned to North Carolina to preach. He later went to Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Tex., to inaugurate another religious education department there.

After a few years there, Dr. Cuninggim was made head of Searritt College, and he continued as president until his retirement in 1943.

In addition to his book The Family of God, Dr. Cuninggim was the author of other books of a religious nature.

He is survived by his widow; a daughter, Margaret Louise Cuninggim, '36, dean of women at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute; a son, Dr. A. Merrimon Cuninggim, A.M. '33, chairman of the department of religion at Pomona College; and three grandchildren.

RANDOLPH G. ADAMS

Randolph G. Adams, who died January 4 in Ann Arbor, Mich., is vividly remembered by a number of the alumni and faculty of Duke University. He taught history at Trinity College from 1920 to 1923, leaving to become director of the William L. Clements Library of American History at the University of Michigan.

In the short time he was at Duke, Dr. Adams made substantial contributions to the intellectual growth of the college. He and the late William K. Boyd, one of Duke's greatest library collectors, worked together with an enthusiasm which alone could have built up the remarkable library of manuscripts and newspapers. It was at Dr. Adams' instigation that the faculty instituted a student fee for the purpose of buying books for the library. The Library of Trinity College was thus insured of a steady income which was one of the factors enabling it to make the transition to a University Library on sure foundations.

The first book published by the Duke University Press was The Political Ideas of the American Revolution, written by Dr. Adams. He was also president of the Trinity College Historical Society in 1921 and 1922. He recast History 91, the basic course in American History, into the form in which it still exists—a form which rescued it from the dullness of the conventional textbook course in American History. Thus there are living monuments to Dr. Adams remaining, for which the University is indeed grateful.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

NUMBER 4 . . . THE PANDA

"Let's get down to bear facts!"

The sudden rash of quick-trick cigarette tests may have caused panda-monium on the campus—but our scholarly friend was unperturbed. He pondered the facts of the case and decided that one-puff or one-sniff tests

. . . single inhale and exhale comparisons are hardly conclusive. Proof of cigarette mildness doesn't come that fast! And that's exactly why we suggest . . .
THE SENSIBLE TEST—the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test which simply asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke—on a pack after pack, day after day basis. No snap judgments needed. After you've enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you'll know why . . .

452d Motor Vehicle Squadron

APO 75 Unit 1, c/o Postmaster
San Francisco, California

I wish to express my heart-felt appreciation for your timely Christmas Greetings card that reached me here at Miho Air Base, Honshu, Japan, shortly before December 25.

It is truly a pleasure to be able to keep in touch with former classmates through the medium of the ALUMNI REGISTER, and I always anticipate its coming with avid delight. Since my arrival in the Far East, I have been especially appreciative of its offerings.

Inasmuch as my father is an alumnus of old Trinity College, '92; my brother, Dr. James S. Bradsher, Jr., a graduate of "the Buffalo Class" of 1917; and I a short-timer with the class of '33, I feel very near to Duke University. I shall always love it and what it represents.

I am currently serving in a small capacity with the now renowned 452nd Bomb Wing. Ours is a largely reservist component, whose personnel are ninety-five per cent Los Angeles County Californians. We have a splendid organization and I am happy to contribute my small part to its laudable successes in the see-saw Korean campaign. Our continued stay in Japan will be determined by the turn of events in our struggle with Red China and the North Koreans.

William R. Rowland, '50

Sharon Hill, Pa.

May I thank you for your letter of the 28th of November, the basketball schedule, and the copies of the ALUMNI REGISTER which have finally arrived. Duke is to be congratulated for the latter—it is certainly one of the finest alumni publications that I have yet seen, and it serves its purpose well if it is intended to keep the University before the eyes of the graduate in such a manner as to make him feel he is still a part of it and it a part of him.

We have all 3 Types of Composition

WHEN setting type we give due consideration to the ultimate purpose . . . In deciding whether to use linotype, monotype or hand composition, we first ascertain the function of the particular piece of work. Each method was designed for a specific service, therefore initial cost is beside the question. We shall be glad to assist you in deciding which of the three will do the best job for your particular problem. Our composing room service is planned for today's demands.

Just Rambling

The new year has begun with as fast a tempo as has ever been experienced on the Duke Campus. Every member of the administration, faculty, and University community is conscious of the important place the Development Campaign is to play in Duke's future.

The greatest problem is the lack of hours and days in a week. However, it gives one a mighty good feeling to see how alumni, faculty, and students, of the University are joining to make the program a success.

William D. (Bill) Murray, '31, has been elected head football coach and he, along with the other members of his staff, is in the midst of spring practice. All of us here on the campus welcome Bill home and anticipate an outstanding football program under his direction as head coach. Wherever you go among the alumni these days you hear high praise that an alumnus has been elected to direct the destinies of football at Duke. To those of you who do not know Bill, you are in for a treat when you meet him. A man of high integrity, hard working and careful of detail, he recognizes the value of the fundamentals in any field and applies them in football. Once again, welcome home, Bill. Your fellow alumni wish you every success. You can count on them for the fullest cooperation.

Alumnae Week End is to be April 6, 7, and 8. This activity, under the direction of Miss Anne Garrard, gives promise of being the best ever held. Alumnae committees are busy making plans.

The campus is already beginning to show signs of Spring.

Faculty members are being called to serve in an advisory capacity to the government, and honors are coming to many of them for work in this connection:

Again we find ourselves having difficulty keeping up with alumni in the military services. If you know of a Duke alumnus any place in any branch of the service, please send us information about him.

Commencement is just around the corner. Officers of reunion classes have already appointed committees and are busy with preparations for the June reunion.

Local alumni groups are holding Spring meetings, many of which will be picnics or other outdoor affairs. Announcements about them will appear from time to time in subsequent issues of the REGISTER. In the event you are planning a trip, we would suggest your reading the REGISTER before leaving home, so that if you are in the vicinity of one of these meetings, you may attend.

The number of alumni stopping by the Alumni Office is increasing as the weather gets warmer. Visitors on the campus are always welcomed.

We are grateful for the newspaper clippings, photographs, changes of address, and other items that come to the Alumni Office from all over the country. Keep up the good work. This helps us do a better job and give better service to the alumni and the University.

Every so often we run across something that we feel deserves to be called to the attention of the alumni. On the editorial page of the February 3 Saturday Evening Post is a letter from a father to his son. We recommend it to young and old alike.

In the alumni section (see page 38) of the REGISTER this month is a letter written by an alumna to her newspaper editor in Cleveland, Ohio, in appreciation of an editorial which appeared in the Cleveland News. The editorial follows:

"Duke University at Durham, N. C., has gone out for a distinction for which few American colleges can compete. It has developed a carillon tower for the daily inspiration of its community by medieval bell tone, and for summons and celebration on great or festive occasions.

"The Duke carillon has been equipped with both manual and electric keyboard and, through the skill of its bellmaster, Anton Brees, brought from Belgium to develop the chimes and their music, has set out to rival the chimes of the famous Bok Tower at Lake Wales, Fla.

"With Mr. Brees at the console, the Duke carillon rang out for the invasion of Normandy, the rescue of Paris, the victorious end of the second World War, and various national anniversaries. He calls the tone of the bells 'a powerful spiritual voice from the sky' and believes Duke may partly revive the authenticity of chime signals over the living of people, as in Europe of the Middle Ages. It is a nice ambition."

We feel that this young lady did a service for Duke and her fellow alumni by writing her appreciation to the editor.

Let's look around us and take advantage of the opportunities to serve the University. They may be found in many places and clothed in many different ways.

Activities of Note on the Campus

Alumnae Week End

Breaking with a precedent of several years' standing Alumnae Week End this year will not take place during spring vacation, but will be held while students are on campus and engaged in their academic and extracurricular routines.

This change occurs at the request of many alumnae, who have expressed a desire to return to East Campus when the normal hustle, bustle, and rustle of the school year is in progress. This will afford an enjoyable opportunity to recapture, in all of its happy detail, the atmosphere of undergraduate life, these alumnae feel.

Dates of the annual event, the calendar's high spot for former women students, are Friday, Saturday, and Sunday—April 6, 7, and 8.

Earlier it was announced that a main speaker would be Dr. Gloria Wysner, consultant to the International Missionary Council in Association with the World Council of Churches. Regrettably, Dr. Wysner has been called out of the country during March, April, and May and had to cancel her scheduled appearance at Duke.

Other speakers, however, including at least one outstanding woman, will be announced soon.

The program for the Eighth Annual Alumnae Week End is as follows:

Friday, April 6

6:30 p.m.—Dinner in Woman's College Union, cafeteria style with students.

8:15 p.m.—Lecture in Woman's College Auditorium, speaker to be announced.

9:30 p.m.—Coffee hour in East Duke Building—one of two to give alumnae a chance for informal visits and relaxation.

Saturday, April 7

Most of the morning will be devoted to tours of the campus, with alumnae and students on hand to conduct tours and answer questions.

11:30 a.m.—Lecture by Dr. Marianna Jenkins, associate dean of undergraduate instruction and assistant professor of art, on "Are Modern 'Isms' Modern?"

1:00 p.m.—Luncheon and Alumnae Association meeting.

4:00-5:30 p.m.—Tea honoring senior classes of Woman's College and School of Nursing.

6:30 p.m.—Dinner in West Campus Union.

8:00 p.m.—Entertainment in Woman's College Auditorium, including modern dance, brass ensemble, and Madrigal Singers.

9:30 p.m.—Coffee hour in Woman's College Union.

Sunday, April 8

11:00 a.m.—Worship service, Duke Chapel, Dr. Ray C. Petry, professor of church history, preaching.

4:00 p.m.—Organ recital in Duke Chapel by Samuel Tilghman Morris, head of organ department, Hollins College.

Programs and registration blanks will be mailed to all alumnae in the very near future.

Engineers Show

The 19th annual Engineers Show, the third held in the new College of Engineering Building, is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 16 and 17.

Duke's engineers are accustomed to attracting large, even huge, crowds to these events, at which they put their building, their equipment, their knowledge, their professors, and even themselves on display.

These shows customarily include many wonders of engineering science, which range from demonstrations of nonsinusoidal waves and polyphase circuits to toy electric trains. There are attractions for the most sophisticated graduate of M.I.T. and also items of interest for bug-eyed tots still in kindergarten.

The three departments of the College of Engineering will each present separate displays and each will have a central attraction. The mechanical engineers will assemble and put into operation a complete electrical power plant. Electrical engineers plan new and more awesome demonstrations of a million-volt bolt of lightning. Civil engineers will display the photoelasticity method of determining stress and strain on structural materials.

In addition to these major presentations there will be hundreds of other exhibitions of new and old wonders of technology.

A note of major interest to veterans of these shows, and also to those coming for the first time, is the fact that a concession stand will be set up this year right in the Engineering Building, thus making the long hike to the "Dope Shop" for refreshments unnecessary.

The engineers are extending a special invitation to alumni this year. This show, perhaps more than any single event of the year, demonstrates the activities, progress, and ability of Duke's students. Alumni are urged to take advantage of the opportunity.

In addition to finding amusement and instruction at the Engineers Show, visitors will discover that the hospitality of Duke's engineers in their still-new home is, in itself, worthy of considerable note.

Faculty-Staff Campaign

Members of the University's faculties and staffs, in an amazingly short time, have given through their own private campaign more than $85,000 for the Development Program.

This amount, which is according to a tabulation taken in mid-February, comes from approximately 450 members of the University community. There are about 700 who are included in the campaign, and at the present rate, it appears that there will be nearly 100 per cent participation before the drive is ended.

The campus campaign was undertaken a short time ago at the instigation of several faculty and staff members. Chosen to head the campaign was Dr. Frank T. De Vyver, professor of economics, and he organized a committee of 12 to sponsor the drive.

No one is in a better position to recognize Duke's major needs during these current and difficult times than is the faculty. No one can perceive the vista of the future and the demands that will be made upon Duke to a more accurate extent. Therefore, it is felt, the wholehearted support of the campus is the strongest possible indication of the greatness of the objectives of the campaign for funds now underway.

President Edens said recently that this "voluntary and almost spontaneous reaction by the University's men and women on behalf of our Development Campaign is one of the most inspiring demonstrations of loyalty and confidence in Duke's future that we have seen."

National Campaign Begins

The national campaign for the Duke University Development Program has begun.

On Tuesday, Feb. 6, campaigners in Mecklenburg County, which includes Charlotte, N. C., met to kick off their drive in the county, and this occasion signalled the beginning of an all-out effort to complete the 1950-51 goal of $8,650,000 by June 30.

Addressing the Charlotte meeting was Dr. Paul A. Gross, University vice president and one of the nation's leading scientists.

Political changes within and communist threats without may threaten our nation, Dr. Gross said, but universities like Duke "will stay with you and serve you and the cause of free civilization come what may."

"This nation," he declared, "will survive as long as educational institutions are free to produce men who will think and act for themselves. We are challenged to support privately endowed higher education, because its survival involves the very survival of our nation."

Key Counties

The Mecklenburg County campaign began with an announcement that advance gifts there total $205,000. This was an auspicious beginning for not only the local drive, but for the national campaign as well. Chairman in Mecklenburg is George M. Ivey, '20, and heading the general canvass is R. Z. Thomas, Jr., '36.

This is the second key county (North

DURHAM CAMPAIGN LEADERS—Going over the latest returns from the City of Durham Campaign for a "greater Duke" are left to right, George Watts Hill, chairman; Mrs. R. H. Wright, campaigner; Donnie Sorrell, member of the executive committee; and Claude M. May, vice chairman. The Durham total now approaches $240,000 and is still climbing. The goal is $250,000. A recent editorial in the Durham Sun pointed out that Durham business firms and individuals have raised more money for Duke through the Development Campaign than for any other single cause in the history of the city.

Duke Receives Bequest

Duke University has been generously recognized in the will of the late William Brown Bell, trustee of the Duke Endowment and president of the American Cyanimid Company.

One-twelfth of a $600,000 trust fund was left to the University, which will ultimately receive half of a fund comprising the bulk of the estate, set up as a lifetime benefit for Mr. Bell's daughter, Mrs. Helen Griseom Hole of Richmond, Ind.

Mr. Bell died December 20 at the age of 71 while on a business and pleasure trip with his wife in French Morocco.

He took over the leadership of American Cyanimid in 1922, when its chief product was fertilizers. Under his leadership the firm developed into an organization that now makes 5,000 products for 200 industries.

Carolina) campaign to begin. The third started just a few days later, on Friday, Feb. 16, when campaigners in the Greensboro area of Guilford County were called together for a kick-off meeting by Floyd C. Caveness, '18, Greensboro canvass chairman. Approximately 60 workers met to hear an address by President Edens. General chairman in Guilford County is Kenneth M. Brim, '20, and heading the campaign in the High Point area is Charles L. Kearns, '32.

The first key county campaign was opened in Forsyth County, which includes Winston-Salem, before the end of last year, and will soon be completed, according to Chairman P. Huber Hanes, Jr., '38, and Co-chairman Tom J. Southgate, Jr.

Fourth and fifth key county campaigns will soon be launched in Durham and Wake Counties. Chairman in Durham is Sterling Nicholson, '22, and chairman in Wake County is N. E. Edgerton, '21.

Other New Chairmen

Other Duke men recently accepting appointments as campaign chairmen include Richard D. McAninch, '35, of Bedford, Ohio, in the Northeastern Ohio area; W. Mason Shehan, '37, of Easton, Md., in the Eastern Maryland area; Albert Y. Kemp, '42, of Syracuse, N. Y., in the Syracuse area; and Robert G. Lamb, '39, of Rochester, N. Y., in the Rochester area.

Meanwhile individual campaigners have received supplies and instructions and are now at work in more than 15 states and at least one foreign country. The list grows daily, as more alumni join the effort to build Duke for a future of increased service and achievement.

Preparations are also being made to launch campaigns in several of the nation's largest cities in the very near future. These include among others, New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Detroit.

Camera Invades Monastic Treasure Troves

Duke's Dr. Clark Has Returned from Holy Land Adventure

A narrow, sun-baked caravan track winds and twists through rugged, tumbled granite mountains, which soar nakedly and chaotically above a desolate and barren plateau. It is a desert broken only by endless small valleys and a very few shallow streams which water occasional oases of date palms and olive trees.

This is an ancient land, isolated and barren, yet a land of majestic beauty, of fantastic color and design, of crystal clear atmosphere, deep shadows, and dazzling sunlight that bathes the mountains in golden hues. It is the land of Mt. Sinai, the land "where God spake with Moses," where "the glory of the Lord rested in the sight of all the people."

Into this strange and fabulous place came Dr. Kenneth W. Clark, professor of New Testament and leading New Testament scholar, to direct the world's most unusual picture-taking project.

Convent of St. Catherine

The modern mountain-climbing vehicles of the Mt. Sinai expedition moved upwards over a sand track toward a monument, 7,500 feet high, where Moses is said to have received the Ten Commandments, and toward the old, massive and fortress-like walls of the ancient Convent of St. Catherine, inhabited by a handful of venerable monks.

The vehicles—a pick-up truck, cargo truck and mobile photographic unit—were equipped with broad "sand tires," four-wheel drive, and special transmissions which gave twelve forward speeds. But over this uneven trail it was difficult to average ten miles an hour. Sheer rock walls echoed back the roar of engines where previously only the grunts of camels resounded. When the trucks finally ground to a halt, they were standing under the walls of St. Catherine's Monastery, more than 5,000 feet above sea level.

As Dr. Clark stepped out of his car, a crowd of ragged native children gathered open-mouthed around the vehicles, and black-bearded monks in skull caps and robes stared in fascination at the complex, ultra-modern equipment which had invaded their isolated sanctuary.

Thus was begun the recently completed expedition to microfilm most of an estimated 2,000,000 pages of old Biblical manuscripts contained in the monastery library, one of the world's largest collections of ancient religious lore.

The project, from which Dr. Clark has recently returned to Duke, came about this way: Though the Biblical lands are filled with ancient writings and rare books, most of the works are inaccessible because of the isolation of the monasteries that guard them. Located in untraveled areas and in monastic seclusion, they can only be reached after long, difficult, and expensive journeys, and even then, permission to use the libraries is hard to obtain. It is not difficult to understand that custodians regard their aged tomes as rare treasures, and guard them zealously. Only a large-scale expedition can make a study of these church treasures successfully.

The Expedition's Purposes

A little over a year ago, Library of Congress officials, working with the American Foundation for the Study of Man, decided to sponsor an expedition to the treasure-trove of valuable manuscripts, St. Catherine's Monastery, and planned also for a stop-over in Jerusalem at the valuable Patriarchial libraries there. This time, however, instead of merely studying the material, they would photograph the books, page by page, on microfilm.

Duke's Dr. Clark, then serving as annual professor at the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem, was loaned to the expedition as editor-in-chief. To him fell the tremendous task of examining, analyzing, and evaluating some 33,000 writings and deciding which ones should be photographed. Especially interested in this work was an international commission, of which Dr. Clark is a member, engaged in preparing a new critical apparatus for the Greek New Testament. Members of the staff of Farouk University, Alexandria, collaborated with the expedition; and William Terry of California, vice-president of the American Foundation, was appointed field director.

The background of the fascinating task goes back to 220 A.D. when Christians fleeing from Roman persecution established themselves in this lonely and desolate land. Even then they were not safe; massacres by neighboring tribes were frequent occurrences and the monks petitioned the protection of St. Helena,

The assistant prior of the monastery tells Dr. Clark the story of the "burning bush" and the rod of Moses, which, according to legend, are still live and flourishing plants today, and are enclosed by the wooden fence in the background.

Saint Catherine's Monastery, 5,000 feet up Mount Sinai—the goal of the expedition. The sheer rock face in the background is the mountain which Moses ascended to speak with the Lord. It reaches a height of 2,500 feet above the monastery.

The Staff is shown hard at work in one of Patriarchial libraries in Jerusalem. In the foreground, Dr. Clark and his assistants work over the manuscripts and decide which ones are to be passed on to the photographers in the background.

mother of Constantine. She ordered a fortress built around their small church, and the fortified monastery was born. It was dedicated to the Transfiguration, but later, after relics of St. Catherine were discovered on the peak of the highest mountain in Sinai (carried there, according to legend, by a huge bird) and brought to the monastery, it became known as St. Catherine's. An increase in the number of monks and pilgrims necessitated the present larger structure, the foundation of which was laid in 542 A.D.

No one knows just when the library was begun; fragmentary works dating back to the fifth century have been catalogued. About three-quarters of the manuscripts of interest to the expedition are in Greek. The remainder are in a number of other languages, including Arabic, Syriac, Georgian, Slavonic, and Ethiopic.

Dr. Clark feels that the greatest achievement of the trip was the gaining of permission to photograph such valuable manuscripts as the famous Codex Aureus, which contains illuminated portraits of the Apostles and other sacred personages. The volume is encased in gold foil, and is attributed to the Emperor Theodosius, the colophon giving the date and scribe's name in abbreviated uncial characters.

Besides the religious manuscripts, Dr. Clark and his assistants microfilmed documents on philosophy, history, art, music, medicine, and other subjects. Also photographed were about 1,700 "firmans," the original edicts and privileges granted the monastery by the prophet Mohammed himself, 1,400 years ago, and by other great Moslems.

Photographed on larger film were some 2,500 miniatures and colored illustrations from the manuscripts. Special requests for various numbers of these profusely illustrated works were received from many institutions. Princeton University alone requested that some 500 be photographed.

Difficulties Are Overcome

The members of the expedition were aware of the need for haste. The Holy Land, and the rest of the world, is unsettled, and opportunities for such projects are rare. This trip would probably be the only one of its kind, perhaps, for generations, and they were not counting on coming back. From 10,000 to 15,000 pages a day were submitted to rapidly clicking shutters and the blinding light of photo-flood lamps. Decisions on what manuscripts were to be photographed, their relative importance, ages, authors, and so forth, had to be made quickly and

Some Newsworthy Items

Dr. Blanchard Retires

Dr. Julian Blanchard, '05, has retired from Bell Telephone Laboratories after 33 years of service with them.

Dr. Blanchard joined the Laboratories during World War I to work with the electronics group on the development and production of vacuum tubes, after he received his doctorate of philosophy from Columbia, and taught at Columbia and Duke, where he was professor of engineering from 1909 to 1912.

In 1930, Dr. Blanchard became a staff assistant in the department of radio research at Bell Laboratories. During the next few years, in addition to special investigations and reports on radio and vacuum tube matters, he aided in the preparation for the Laboratories' participation in various international radio congresses, in committee work on electrical standards, and in editorial work on technical papers for publications. Some of the reference data he has gathered on the development and progress of radio and electronics has been widely published.

During the second World War, Dr. Blanchard assisted in the organization of the Laboratories School for War Training, and for the first few months of its operation was assigned to laboratory instruction and to the supervision of laboratory apparatus and equipment. Following that he was engaged in the writing of radar manuals until the close of the war, for which he received the Navy Department's Emblem and Certificate of Appreciation.

Dr. Blanchard served as the Laboratories' contact in New York and Washington with the government office which collected reports on German technical developments in 1946 and 1947. Since then he has been a member of the Patent Department.

A collector of stamps and paper money having similar designs, Dr. Blanchard is a charter member and secretary of the Essay-Proof Society. He expects to continue his contributions on paper money to its quarterly publication, the Essay-Proof Journal, of which he is assistant editor and business manager. Dr. Blanchard also hopes to find time, now that he has retired, to write a history of his family, to top off his genealogical hobbying. He will continue to live in Greenwich Village, New York City. He is a Class Agent for the Loyalty Fund.

Edits Dictionary

Dr. W. Freeman Twaddell, '26, was granted a leave of absence from his duties as professor of Germanic languages at Brown University, to spend the current year as research editor of the new Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. The volume, entitled Webster's International Dictionary of the English Language, is being published by the G. and C. Merriam Company, Springfield, Mass.

As editor of the huge 3,000-page dictionary, Dr. Twaddell is directing a corps of approximately 250 scholars and scientists in the mountainous task of revising the more than 400,000 entries. In contrast, Noah Webster, originator of the dictionary, wrote and edited singlehanded the first edition which was published in 1828.

A prominent linguist and philologist,

Dr. Twaddell has been teaching at Brown since 1947. Prior to that he was chairman of the German Department at the University of Wisconsin. During the war he collaborated on a handbook of conversational German for the use of American troops in occupied Germany. He is the author of three other German text books used in many schools and colleges. As coordinator of the Army's Training Program, at Wisconsin, he supervised quick language teaching by the phonemic or "important sounds" method, and was largely instrumental in having the method widely adopted in language teaching. Dr. Twaddell has also been a visiting professor at Leland Stanford University and the University of Michigan. In the past he has contributed to many publications in the field of linguistics, including the Britannica Junior, and has written several definitive studies on the subject.

Dr. Twaddell made his home in Durham for some time. His father, the late Prof. William P. Twaddell, was for many years director of music in the Durham public schools, and was the first director of the Duke University Glee Club. He was succeeded in 1927 by J. Foster Barnes.

Dr. Twaddell is married and has three sons. They are making their home in a Boston suburb for the year.

B. F. Few Elected President of Liggett & Myers

Benjamin F. Few, '15, A.M. '16, Trustee of Duke University and National Chairman of the Duke Development Campaign, was recently elected to succeed J. W. Andrews as president of Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company, following the latter's retirement. He assumed his new duties with the company on February 1.

Mr. Few, a native of Greer, S. C., is a nephew of the late William Preston Few, former president of Duke University. During World War I, he served as an infantry officer in the Army.

Having joined the leaf factory of the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Company after his graduation from college in 1916, Mr. Few spent the years from 1920 to 1930 in Manila, Philippine Islands. He was transferred to the New York office in 1930, and in 1936 was named director and senior vice-president of the company.

In 1945, Mr. Few also became a trustee of Robert College, Istanbul, Turkey.

A golf enthusiast, Mr. Few has won several amateur golf awards, including the amateur championship of the Philippine Islands in 1925 and again in 1930.

A.I.E.E. Honors Strandberg

Charles F. Strandberg, B.S.E.E. '50, of Greensboro, has been named winner of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers' national contest for student research papers in 1949-50. Charles received the hundred-dollar first prize for his paper entitled "Recording Styli: The Burnishing Facet and a Process for Resharpening."

The cash prize and a special certificate were presented to him last month at the Institute's National Winter General Meeting in New York.

The prize-winning paper describes a patented instrument which Charles invented while a senior at Duke. Designed to save costly repair of sapphire recording needles, the device is used to cleanse these needles quickly and inexpensively.

The instrument is now widely used in the radio broadcasting industry, and is being manufactured by the Strandberg Engineering Laboratories, Greensboro, of which Charles is a partner.

E. L. Jones Re-elected

Edwin L. Jones, '12, president of the J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte, N. C., was recently re-elected chairman of the Charlotte Housing Authority at their annual meeting. He has headed the Authority since 1938.

The organization is now conducting an examination to determine whether incomes of those living in the low-rent projects have increased to an extent to make them ineligible. They are also planning a 400-unit development for Negro families in Charlotte.

Thanks Cleveland Editor

In an issue of the Cleveland News, there appeared an editorial describing the Duke University carillon. The article is reprinted on the editorial page of this issue. It prompted Elizabeth L. Stryker, '42, secretary of the Northeastern Ohio Duke Alumni, of 3286 Elsmere Road, Shaker Heights 20, Ohio, to express her gratitude to Mr. N. R. Howard, editor of the News.

This incident is worthy of comment for two reasons. First of all, Duke is proud of its alumna's thoughtfulness in acknowledging the editorial. It is the way you act that reflects favorably upon the University. Secondly, the Alumni Office appreciates the fact that this information was forwarded to it. (See editorials.) Following is Elizabeth's letter;

Dear Mr. Howard:

On behalf of the local Duke University alumni chapter, I want to thank you for the editorial which appeared in the News regarding the carillon. It was very interesting, not only to those people who know Duke and the carillon, but also, I am sure, to those people who are not familiar with this aspect of the University.

You might be interested to know that in Northeastern Ohio, there are approximately 260 Duke Alumni—this is including cities such as Akron, Canton, and Youngstown, in addition to Cleveland.

I am sending a copy of the editorial and a copy of this letter to the Alumni Office at Duke University.

Thanking you again, I am

Yours very truly,
Elizabeth L. Stryker

Judge Robbins on Board

Haywood Robbins, '30, LL.B. '32, of Charlotte, has been named by Governor Kerr Scott of North Carolina to succeed D. E. Henderson as a Democratic member of the State Elections Board. Mr. Henderson recently resigned.

The new board member is a past judge of the Charlotte city court and has practiced law in Charlotte for the last 18 years. His wife is the former Dr. Noel Walker, M.D. '32, of Charlotte, who was the first woman to graduate from the Duke University Medical School.

Summer in Germany

David L. Cozart, Jr., '38, insurance executive at New Bern, N. C., and counsellor of the Methodist Youth Fellowship in a New Bern Church, was one of the counsellors of a group of young North Carolinians who spent last summer in Germany on a combination "Youth Caravan" and work camp.

Four Duke students, Nat Harrison, Jr., Herbert Waldrep, Jr., Catherine Wike, and Mary Dawson, and six other North Carolinians comprised the group. Their main occupation was the rebuilding of a Methodist Church which had been destroyed in the last war, but their most important accomplishments, according to Mr. Cozart, came about through their social relationships with the Germans in their neighborhood.

The young people took part in the church services of the village in which they were working and in neighboring villages, and frequently had informal meetings with the members of the congregations, thereby spreading American influence and culture. As one young German said of the North Carolina group, "They showed us that Americans do have something besides chewing gum and neon lights."

The project was sponsored by the North Carolina Conference Boards of Missions and Education, and was conducted in cooperation with the Educational and Cultural Relations Division of the United States High Commission for Germany, which sees such work groups and youth exchanges as a definite aid in the reeducation of the German youth.

At Rio Conference

Duke University was well represented by former students and teachers at a Public Affairs Officers' Conference held in Rio de Janeiro some weeks ago. Rodolfo O. Rivera, A.M. '29, Ph.D. '32, who is cultural attaché for the American Embassy, Montevideo, Uruguay, wrote to the Alumni Office about the meeting, which was attended by high ranking officers of the Office of Information and Educational Exchange of the Department of State and by the public affairs officers of all the nine countries of South America.

Forney Rankin, Public Affairs Adviser to the Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs, who attended the Duke Law School in 1934, presided at the conference. Dr. John T. Reed, Public Affairs Officer at the American Embassy at Caracas, Venezuela, was assistant professor of romance languages at Duke from 1938 to 1940. Dr. Gordon Brown, Acting Public Affairs Officer at the American Embassy at Bogotá, Colombia, taught in the Summer Session of Duke University during 1941, 1942, 1943 and 1944. Gilbert A. Crandall, Public Affairs Officer at the American Embassy, La Paz, Bolivia, who also attended the conference, was a graduate student in the History Department at Duke in 1935 and 1936.

Dr. Rivera received his doctor's degree in the field of Latin American History and Foreign Relations. While at Duke he served in the Reference Department of the Library, and was Executive Secretary of the Duke University Press.

Mrs. Rivera, the former Laura Martin Jarman, is also a Duke alumna, having received her A.M. in 1932, and her Ph.D. in Romance Languages in 1936. She taught at Duke while she was doing her graduate work.

Decorated for Gallantry

A Silver Star for gallantry in action has been awarded Captain Warren J. Collins, '46, M.D., B.S.M. '48. At the time of the battle early last fall which resulted in the award, Capt. Collins was in charge of a medical aid station of the First Cavalry Division near Hamhung, Korea.

Ten enemy tanks, supported by infantry, three times attacked and forced the withdrawal of Capt. Collins' aid station, which was defended by only a lightly armored jeep-and-truck convoy loaded with infantrymen. On each occasion he was the last to withdraw. By loading wounded on vehicles as soon as they were treated, he saved many casualties who would otherwise have been run over by the tanks. Single-handedly, he evacuated men to safety from positions as close as 50 yards from enemy tanks.

Capt. Collins also wears the Combat Medical Badge awarded to medical men who have spent at least 30 days in the front lines of combat.

His wife, the former Genie Glass, who was a technician at Duke in 1945 and 1946, is living with her parents in Apex, N. C., while he is in Korea.

Keeps Sabre-Jets Flying

Veteran fighter pilot and air commander, Major R. G. "Zack" Taylor, '41, is the man behind the gun in a new chapter in United States aerial combat history. He is operations officer for the 4th Fighter Interceptor Wing of the United States Far East Air Forces which recently introduced the speedy F-86 North American Sabre jet into action in the war in Korea.

Major Taylor is charged with actual operational functions of the plane which holds the world's speed record, and is primarily responsible for the missions and tactics which are used by the Sabre jet pilots in combat.

Of 1004 Dacian Avenue, Durham, Major Taylor enlisted in the Air Force before Pearl Harbor in 1941. After receiving his wings, he became a combat squadron commander in Africa and Italy, with more than 50 missions to his credit. He downed six Focke-Wulf 109's during World War II, and won the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal and Soldier's Medal. Later he formed an F-51 squadron for demonstration purposes to ground troops, served 33 months on occupation duty as commander of a P-47 outfit, and became director of operations and training for Ninth Air Force.

Wounded in Action

Second Lieutenant Laurence M. Phelps, '48, United States Marine Corps, of 311 South 11th Avenue, Lake Worth, Fla., was one of the first Marine casualties from Korea to be brought to the United States Naval Hospital, Jacksonville, Fla.

Lt. Phelps was wounded by machine gun fire while serving as an artillery forward observer "eyes of the artillery" at the crossing of the Han River. He was rescued by friendly Korean civilians and taken to a first aid station which was the first step toward the journey home. The trip to the Jacksonville hospital was made entirely by Military Air Transport Service. During the stop at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, he was awarded the Purple Heart.

Having seen duty with the Marines on Okinawa as a sergeant during World War II, Lt. Phelps was commissioned after receiving his degree from Duke. His wife, Barbara, and their children, Linda and Laurence III, expected him home from the hospital by Christmas.

Lady Marine Bails Out

When an airplane runs out of gas, just about the only solution for the passengers is a parachute jump. That is exactly what Dorothea Storek, '50, second lieutenant in the Woman's Marine Corps, did when the plane in which she was making a training flight ran out of fuel over the Okefenokee Swamp.

Dorothea made the jump successfully except for a wrenched back, but landed in swampland. The pilot, who was the only other person in the plane, managed to make a crash landing and escaped unharmed.

Meanwhile, dusk was gathering, and although she was near the Jacksonville Naval Air Station, an uncharted hike through swampland did not appeal to Dorothea. She gamely wrapped herself in the crumpled parachute as a protection against cold and dampness, and spent the night. In the morning she was able to reach civilization and a hot cup of coffee.

Local Alumni Meetings

Buffalo, N. Y.

Western New York alumni report two bang-up Christmas holiday parties, one of which was a basketball game and reception for the Duke team. The Dukes lost to Canisius, 69-57, on New Years Day, but won a host of friends in the Buffalo area.

The first party was an annual Yuletide affair with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cunningham and Garfield L. Miller, '39, and Mrs. Johanne Miller once again acting as gracious hosts. The get-together was a huge success with many new faces present. Some of those who helped put over the party were: A. Read Cone, '37, Mrs. Cone, Thomas C. Morrow, '40, Mrs. Morrow, John F. Cree, '39, Mrs. Cree, Alvin Bingham, '49, Virgie Mae Ray Bingham, R.N. '48, Alfred Tallman, '48, Frances Jean Prather Tallman, '48, Fenton F. Harrison, '43, Dr. Marvin A. Rapp, '40, Ph.D. '48, Mrs. Rapp, John Bryce, '34, and Mrs. Bryce. Many others lent able assistance to the party.

The basketball reception was held at the Saturn Club, and the interest was gratifying. Coach Bradley and several players were interviewed for both radio and television transmission on station WBEN. Some of the Duke people, much to the delight of the players, provided ten cute dates for members of the team. Needless to say, the Blue Devils returned to Durham with lusty cheers for the Western New York Alumni.

Sampson-Duplin County

President Hollis Edens was the principal speaker at the Sampson-Duplin County Alumni Association dinner meeting held at Rose Hill, N. C., on Friday evening, February 2. A large group of Duke alumni and friends, including a number of high school principals, faculty and students, met at the Rose Hill School lunchroom. A chicken dinner was served at 7:00 o'clock.

Tina Fussell Wilson (Mrs. L. A.), '21, president of the association, presided and was in charge of the arrangements for the meeting. Following the dinner, Dr. Amos N. Johnson, '29, introduced President Edens, who spoke to the gathering about Duke University's past, present and future and the importance of the current Development Campaign.

William L. Brinkley, Jr., '44, field secretary, undergraduate admissions, also talked to the group, briefly outlining the University's undergraduate program. He directed his words at the high school officials and students with the object of making them more "Duke conscious." Pictorial brochures were passed out to prospective students and other interested persons.

The meeting concluded with an election of officers. Those chosen to serve for the year 1951 are: Dr. Amos N. Johnson, '29, president; Owen P. Johnson, '27, vice-president; Thomas D. Johnson, '35, secretary-treasurer; and Tina Fussell Wilson, alumni representative.

Law School Alumni

Duke Law alumni in Washington, D. C., held their second monthly luncheon meeting in the Senate Restaurant on February 6. They have agreed to hold a meeting every month.

Senator Willis Smith, '10, and Senator Richard M. Nixon, LL.B. '37, both attended the luncheon. Frank Fletcher, '35, Washington lawyer and owner of a metropolitan Washington radio station, was master of ceremonies. Also attending the luncheon were Dean Joseph A. McClain, Jr., of the Duke Law School, and Charles A. Dukes, '29, director of Alumni Affairs.

Washington, D. C.

Duke alumni in Washington, D. C., are planning a dinner March 6 at the National Press Club, 14th and F Streets, N.W., at 7:30 p.m. Senator Richard M. Nixon, LL.B. '37, of California, will be the speaker, and Senator Willis Smith, '10, of North Carolina, University Trustee, will be a guest of honor. Sidney Alderman, '13, will act as toastmaster. Evelyn Knight, popular singer, is expected to perform for the group.

Alumni who have helped with arrangements for the dinner are Bill Werber, '30; Alan Puryear, '36; Luther Angle, '30; Dorothy Huneycutt, '28; Andy Starratt, '34; Margaret Bledsoe, '32; Robert Stewart, '42; James Lee Bost, '95; and Frances A. Davis, '32.

Bill Murray Named to Succeed Wallace Wade

Former Delaware Coach Was All-Southern Halfback at Duke 20 Years Ago

William D. Murray, '31, former Duke football great and for the last 10 years director of athletics and head football coach at the University of Delaware, is Duke's new head football coach. His selection and acceptance were announced by President Edens on the last day of January, ending the two-month period of suspense and guesswork which started with Wallace Wade's appointment as commissioner of the Southern Conference last December 8.

For Murray, the new contract means the realization of a long-cherished ambition. For Duke, it means the acquisition of a young man with one of the most spectacular coaching records in modern football.

After graduating from Duke, Murray became head coach, principal, dean of boys, and, later, assistant superintendent at Childrens Home, in Winston-Salem, where his football teams set the pace for the high school and prep teams in the South Piedmont district. During his ten-year stay, Childrens Home, football teams won sixty-nine games and tied three, losing only nine! There were three undefeated seasons, and one winning streak stretched to thirty-six games.

In 1941 he became head football coach at the University of Delaware, a position for which he was highly recommended by his predecessor at Duke, Wallace Wade. His teams there also were a sensation. In seven seasons (Delaware did not field a team during the war years) they won forty-nine, tied two, and lost sixteen. There, also, three undefeated seasons were recorded, and one winning streak ran to thirty-two games.

Coach Murray's lifetime record is 118 victories, five ties, and 25 losses.

Outstanding as a Student

In his student days "Smiling Bill" Murray thrilled many a Duke fan with his end sweeps. He was one of the spark plugs of the great Duke team that fought the University of North Carolina to a 0-0 tie in the famous "Battle of Lake Kenan" in 1930 to break a Tar-heel jinx which had lasted seven years. The Blue Devils finished that season with a record of eight wins, two ties, and one loss.

Halfback Bill Murray gained 1,030 yards that season, and his performance earned him a berth on the All-Southern team and led his teammates to elect him the "Most Valuable Player" on the team.

He was outstanding in campus life as well as on the gridiron. At the end of his freshman year he was voted the "best-all-around" member of his class. In his senior year he was unopposed for the presidency of the Men's Student Government Association. Upon graduation he was presented the Robert E. Lee award as the outstanding member of his class. He was a member of the "Red Friars," Duke's highest honorary fraternity, and of Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity.

as a student

His appointment as head football coach at Duke came as a surprise to many, not because they thought he was not being considered, but because everyone was sure that he would not be willing to give up his very favorable situation at Delaware. He was director of athletics and head football coach, and also director of the division of student health and physical education. He had been president of the Delaware Faculty Club, and was elected from the faculty to the University Council. Moreover, he had recently turned down several highly advantageous offers in order to remain at Delaware.

When quizzed about this, Coach Murray answered "I made up my mind a few years ago when I had several opportunities to go elsewhere that I would never leave Delaware for any other place but Duke. However, I had no idea at the time that I would ever get the chance to coach at Duke. I leave a wonderful job and wonderful place."

"T" for Duke?

Murray's favorite formation at Delaware seems to have been the double wing-back. Last year he abandoned it for the first time in favor of a variation of the split T. When asked recently whether he preferred the single wing or the T, Murray replied that he liked "a little of both," and that he would have to look over his material before deciding definitely which system he will use. He indicated, however, that he might use some of each.

Coach Murray is heartily in favor of the two-platoon system, mainly because "it enables more boys to play."

Although Murray's contract with Duke is for only three years, it is generally understood that he is to stay much longer than that. Eddie Cameron, Duke's director of athletics, said during the press conference at which Murray's selection was announced, "Duke never talks much about a contract. We just hire somebody and that's that. We hope Bill will be with us for a long time."

Cameron went on to praise his former protégé (Cameron had been freshman football coach during Bill's freshman year at Duke): "We consider ourselves to be most fortunate in securing the services of Bill Murray. I have known him as player and coach and have followed his career closely over the years. He is a splendid football coach, but more than that, he is a moulder of men."

Jack Horner, sports editor of the Durham Morning Herald, has also been watching Bill Murray's career for a long time. He says "I first met Bill Murray when he was producing winning teams

Cagers Secure Conference Tourney Berth

The Blue Devil cagers clinched a bid to the Southern Conference tournament by defeating Wake Forest 69-64 on February 19. Duke's one remaining conference game, which is with North Carolina, can affect only the Tarheel's chances for a bid.

The Wake Forest game was fast and close. The lead changed six times in the first half, and although Duke was never headed after grabbing the lead in the first three minutes of the second half, the margin was never more than a few points.

The eight teams with the best conference records are invited to the tournament each year. It will be held this year on March 1-3 at North Carolina State. Duke is currently ranked fifth in conference standings, with a 12 won, 6 lost record.

Duke's record for all games played so far is 17 won and 12 lost.

The biggest basketball news at Duke this year has been sensational guard Dick Groat, who has broken the national record for total points from free throws in one season by raising his mark to 233 in the 29 games played so far this year. He has made 80.5 per cent of all his charity tosses. The old record of 215 was held jointly by Tony Lavelli of Yale and Paul Arizin of Villanova. Groat is now shooting for another record—the National Collegiate high scoring record of 740 points in one season, set by William and Mary's Chet Giermak two years ago. His grand total to date is 717 points, only 23 short. With two games still to play and possibly more if the Blue Devils meet with success in the tournament, Groat seems a sure bet to set a new mark.

Dick has already smashed most of Duke's records. He set a new record of 37 points scored in a single game as the Blue Devils trounced Davidson 90-68 shortly after mid-term exams. The Duke record for total points in a season, which was 430, he has long since smashed.

The Devil cagers emerged from exam week in a slump during which they dropped games to Wake Forest, (65-56) the University of South Carolina, (86-64)

"Red" Kulpan Weds

"Red" Kulpan, center on the varsity basketball squad, and Alice Elizabeth Black, R.N., B.S.N. '50, walked down the aisle on January 19, and came back Mr. and Mrs.

They were married in York Chapel by Professor James T. Cleland. The basketball team was on hand to throw plenty of rice when they came out of the Chapel.

the University of North Carolina (71-68), and New York University (79-73).

But they picked up their second win of the second semester by blasting George Washington 85-70, on February 5. The next night the Dukes were again victorious, beating William and Mary 61-54 to get back into the running for a berth at the Southern Conference Tournament, which is to be held at North Carolina State March 1-3.

Taking a loss to Southern Conference champion North Carolina State in their stride, and quite elated that Dick Groat had again outscored the great State star Sammy Ranzino, this time 27 to 20, the Blue Devils went on to rack up two more Southern Conference victories. The first of these was a 94-73 rout of Davidson on the losers' home court February 14. The Dukes dominated the court throughout the game, and were never headed.

Two days later they scored another smashing victory, this time on their home court against Washington and Lee by a comfortable 94-68 margin. The Blue Devils were ahead throughout the game, the Generals never approaching any closer than within four points after the game was a little underway.

Taking a road trip to the northern fringe of the Southern Conference, Duke won a 49-40 decision from the University of Maryland. Tight defensive play was the outstanding feature of this game, with a minimum of the flashy offensive work that has characterized most of the Blue Devil play this fall.

The game was close all the way, and only in the final quarter did Duke attain the security of a comparatively large point margin.

The Blue Devils stepped outside the conference for a tiff with the flashy Middies of The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Navy blue outshone the Duke blue, and the Devils suffered an 85-60 defeat.

The latest scoring figures for the Duke cagers as the REGISTER goes to press have Dick Groat, of course, in front with 717 points. Dick Crowder, lanky center, is second with 267 points, and team Captain Scotty York is next with a steady 233. Kes Deimling, a sophomore who has showed a lot of promise, has 198 points. The other leaders are Bill Fleming with 196 and Dayton Allen with 163.

Groat's total score for this year, plus the 275 points he scored in 19 games last winter, gives him 992 points for his two-year varsity career. This equals the mark set in three years by Duke's All-American Ed Koffenberger. Groat is now 17 points above the pace set by Corren "Ceep" Youmans in his four-year varsity career at Duke. Youmans played on the varsity as a freshman. If Groat's freshman totals are included in his career record, it stands at 1193 points in three seasons.

WRESTLERS

Duke's varsity wrestlers racked up their second win of the 1950-51 season here February 5 by mauling Georgia Tech 19-7. The Duke grapplers have lost one decision, that being to Virginia Tech by a 17-13 count. On February 15 they beat Davidson, their third opponent, 17-11. Earlier in the season Duke had defeated tauted Maryland by a 16-14 score. The team has three meets left on the schedule before moving into the Southern Conference tournament.

After their first three meets, five Duke wrestlers were unbeaten. Besides co-captains Dick Harrisou and Bill Britt, they included Bob Burrell, Jerry Gallagher and John McMasters.

Wallace Wade Opens Office in Durham

Former Duke Coach Wallace Wade, now commissioner of the Southern Conference, has opened his office in Durham, which has been his home ever since he first came to Duke twenty years ago. His new business address is the Temple Building at 107 Market Street.

Mr. Wade left Duke University to take up his new duties on January 1.

Billy Cox and Worth Lutz, Jr., Are Awarded Trophies

Billy Cox, Blue Devil tailback, and Worth Lutz, Jr., Durham High fullback, were awarded the Center Theatre Trophies as the outstanding players of their respective schools for the past season at a ceremony during half-time intermission of the Duke-Wake Forest basketball game.

Noble Arnold, former manager of the Center Theatre in Durham, and long a friend of Duke University, flew from Atlanta, Ga., where he is now located, to make the presentations.

This is the second successive year that Worth Lutz has won the High School award. The son of Worth Lutz, Sr., '29, Worth, Jr., has recently been named on the All American High School team. Also of interest, Worth, Jr., will enter Duke as a freshman next fall.

The name of Billy Cox has thus been added to a long list of Duke football greats who have received the Center Theatre award for the most valuable player at Duke. The list includes such immortals to the memory of Duke fans as "Honey-boy" Hackney, Ace Parker, the late Tom Burns, Whitey Davis, Fred Folger, George McAfee, Al DeRogatis, and Lonis Allen. Cox either set or helped set seven team and individual offensive records this past year.

Arthur Bradsher, '04, Great Trinity Pitcher, Dies

Arthur Brown Bradsher, '04, one of the greatest collegiate pitchers in the nation in the early 1900's, died at his home in Beaufort, N. C., on January 27, of a heart attack.

As the ace southpaw for Trinity College, Mr. Bradsher rolled up an amazing strike-out record and was known throughout the land as "King of the Southern Diamond." In each of his years at Trinity, Mr. Bradsher made an outstanding reputation for himself on the baseball diamond, becoming one of the top collegiate pitchers of all time. In 1901 he fanned 70 opposing players, and in 1903 there were 99 who could not touch one of his pitches. 1904 brought an even more spectacular season, for Arthur Bradsher pitched 14 winning games and lost only one. Facing 427 hitters he allowed only 48 safe hits, struck out 166 batters, and pitched a 9-0 no-hitter against Oak Ridge. During his final year he allowed only 38 hits in 13 games, striking out 169 would-be hitters. Two no-hit games were pitched by him that season. A versatile ball player, Mr. Bradsher played regularly in the outfield or at third base when he was not pitching.

As a young boy, Arthur Bradsher moved to Durham with his family. Having received his elementary education in the Durham city schools, he entered Trinity. After graduating from college, he declined a $10,000 job (an unheard of sum at that time) to play professional ball, choosing instead to be employed by the old American Tobacco Company. Later he became market supervisor for the Export Leaf Tobacco Company located in Petersburg, Va. At the time of his retirement in 1945 he was a director and vice-president of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Montreal, Canada.

After his retirement in 1945, Mr. Bradsher made his home on Summerlea Farm near New Bern, N. C., until September, 1950, when he moved to Beaufort.

Funeral services for Mr. Bradsher were held at the Howerton-Bryan Funeral Home in Durham, and interment was in Maplewood Cemetery, annex B.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Muse Bradsher, '05; three daughters, Mildred Bradsher Voorhees (Mrs. E. H.), '46, Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.; Mary Elizabeth Bradsher Hayes (Mrs. F. L.), '31, Charlotte, N. C.; and Mrs. F. A. Gill, Jr., Petersburg; two sons, Dr. Charles K. Bradsher, '33, former Duke track star hailed as one of the greatest half-milers in the school's history, who is now teaching chemistry at Duke; and Dr. A. B. Bradsher, Jr., '38, Philadelphia, Pa.; and a half brother, Gordon M. Carver, '15, Carolina Beach, N. C., and sixteen grandchildren. In addition to his immediate family, Mr. Bradsher is survived by a large number of relatives and in-laws, many of whom came to Duke University.

Some Recent Events

Duke Host to N. C. Press

Duke University entertained the North Carolina Press Association at a dinner in the West Campus Union during the Association's annual Newspaper Institute held at the University of North Carolina and Duke last month. Attendance at the Institute broke all previous records.

Professor James T. Cleland of the Duke Divinity School gave the principal address, and Governor W. Kerr Scott presented the annual press awards. President Hollis Edens extended a welcome to the group, and Henry Belk, '23, retiring president of the Association, responded. Dr. Charles E. Jordan, vice-president of Duke University, presided. A musical program was presented by the Duke Double Quartet directed by J. Foster Barnes.

American Alumni Council Holds Meeting at Duke

The Alumni Department of Duke University was host to District Three of the American Alumni Council for its annual meeting, held in January. Charles A. Dukes, '29, director of Alumni Affairs, and Anne Garrard, '25, A.M. '27, assistant director of alumni affairs, planned and coordinated the three-day program, which included panel discussions, luncheon and dinner sessions, addresses, and business sessions.

Special guest and speaker at the Monday luncheon was T. Hawley Tapping, of the University of Michigan, president of the American Alumni Council.

Dr. Hollis Edens was the principal speaker at the last evening session of the meeting. He told the group, which is made up of alumni affairs directors of the institutions of higher learning in nine Southern states, that the alumnus and his alma mater have a mutual responsibility to each other that must never be overlooked. The alumnus has the responsibility of interpreting the high mission of his alma mater, and it is the institution's duty to keep the alumnus abreast of its growth and development.

Also featured on this program were several musical numbers by members of the Duke Men's Glee Club, who performed under the baton of John Putnam of Buffalo, N. Y., student director of the Glee Club.

The final panel discussion of the meeting was directed by Charles P. McCurdy, Jr., of William and Mary, president-elect of the Council. The topic was "Trends in Alumni Work."

Displayed in the Washington Duke Hotel, Council headquarters for the meeting, were several exhibits of interest to alumni leaders. An engraving exhibit from Durham Engraving Company, a printing exhibit from Seeman Printery, and an exhibit of various alumni magazines were seen by the delegates.

Divinity School Holds Seminars for Ministers

The 1951 Duke University Divinity School Seminars, which are made possible by the James A. Gray Fund, were held at Myers Park Methodist Church in Charlotte, N. C., on January 22 and 23, and at the First Methodist Church in Wilson, N. C., on January 25 and 26.

Begun two years ago, the Seminars are designed "to offer North Carolina ministers an opportunity to continue their education after graduation." Dr. Kenneth W. Clark, professor at the Duke Divinity School, is chairman of the Seminar committee.

Identical programs following the theme of "Our Ministry" were presented for some 200 ministers in each city. Principal speakers were Bishop Fred Pierce Corson, presiding bishop of the Philadelphia Area of The Methodist Church, and Dr. William D. Davies, professor of Biblical Theology, Duke Divinity School. Dr. Davies presented two addresses on "Our Ministry: Its New Testament Origins" and "Our Ministry: Its New Testament (and Historical) Meaning." "Ministerial Leadership" and "Ministerial Achievement" were the subjects of Bishop Corson's two addresses. All the talks were supplemented by question and answer discussions.

Dr. Clark presented an illustrated lecture, "Miles of Manuscripts from Jerusalem to Sinai." He told of the microfilm reproduction of ancient manuscripts from the Monastery of St. Catherine and Jerusalem in the Holy Land, a project which he guided last year.

Others participating in the Seminars were Bishop Costen J. Harrell, '06, D.D. '40, of Charlotte; Dr. E. H. Nease, '25, B.D. '31, superintendent of the Charlotte District; Dr. A. J. Hobbs, '19, superintendent of the Rocky Mount District; James G. Huggin, B.D. '29, pastor, Myers Park Church; Dr. T. M. Grant, '09, pastor, First Methodist Church, Rocky Mount; Robert W. Bradshaw, '19, pastor, First Methodist Church, Wilson; Dr. James Cannon III, '14, acting dean of the Duke Divinity School.

Presiding at the various sessions during the Conferences were The Reverend Mitchell Faulkner; Charles P. Bowles, '28, A.M. '31, B.D. '32; Lee F. Tuttle, '27, W. J. Miller, '23; D. E. Earnhardt, '18, A.M. '27; Leon Russell, B.D. '30; Allen P. Brantley, '18; and W. A. Cade, '13.

A special feature at each Seminar was a layman's panel discussion of "The Layman's View" of the minister's job. Paul Ervin, '28, LL.B. '31; Hunter M. Jones; Richard E. Thigpen, '22; Edwin L. Jones, '12; and Charles H. Litaker, '28, were members of the panel at Charlotte. D. S. Johnson, '24, A.M. '29, Everett Blake, J. A. Glover, and J. H. Rose, '13, were members of the panel of laymen at Wilson.

In addition to a social hour held for the conferees, luncheons and dinners were served to all of them at the host churches in order to preserve the close fellowship of all who participated.

Civil Engineers Meet

The North Carolina Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers held a meeting at the Duke College of Engineering in January. New officers were elected for 1951, and life memberships in the Society were presented to several prominent engineers at a luncheon following the business meeting.

Principal speaker at the annual meeting was William R. Glidden, Richmond, Va., national vice-president of the organization.

Four student papers were presented during the morning session. W. V. Westmoreland delivered a paper entitled "Alaska Road Commission," and W. C. Vanburen gave an illustrated lecture on steam gauging for the Bureau of Reclamation in the Western United States. Both are students at the Duke College of Engineering. The remaining two papers, "A Civil Engineer's Job with the Air Force" and an illustrated paper explaining construction of the West Asheville Bridge at Asheville, N. C., were delivered by students from North Carolina State College.

Members of the student ASCE chapter at Duke were hosts at the meeting. Chandler W. Brown, B.S. '46, B.S.C.E. '47, Duke engineering instructor, is faculty adviser for the group.

Duke "Hams" Speak on "Voice of America"

On the last afternoon and evening in January, an isolated homesteader in the wilds of the Australian bush and perhaps a student in the twisting byways of Paris' Montmartre tuned their radios and heard the voices of two Duke University students and a Duke staff member. They were listening to the regular weekly half-hour Voice of America program prepared especially for short wave radio enthusiasts and beamed to Europe and the Middle East.

Through the powerful Voice of America radio, key members of amateur short wave station W4AHY at Duke gained an international audience as they described the history of their station and some of its technical aspects in a six-minute recorded interview from the "shack" of the Engineers' Radio Station located in the Engineering Building.

Participating in the broadcast were Dan Murph, Jr., Washington senior, son of Daniel S. Murph, A.M. '03; Robert Lawler, New Orleans, La. freshman; and Joseph P. Edwards, laboratory technician in the Duke Electrical Engineering Department. Leading the interview was Hank Miller, Voice of America announcer from New York City, who visited W4AHY a week or two before the broadcast to make the recording.

The Voice of America had already interviewed a former president of the Electrical Engineers' Club, Ed Carson, '49. Ed, his brother Bill, and their father, J. E. Carson, all of Danville, Va.; each operate a short wave set.

W4AHY is the radio outlet for a group of about a dozen Duke students who call themselves the Duke Amateur Radio Club. With office space granted them by the Duke College of Engineering and a mass of surplus service radio equipment, the student "hams" have constructed a powerful transmitter whose signal has been heard half-way around the world.

As members of a vast international network of amateur short wave stations, W4AHY yearly sends more than 300 messages to all parts of the United States and many foreign countries without charge as a public service. In times of disaster when normal communications are paralyzed, amateur stations like W4AHY maintain contact with the outside world through their widespread network.

Art Exhibit Features Klee

The art exhibits which are shown each month in the Woman's College Library will be of interest to alumni who visit the campus.

From February 3 through February 28 an exhibition of paintings by one of the most brilliant contemporary artists, Paul Klee, is being featured. Also included in the exhibition are works by Wassily Kandinsky, an outstanding abstractionist, and Lionel Feininger, another contemporary master. The pictures include watercolors lent by Dr. Joseph A. McClain, Jr., dean of the Law School, watercolors from the Société Anonyme Collection of the Yale University Art Gallery, and oil paintings lent by the Phillips Memorial Gallery in Washington, D. C.

The Duke University Arts Council, which is sponsoring the exhibition, held for its members a preview showing and reception on the evening of February 2. At this time Mr. John Canady, director of the Newcomb Art School at Tulane University, delivered an address on the work of Klee, a subject on which he is an authority. Klee, a Swiss who died in 1940, was called by Mr. Canady one of the two most influential contemporary painters, the other being Picasso.

From March 1 through March 23 there will be an exhibition of Design in Home Furnishing in the Library. It will include examples of pottery, textiles, tables, lamps, kitchen utensils, and other objects of artistic value and usefulness in the home.

Glee Club Begins 1951 Spring Concert Series

The 1951 season of the Duke Men's Glee Club under the direction of J. Foster ("Bishop") Barnes, began February 16 in Page Auditorium at Duke, when the Club presented their usual scintillating program of male harmony.

Several treats were in store for the audience. The double octet added another member for the occasion, a coed, Alice Jean Thompson, who sang in the "Italian Street Song" number. Another coed, Betty Lou Matheson, sang with the entire Club in a stirring rendition of "The Omnipotence." Highlights of the evening were the Barbershop Quartet and five soloists.

Three short week end trips in North Carolina and a Northern tour during spring vacation will complete the season. This year the Glee Club will appear on a television show in addition to their usual NBC broadcast. The same captivating enthusiasm will go with the 45 members of the Club wherever they sing. Chosen from an original group of 150 singers, their music is the result of four and a half months' continuous rehearsing. Yet at each performance their songs are as spontaneous as if sung for the first time. They always seem to succeed in their dual purpose of pleasing their audience and enjoying themselves.

The entire schedule of the 1951 Spring Glee Club tour follows: Durham, February 16; Concord, N. C., March 8; Mount Airy, N. C., March 9; Winston-Salem, N. C., March 10; Petersburg, Va., March 24; Washington, D. C., March 25; Lancaster, Pa., March 26; Pittsburgh, Pa., March 27; Cleveland, Ohio, March 28; and Rochester, N. Y., March 29.

New York, N. Y. (Savoy-Plaza Hotel), March 30; Broadcast over NBC from New York and Television program on Chesterfield Show, April 2; Greenville, N. C., April 12; Washington, N. C., April 13; Elizabeth City, N. C., April 14; Southern Pines, N. C., April 27; and Greensboro, N. C., April 28.

WHAT
ATHLETE?

IS IT CONDITIONING. . . coaching . . . teamwork . . . physique . . . sportsmanship . . . competitive spirit . . . or just plain honest-to-goodness athletic skill?

We don't pretend to be athletic experts, because our job is to manufacture high quality textile products. But as sporting fans we think it would be safe to say that an athletic champion is the result of all these fine qualities.

We know that it has taken a combination of great leadership, manufacturing know-how, careful planning, employee loyalty, and skilled teamwork to make Burlington Mills a champion in the textile industry. The Company's many accomplishments and progressive growth during the past 27 years are well known. We are proud of this record and equally proud of our 32,000 employees who have worked together with real team spirit as members of the Burlington team.

It's a fact that Burlington's fine fabrics, hosiery and other textile products are truly "Woven Into the Life of America" — just as every Burlington plant is woven into the life of its own community.

expertly. Dr. Clark was assisted in this important task by such renowned scholars as Professor Gerard Garitte of the University of Louvain, Belgium, and Dr. Aziz S. Atiya of Farouk University.

Adding to the academic difficulties of the job were extreme variations in temperature and mechanical "bugs." Differences of 50 degrees were recorded in a single day, and during the winter fingers were numbed and stiffened, and camera efficiency impaired by the cold in the unheated monastery. Sand got into the special generators that powered the equipment; tiny, irreplaceable camera parts broke, and other troubles were encountered that continually threatened the success of the expedition.

Now the job is finished, and scholars no longer need to make the expensive and sometimes impossible trip to Mt. Sinai to study the ancient writings. They may merely travel to Washington, D. C., and peruse almost 1,500,000 photographed pages which Dr. Clark and his assistants brought back with them.

Complete sets of negatives are available at the Library of Congress and at Farouk University. Dr. Clark states that the world's scholars will be able to buy a reproduction on film of an immensely valuable manuscript for as little as $2.50.

Members of the Mt. Sinai expedition realize that the intensive year of work "on location" is but a beginning of the research on these rare manuscripts that were photographed. Whereas the texts have lain in seclusion for centuries, they are now available to every scholar. It will require the labors of many hundreds of scholars throughout centuries to come for the full exploration of the rich resources of St. Catherine's library on film.

Murray New Head Coach

at Childrens Home, an orphanage, in Winston-Salem.

"He got the mostest out of the leastest of any schoolboy coach I have ever observed. He was a highly successful coach there and his football teams were the class of the always-strong South Piedmont Conference.

"When I was operating out of Greensboro more than a decade ago, I often saw Murray-coached teams in action. They not only played sound football but they always displayed marvelous sportsmanship."

Former Duke coach Wallace Wade adopted an absolute non-interventionist policy in regard to the selection of his successor, and so the announcement of Murray's selection was as much a surprise to him as to the remainder of the waiting world of Duke supporters. He said in a statement to sports writers: "I want to congratulate Bill Murray upon his return to his alma mater as head football coach. He's a gentleman in every respect, a man of fine character and keen intellect. He's an outstanding football coach and he's devoted to Duke University."

The whole Murray family is devoted to Duke University. Mrs. Murray is the former Carolyn Kirby, '32, of Decatur, Georgia. They have three daughters, Marilyn, 18, who is now a freshman at Duke; Joy, 19, a sophomore at Delaware University; and Carol, 12.

You may be interested to know that after having sung the Messiah for three years with the Duke choir, I felt a great desire to sing it again this year somewhere. Since our own church choir doesn't present the work, I sought for and found a church choir for just that occasion. Imagine my surprise when I learned that the young man seated next to me was the newly-elected president of the Philadelphia area alumni club, and although he had never sung with the Duke choir, we felt that the University was well represented—especially since Dr. Rankin's sister is a member of the same church choir. He (Fred Mann, B.S.M.E. '45) is trying to round up a large delegation to attend the Duke-Penn basketball game here on January 3, and so far, I think we will be able to make ourselves heard when the Blue Devils appear. Until I met Fred at choir practice, I had not been in contact with the local alumni organization at all, so in a way, it was a rather lucky coincidence that I should meet him at a time when I was wondering just what the alumni group of Philadelphia was going to do when the team came to town.

I would like very much to contribute to the Duke University Development Campaign, but I probably won't be able to until sometime in the spring after I finish paying my tuition fees here at Penn. However, I think you can count on me then, for I consider my debt to Duke far greater than anything I could ever hope to pay.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests
Number 5...THE OPOSSUM

"Thereby hangs

THE class clown went out on a limb and tried to prove cigarette mildness by the quick-trick method! He tried the fast puff and huff test—a whiff, a sniff—and they still left him up in the air! But then he got his feet on the ground. He learned that there is a reliable way to discover how mild a cigarette can be! And that test is...

The sensible test... the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test which simply asks you to try Camels as a steady smoke—on a pack after pack, day after day basis. No snap judgments needed. After you've enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you'll know why...

Letters

Following is a letter from John W. Carr III, B.S.E.E. '43, son of Dr. John W. Carr, Jr., '15, Duke professor of education. John is a Massachusetts Institute of Technology student now working on his Ph.D. dissertation in Paris under the Fulbright Act. John and his wife, Esther, have recently become the parents of a son, Alan Keenan Carr, born in Paris on February 3.

John W. Carr III, B.S.E.E.'43

44 Rue de Fleurus, Paris 6e, France

We are writing this on a brittle sunless day which is all too typical of the winters here in Paris. The electric heater at our feet serves to isolate us from the rest of our sprawling apartment, for it is only down at the other end of the hall that a spunky coal stove tries to push off the encroaching arctic that surrounds it. We consider ourselves lucky, however, to have this place, even though it is only until March 15, since most of our compatriots are scattered throughout the city in hotels or pensions, or else sharing apartments with others.

Outside the window runs the Rue de Fleurus. The morning crowd of students rushing to the College Stanislas nearby has quieted. The scissors grinder across the street has stopped shouting his trade momentarily. A block away lies legended Montparnasse, changed from the days of the twenties to what is now a staid commercialized community; the literary life of Paris has moved up the Rue de Rennes away from us to St. Germain de Près. Off to the east of us and very near are the Jardins du Luxembourg which have dropped their summer gaiety for a more sombre winter hue. Across the gardens is the Sorbonne, unlike any university in America, but approached more nearly by the big city schools like New York and Boston Universities in its location, lack of dormitories and campus-less atmosphere. At one end of the Quartier Latin, towards the south, stand the graduate science buildings, the Institut de Radium, the Institut de Physique et Chimie, and the Institut Henri Poincare. John attends classes at the latter institute where the list of his professors includes such names as: Darmois, Paul Levy, Frechet, Leray, DeBroglie, Mandelbrojt, and several Americans who are here for the year. Just around the corner from us is the Alliance Francaise where Esther studies French two hours each day with people of all nationalities who are anxious to improve their knowledge of the language.

THIS MONTH'S COVER

Midway between winter's snow and final exams, a few students find youth too close behind to resist the urge to launch a kite into the fresh winds of March. On the cover this month, three serious-minded upperclassmen are seen studying aerodynamics (or perhaps meteorology).

GUIDED MISSILES—Among General Electric's contributions to this military project have been the development of compact transmitters to report rocket's progress.

AIRCRAFT ARMAMENT—General Electric built gunnery systems for World War II planes . . . is continuing this work for the Air Force.

JET ENGINES—In 1941, the Air Force asked General Electric to build the first U.S. jet engine. Today, G-E engines power such fast planes as the F-86 Sabre, holder of world's speed record.

College graduates at General Electric are working on some of the nation's most vital projects

The rocket that rises a hundred miles above White Sands, N. M., contains a wonderfully compact device that reads 28 instruments every one-thirty-fifth of a second and transmits its reports to receivers on the ground. It was developed by G-E engineers . . .

Development of special communications systems for civil defense has been undertaken by G-E electronics engineers . . .

The newest class of Navy heavy cruisers helping to guard our defense line gain their power from 30,000-horsepower propulsion turbines built by General Electric . . .

It is estimated that during 1951 more than 30 per cent of General Electric's production will comprise projects like these . . . the design and construction of equipment to help fill America's military needs.

The hundreds of General Electric engineers, physicists, chemists, and other specialists sharing in these projects work with the assurance that their contributions are meaningful and important. Their talents and skills, further developed through G-E training courses and broadened through rotational job programs, are standing the nation in good stead.

You can put your confidence in—

Just Ramblin'

In the Charlotte Observer on January 29 the following excerpt appeared:

“UNSELFISH PHILANTHROPY”

“General Mecklenburg, Charlotte Observer,
Charlotte, N. C.

Dear General:

“I think that the judges made a very fine selection in naming Mr. David Ovens Man of the Year for the year just ended. There is something sort of stimulating about philanthropy that is consummated during the philanthropist's lifetime. It is kind of like serving over and beyond the call of duty, and is distinctly a form of unselfishness. The fact that a good part of Mr. Ovens' benevolence went to further the means of an institution (Duke University) already a bit top-heavy with means does not in the least detract from that unselfishness. Every man to his own unselfishness, I always say.”

We appreciate the fact that the rest of the article continued in a very complimentary vein in regard to Mr. Ovens' philanthropy which included a generous gift to Duke University. All members of the Duke family are deeply grateful to Mr. Ovens for his thoughtful gift which has been expressed in this publication at an earlier date. There does, however, appear in the article a note of warning to alumni and friends. It is so subtle that it is almost lost.

The italicized portion of the item has a special interest to each alumnus and friend of the institution. Although every effort has been made to call to the attention of the members of the family and the public at large the needs of the institution, it seems that in some quarters this information has fallen on deaf ears. Therefore, may we once again ask that each alumnus, if he is not already familiar with it, acquaint himself with the facts about Duke and tell the story wherever he goes. Such a dissemination of information on the part of the alumni and friends, we believe, will help Duke University materially to secure additional support, and, in so doing, enable it to make an even greater contribution, not only to the State of North Carolina, but to the Nation and to the World.

The appointment of Dr. James Cannon III. as Dean of the Duke Divinity School has been received with enthusiasm by alumni and friends. It is always a source of genuine satisfaction when an appointment to a position of prominence and responsibility in the University administration is enthusiastically received.

It is, however, especially gratifying when this person is an alumnus and has been a member of the faculty for many years; for it means that an able teacher, sound scholar and a loyal and interested alumnus is bringing to a job a background of experience enriched by close association with the work of the institution that has made it outstanding.

We are sure Dr. Cannon can count on the fullest cooperation from his fellow alumni in making his years as Dean of the Divinity School an outstanding contribution to the Church and in the field of education.

The following excerpt is taken from a newsletter which is published by the Executive Board of the Western New York Alumni of Duke University:

“WHAT IS THE EXECUTIVE BOARD?”

“Since the present group of officers were elected to office at the October meeting, the proxy, Marvin Rapp has been calling monthly meetings to see what the collective minds could offer.

“The Executive group was inaugurated during Johnny Cree's regime and is now functioning on all wheels.

“Members of this group include not only all the officers but the chairmen of the important committees too. May we add that their advice has been especially helpful in formulating plans for our activities.

“This Alumni organization is for our parents and adopted members as we have said many times before, so this year our innovation has been to have them serve on our committees. They are a terrific asset to our group and we appreciate their help.

“We hope the Executive Committee will become an integral part of our set-up. It is a wonderful way to get a cross-section of ideas from our members.”

The above seemed to us to be worthy of printing as we are constantly getting letters from officers of local groups asking about programs. Perhaps some of the officers who are seeking suggestions would like additional information about the program of the Buffalo Association. If so, we suggest they write the president, Marvin Rapp, at 60 Philadelphia Street, Buffalo, N. Y., or send an inquiry to the Alumni Office and we will see that he gets it.

This is a reminder that Alumnae Week End will be the 6th, 7th, and 8th of April. The committees have made interesting plans. All they need to execute them properly is your presence and participation. You know, of course, that there is to be quite an innovation this year. The returning alumnae are to get a real sample of student life as it is on the campus today. Let “hubby” baby sit and join the rest of the alumnae when they return for the week end.

Dr. James Cannon Becomes Divinity Dean

Thirty-two years of distinguished service to the University were climaxed on the sixth of this month when President Hollis Edens announced that Dr. James Cannon III, Ivey Professor of History of Religion and Missions, had been named Dean of the Divinity School.

Dr. Cannon has been serving as acting dean since the resignation of former Dean Harold A. Bosley last June. An able administrator, he is a popular choice for the post.

A member of the Duke faculty since 1919, he is the only actively teaching member of the original faculty of the Divinity School, organized as such in 1926.

Said President Edens in announcing the appointment: "Under his leadership, we anticipate the same solid growth and development for the Divinity School which has characterized its history for the past quarter century."

Dr. Cannon received the A.B. degree from Trinity College in 1914 and the A.M. degree from Princeton in 1917. Two other Princeton degrees, the Th.B. and Th.M. degrees, were awarded Dr. Cannon in 1925. He received the D.D. degree from Birmingham-Southern in 1938, and also studied at Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill., and New College, Edinburgh, Scotland.

Dr. Cannon, son of the late Bishop James Cannon, was ordained a minister of the Methodist Church in 1917. He is a member of the Virginia Conference.

The new Duke dean is the author of two books, History of Southern Methodist Missions, and A Guide to the Study of the English Bible, written with H. E. Spence. He has also contributed numerous articles to religious and lay journals. At one time he was editor of the "Richmond Virginian" and business manager of the Richmond "Christian Advocate," and is now advisory and corresponding editor of "The Muslim World."

During World War I, Dr. Cannon was an Army Y.M.C.A. worker in France and Italy. Later he became senior chaplain with the rank of lieutenant with the First Division A.E.F., and he was decorated by France with the Croix de Guerre.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he has for many years been secretary of the Duke Chapter. He is also secretary of the learned society, Fellowship of Professors of Missions.

Dean Cannon succeeds some distinguished theologians in the Duke Divinity School. The first dean, Edmund Soper, later became president of Ohio Wesleyan University and is now doing mission work in India. Dr. Elbert Russell, though in semi-retirement, is affiliated with the College of Gulf States, Mobile, Ala. Dr. Paul N. Garber is Bishop of the Richmond Area of the Methodist Church, and Dr. Harvie Branscomb is chancellor of Vanderbilt University. The late Dr. Paul Root died before taking office in 1947. Dr. Gilbert Rowe was acting dean 1946-47; and Dr. Harold A. Bosley, the previous Divinity Dean, resigned in January, 1950, to become pastor of the First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill.

The Duke Divinity School is one of ten approved seminaries of the Methodist Church in America. It is a member of the select Association of Theological Schools. This year the enrollment is nearly 200, the highest on record.

Dr. and Mrs. Cannon, the former Margaret Wagner Faw reside at 803 Second St., Durham. They have one son, Walter.

Alumnae Week End

Innovations Feature Alumnae Week End

Speakers who are members of the Duke faculty will be featured at the Eighth Annual Alumnae Week End on April 6, 7, and 8. Dr. Weston LaBarre, associate professor of anthropology, will lecture on a subject which will be of great interest to all alumnae attending the Week End. He will discuss "The Family, Its Functions and Its Future," at 8:00 p.m. Friday, April 6, in Room 201, East Duke Building.

Dr. Marianna Jenkins, associate dean of undergraduate instruction and assistant professor of art will speak on the controversial subject "Are Modern 'Isms' Modern?" Dr. Jenkins will speak in Asbury Building from 10:30-11:30 Saturday morning, April 7.

At the regular Sunday service for worship in the University Chapel at 11:00 a.m., April 8, Dr. Ray Petry, professor of Church History, will deliver the sermon, which will be designed with returning alumnae in mind.

In addition to hearing prominent Duke faculty members, alumnae will be able to return to the true college spirit for this Alumnae Week End, for it is being held while school is in session instead of during Spring Vacation as in previous years.

The program, which appeared in the February REGISTER, was planned with suggestions from alumnae in mind, and includes a variety of interesting activities, including a student panel, lectures by outstanding faculty members, programs and exhibits featuring music and art, and plenty of time for coffee hours and for visiting the campus.

The Friday evening coffee, to be held in East Duke Building at 9:00 o'clock is being sponsored by daughters of alumnae, who will be on campus at the same time as their mothers due to the change in time of the Week End this year. The Saturday coffee hour, at 9:30 p.m. in the Woman's College Union, is to be sponsored by Phi Kappa Delta.

Ensigns for Uncle Sam

Duke's NROTC Unit Plays Important Role

One voice ordered "Port ten. Two-one-0 revolutions." Another echoed the "Port ten" and a third repeated the "Two-one-0 revolutions."

"Steady. Midships;" ordered the first voice again. Then the command voice lost that sang-froid which seems to be so necessary on the Captain's bridge of a ship at sea, as it said "Time's up. Let's go ashore. I've got a date at Southgate in half an hour."

If this conversation didn't actually take place, it very well could have happened at Duke University. "Going ashore" would consist of walking upstairs and out of the Indoor Stadium, a portion of which has been set aside for the use of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit. The young Midshipmen who made the above statements would have been working out on the "attack teacher unit," a set of instruments which simulates actual shipboard conditions and is used to give future naval officers training in ship control and anti-submarine warfare.

The Navy has been at Duke since 1940, when a Naval ROTC unit was established here as a part of the pre-World War II military preparations program. When war finally did engulf the United States, the program had to be expanded tremendously, so Duke's small NROTC unit was absorbed by the mammoth V-12 program in 1942.

Under the leadership of Captain C. P. McFeeters, Duke's naval training units turned out approximately 3,500 naval officers between 1942 and 1945. With the end of the war, the V-12 program was terminated, but the NROTC unit was enlarged and retained.

The Holloway Plan

Before 1946, students entered NROTC training on a contract basis. They agreed to take the required number of courses in Naval Science, to devote one summer to a training cruise, and to accept upon graduation a commission in the Naval or Marine Corps Reserve. The Navy, in turn, agreed to supply the students with uniforms, Naval Science textbooks and equipment, and to pay them a subsistence allowance (currently 90 cents a day) during the last two years of their training.

But such a small number of these new officers exercised their prerogative of going on active duty, applying for a regular Navy commission, and becoming career officers, that the Navy adopted the Holloway Plan (Public Law 729) in 1946. About half of the Naval Cadets now at Duke are under the new plan, which provides college scholarships for young men who can meet certain rigorous physical and mental requirements.

Textbook knowledge is given a chance for practical application on summer cruises. Here students are given a taste of salt spray necessary to the making of an ensign. Above is a recent Duke group at sea.

Naval Science and Tactics are taught by experienced officers of the regular navy in Duke classrooms. NROTC classes are a part of every midshipman's academic course, as he prepares for service with fighting forces.

First they must show their mental proficiency by making a certain qualifying score on the Navy College Aptitude Test. Then they report for a physical examination which requires near-perfection for passing. Finally, those who are still in the running are interviewed and carefully screened for personality, attitude, etc., and are scored on these points. The top scorers for all tests are selected for the scholarships and sent to an NROTC college.

The Navy scholarships pay all college costs such as fees, tuition, and textbooks. The winners of the scholarships are appointed Midshipmen in the Navy, are furnished uniforms, and receive retainer pay at the rate of $50 per month, or more at certain colleges where personal expenses are higher. It is estimated that the value of a Navy scholarship at Duke is $1200 per year.

Upon graduation, the Midshipmen receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps or ensigns in the Navy, and go on active duty for from 15 to 24 months. They then have a choice of becoming career officers, or of giving up their regular commissions and becoming Reserve officers.

Training for the Midshipmen is the same as that of the contract students, except that the Midshipmen take two summer cruises instead of one.

This year's graduating class at Duke contains the first group to finish under the Holloway Plan. All 50 students in the class go on active duty immediately after graduation, 44 to the Navy and six to the Marine corps.

Though they are trained on dry land, except for the summer cruises, the Naval Cadets have the benefit of most of the equipment they would be using were they aboard ship. Their armory contains all the small arms currently used by Navy personnel, cut-away torpedoes, radios, and ship control and gun-aiming devices. Several large guns, turret-mounted just as they would be aboard ship, give the front of the Indoor Stadium a very war-like appearance.

Experienced Officers Teach

And most important of all, the men who train the Cadets have had considerable practical experience in their respective fields. Lt. Robert B. Gustafson, USN, the submarine officer, has served as Gunnery officer on the U.S.S. Nautilus, Engineering Officer of the U. S. S. Sirago, and Communications and Navigation Officer on the U. S. S. Sennete.

The head of the Duke Naval unit is Captain Ralph Earle, USN. He was commanding a destroyer at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack, and soon thereafter sailed out to harass Japanese shipping around Marshall, Wake, and Marcus Islands. Later he commanded a destroyer squadron, and was on the staff of the Pacific Fleet Destroyer Commander. Before coming to Duke, he was Captain of the cruiser Topeka.

Commander Clyde Van Arsdall, USN, second-in-command of the staff, has served on the Atlantic Amphibious Force Staff, and during the war commanded the Destroyers U. S. S. Perry and U. S. S. Anthony.

Lt. Robert P. Brewer, USN, the staff aviator, has flown with a fighter-bomber squadron on the U. S. S. Bunker Hill and with a fighter squadron on the U. S. S. Midway.

Captain James C. Fetters, USMC, was with the Third Marine Division at Okinawa and Iwo Jima, and after the war was in the Mediterranean area with the Sixth Fleet.

These men teach the three hours per week of Naval Science classes which each Naval Cadet is required to attend, and supervise the additional three hours each week of drill or practical work. They give instruction in a variety of subjects, such as navigation, ship control and stability, amphibious warfare, and the military history and policy of the United States.

Normal Student Life

Student life for the Naval Cadets is much the same as that of the ordinary students at Duke. During their four-year period of study, they must complete a total of 24 semester hours work in Naval Science, which, for one semester, is about the equivalent of a theory course with a laboratory period in any other department. Except for these periods, their time is their own, to carry on their other studies for a bachelor's degree. They are not even required to wear their uniforms except to class and drill. They are subject to very few disciplinary regulations, except, of course, that as future officers they are expected to conduct themselves as gentlemen at all times.

The sight of men in uniform covering the Duke campus is a constant reminder that the future is uncertain, that these young men, trained at Duke, may very soon have a very important and very direct influence upon world affairs. It is reassuring to see the air of seriousness with which they go about their drills and studies, conscientiously readying themselves for the responsibility civilization is soon to place on their shoulders.

Hoof 'n' Horn Show Draws Varied Student Talents

Women and dirty politics in a turn-of-the-century setting—that is the theme of Hoof 'n' Horn's spring musical, Belles and Ballots. The club's 11th annual original show is scheduled for production in Page Auditorium on the campus Thursday and Friday nights, April 19 and 20, at 8:00 p.m.

Hoof 'n' Horn is a campus musical comedy club, made up entirely of stage-struck undergraduates who each year write, direct, produce and act in an original musical production. Local enthusiasm has run so high in recent years that encore performances were demanded of two out of the last four shows.

Written by Ed Newman, from Irvington, N. J., Belles and Ballots traces, in song and dance, the campaign of the first woman candidate for mayor in a small mid-Western town in 1899. Eighteen songs, ranging from tender ballads through barbershop quartets to raucous campaign marches, were written especially for the club production. Comedy, songs, and original dance routines are all combined in the unique election campaign.

Lyrics for the songs were written by Bill King, Memphis, Tenn.; Paul Keye, Beverly Hills, Calif.; and Tom Love, Durham. Music was composed by Bud Fowler, Bronxville, N. Y., Tom Love, and Bill King.

Ed Naylor, Bayonne, N. J., will direct the two-act period comedy. Supervising and directing the designing and construction of new sets is technical director Mel Lord, West Caldwell, N. J. The student-built sets will include a small-town public square, the front porch of the woman campaigner, a picnic site in a park, and the smoke-filled back room of a saloon.

Starring in the lead role of a woman candidate for mayor is Jackie Hanna, Norfolk, Va. Al Raywid, Washington, D. C., will oppose her assertion of women's rights as the small-town political boss whose power is threatened. Denny Marks, New York City, in his role as a Russian butcher, will play both ends against the middle while trying to keep the women's business.

Gay McLawhorn, Winterville, N. C., and Bill Dean, Live Oak, Fla., will supply romantic interest when they are not quarreling over just what a woman's status is. Barbara George, High Point, N. C., will play a pig-tailed brat just kicked out of another finishing school, who tries to throw the election to suit her. Her unwilling lover and accomplice will be Max Cooke, Sarasota, Fla.

The only show in recent years to have a men's dancing chorus, Belles and Ballots will feature eight dancing couples in four production numbers. A mixed singing group of 20 will back up the comic plot in five chorus numbers, and a barbershop quartet and a ballet group will round out the large cast. A student orchestra will play for the production.

Ann Carol Hogue will direct the singing choruses and arrange the chorus numbers. Suzie Doherty is choreographer, and Don Hermance is orchestral director.

Ken Taylor, Statesville, N. C., is Hoof 'n' Horn president this year. Clif Cooke, Danvers, Mass., is business manager. Robert B. Fearing, '30, student activities director, is adviser to the group.

As proof of the merit of the music, Broadcast Music, Inc., New York publishers, will print a selection of songs from this year's show in a souvenir folio including pictures of the cast. BMI published similar booklets for the past Hoof 'n' Horn shows Lovintime and Flap 'er Sails.

Tickets for the production are $1.25 each and all seats are reserved. Tickets are now on sale and may be secured by writing Hoof 'n' Horn, Box 5224, Duke Station, Durham, N. C. Mail orders should include check or money order, a self-addressed stamped envelope, and designation of performance desired. Reservations may be made by calling Number 112, in Durham, Extension 484.

Joe College Days Return

A Joe College Days Week End, planned for April 19-21, will revive a pre-war tradition of springtime festivities on the Duke Campus. A Shoe 'n' Slipper dance featuring Les Brown, '36, and his "Band of Reuown" and the Hoof 'n' Horn musical, Belles and Ballots, will highlight the week end.

In addition to the dance and musical, a full program of entertainment is planned. There will be a parade through the business district of Durham on Friday, featuring the Joe College theme. After the parade, East Campus will hold open houses, and there will be field day events on the lawn of the main quadrangle. Coeds will decorate houses on East to carry out the theme, and prizes will be awarded for the best display. At 5:00 there will be an exchange supper for East and West Campus students in the Woman's College Union.

Following the second performance of Belles and Ballots Friday evening, students dressed in costumes satirizing college togs will attend an informal dance with music provided by Les Brown.

On Saturday, at the end of the fourth period, there will be a fried chicken, box lunch picnic served by the Union on the lawn of the main quadrangle of West campus.

Shoe 'n' Slipper is inviting all students to an outdoor concert by Les Brown from 1 to 3:30 Saturday afternoon in the dormitory quadrangle on West. Beginning at 2:30 will be a baseball game between Duke and Carolina, a track meet with North Carolina State, a lacrosse game with Washington College of Frederick, Md., and a new attraction for sports fans in Durham, a polo game.

At 8 o'clock Saturday night, students will don tuxedos and evening gowns for the Shoe 'n' Slipper formal dance.

Religious Emphasis Week Draws Student Interests

The past month has been a busy one for the Divinity School and for all students and faculty interested in Christian living. Religious Emphasis Week, Missionary Emphasis Week, and a Christian Career Clinic were held on the Duke Campus during the month of February.

The Methodist Student Fellowship sponsored a campus career clinic on Christian vocation February 4-6. Several outstanding speakers came to the campus to present the needs and opportunities for service in various fields of Christian endeavor, emphasizing both church vocations and Christian service for laymen. The aim of the clinic was to lead students toward preparation for and commitments to Christian service while in college.

Five prominent religious leaders addressed Divinity School students and faculty at the annual Missionary Emphasis Week February 6-9, which is designed to stimulate student-faculty interest in mission work and to recruit new missionaries. There are about 25 Duke alumni now serving as missionaries of the Methodist Church.

This year's program was under the direction of Dr. James Cannon III, dean of the Divinity School, and Donal Squires, chairman of the Missions Committee, Divinity School Student Assembly. Featured speakers were Dr. Eugene L. Smith, executive secretary of the Division of Foreign Missions of the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church, New York City; Dr. Karl Quimby, educational secretary of the Board; Dr. J. A. Engle, executive secretary of the Board's Division of Education and Cultivation; the Reverend M. O. Williams, secretary of the Board's Department of Missionary Personnel; and the Reverend Archer R. Turner, B.D., '45, former Methodist missionary to Korea. The Missionary Emphasis Week ended with a service of thanksgiving and intercession for Duke missionaries in service led by Professor James T. Cleland, preacher to the University.

Students and faculty alike joined in the activities of the annual Religious Emphasis Week, held February 18 to 21. The theme of the week this year was "Is Life a Gamble, Chance or Certainty?"

Bishop Gerald Kennedy, of Portland, Ore., and the Reverend Robert H. Hamill of Burlington, Iowa, were leaders of the four-day program. North Carolina ministers participating in Religious Emphasis Week included Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh, and Father John Weidinger and Rabbi Samuel Perlman of Chapel Hill. Patt McAllister and Jack Blackburn were student co-chairmen of the Steering Committee for the Week.

President Edens presided at the initial service, which was held in the University Chapel. Delivering the sermon on "Gamblers At the Cross" was Bishop Kennedy. Mr. Hamill, speaking on "The Dead Gods and the Living God," was featured at an interdenominational meeting that evening. Following the usual Sunday Night Sing, a question period was held, with Bishop Kennedy answering the questions.

Monday's activities featured a panel by Duke faculty members on "The Remedy for Draftitis—Conflicting Attitudes in a Time of Crisis"; a panel discussion on "Conflicting Philosophies" by Dr. Theodore Ropp, associate professor of history; Dr. Leslie B. Hohman, professor

Extra-Curricular Courses

Extra-curricular courses in the fields of nutrition, recreation leadership, and French, which are intended to prepare coeds for service to the community in the event of a national emergency, are now being made available to students in the Woman's College of Duke University.

These courses do not receive academic credit. They are comparable to the nurses' aid program, and no fees are charged. All the classes are necessarily limited in number of attendance, and interested students are making their applications through house counsellors.

The nutrition course of 12 lessons concerns community feeding. It is to be conducted by Miss Isabelle Howe, dietician, and Miss Mary McCormie, visiting instructor in physical education, each Tuesday and Thursday evening. The group will cover such subjects as balancing a menu, economics of foods and food preparation. The class will work in units planning a series of meals to be fed to large groups, and the course will culminate in a practical application of feeding the entire campus, possibly on Kite Day in April.

Mrs. Martha G. Swasey, assistant professor of physical education, will conduct the course in recreation leadership which will be taught every Thursday evening. This course will cover such topics as leading games, singing, dramatics, teaching square dancing and ballroom dancing, and crafts.

The French project under the leadership of Jean-Jacques Demorest, assistant professor of Romance Languages, is designed for those who wish additional opportunities in French for use in travel, foreign study, teaching, or as a background for study toward filling such positions as interpreter, translator, or secretary in government or overseas service. Only those who have completed or are currently taking French 52 are eligible.

Local Association Meetings

New York

A turkey dinner and a few words of greeting from Dr. Paul M. Gross, vice-president in the Educational Division and dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, were featured at the annual banquet of the New York Alumni Association on February 16.

The banquet and dance was held in the Wedgwood Room and Ballroom of the Beekman Tower Hotel. The Executive Committee went all out to give the alumni a social event they will long remember. Uninterrupted dancing was a highlight of the event, and the business meeting was limited to thirty minutes. Dress was informal and all enjoyed an evening of fun and relaxation, getting together with old friends, meeting fellow alumni, and hearing about Duke doings.

Union-Anson County

A large group of alumni in Union and Anson counties met on February 19 at the Methodist Church in Monroe, N. C., for the Association's annual dinner meeting. S. Glenn Hawfield, '15, presided over the meeting and was in charge of the arrangements.

Dr. Charles E. Jordan, '23, Vice-President in the Division of Public Relations and Secretary of the University represented Duke and spoke on the University's heritage, its history and its present needs. Thomas D. Donegan of the Alumni Office staff accompanied Dr. Jordan to the meeting and showed the gathering movies of the 1950 Duke-Pittsburgh game.

Catawba County

The annual dinner meeting of alumni in Catawba County was held on February 21 at the Lake Hickory Country Club. Sixty-six members and their guests attended with Clinton T. Andrews, '26, vice-president of the chapter presiding in the absence of R. E. "Buddy" Luper, '47. Principal speakers for the occasion were Charles A. Dukes, '29, director of Alumni Affairs, and Dan W. Hill, '39, assistant to Director of Athletics. Mr. Dukes addressed the group on the University's past, present and future and Mr. Hill discussed Duke sports, showing a film of the 1950 Duke-North Carolina football game.

Attorney G. Andrew Warlick, '13, of Newton, former state senator from this district, was elected president of the Catawba alumni group for the coming year. Other officers named were Dr. A. L. Ormond, '24, of Hickory, vice-president; Dorothy Long Isenhower (Mrs. Sam), '40, of Newton, and Mary Abernathy Rader (Mrs. William), '41, secretary-treasurer; and Mary Henderson Willis (Mrs. Emmett), '36, of Hickory and Evelyn Bolick Wanzer (Mrs. C. R.), '40, of Conover, representatives of the Alumni Council.

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Philadelphia, Pa., Duke Alumni Association has had a busy winter. Their largest social venture of the season was their first annual dance held at Plymouth Country Club, Norristown, Pa., on February 16. Approximately 70 Duke alumni and their friends attended the gala affair. The orchestra provided a fine variety of music to suit everyone's taste. Highlights of the occasion included a jitterbug contest, elimination dances, and spot dances. A midnight snack provided a perfect climax for the evening.

The 1951 officers for the Duke University Alumni Association of Philadelphia and vicinity are: Frederick Mann, Jr., B.S.M.E. '45, president; Dewey Robins, '25, vice-president; Margaretta Aeugle, '44, secretary; Gordon Gerber, '43, treasurer; and Nancy Hunter, '46, corresponding secretary.

Sunday School Teaching Results Are Questioned

Hampton M. Jarrell, Ph.D. '32, is the author of an article published in the December, 1950, Atlantic entitled "Sunday Schools Don't Teach." As a professor of English at Winthrop College in South Carolina since 1932 he had learned that a huge majority of his students were almost completely lacking in knowledge of Biblical history and personalities, and upon further investigation he found that many were vague and confused about their religious and ethical beliefs. He was more puzzled, he said, to learn that many of these students had attended Sunday School regularly, some for as long as 15 years.

Seeking the cause for this deficiency, Dr. Jarrell read all the Sunday School literature then in use in the young peoples' departments of his home Methodist church, and found, not studies on the basic Christian principles, nor a systematic revelation of a religious heritage, but lessons in sociology, political science, economics, and international relations, expounded with an assurance of divine authority which makes easy the solution of the most complex social problems.

The Christian Church has, at various times in history, weakened its hold on men's minds by trying to make dogmatic theology a substitute for the natural sciences, says Dr. Jarrell, and now many churches are making the same mistake with the social sciences.

Far too often theology offers a seductive shortcut to social wisdom that makes the way of knowledge look narrow, rough, and a long way around, with the added implication that those who refuse to take this short-cut are damned.

If the Sunday Schools are to do their job, he concludes, they must return to the long-abandoned policy of educating children in fundamental Christian principles.

Promoted to Colonel

Henry H. Rogers, A.M. '29, has been promoted to the rank of colonel at United States Army European Command headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany. He is chief of the scientific and technical section of the Intelligence division at Command headquarters.

Colonel Rogers entered the Army in September, 1941. During World War II he served in the Pacific Theater of Operations as commanding officer of an infantry battalion of the 98th division. He returned to the United States in March, 1946, and became an instructor at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He arrived in the European Command in August, 1949.

With the colonel in Heidelberg are his wife, Susan, their two children, David, 15, and Cornelia, 13, and Mrs. Rogers' mother, Mrs. Susan A. Porterfield.

Career of the Rev. Hinohara Leaves Imprint on Japanese

In September of 1948 an interesting letter reached the Alumni Office. It came from Japan, and contained an epic apology from a graduate of Trinity College for "not having done my duty as one of Duke's sons."

The author, Zensuke Hinohara, '03, A.M. '04, then 71 years of age, went on to explain that he had been rather busy since his graduation and had not been able to do anything about his obligations to his alma mater, but, he said, "Ever since I left Trinity 43 years ago I have never failed to be deeply conscious that I am its own old boy and owe to it so much for what I am today."

Mr. Hinohara had, indeed, been rather busy, nor has his pace slackened during the past two and one-half difficult years. He had been actively preaching during the whole intervening time since his graduation and had raised funds for the construction of three large churches (and in Japan this is no easy task). He had been a college president for 12 years, and for three years was the executive secretary of the United Church of Christ in Japan, a council made up of representatives of all the Christian churches there. At the time of the letter, he was serving as president of the Ministers' Association of the Tokyo district, which has over 300 churches.

He had returned to America but twice since his graduation from Duke—once for some further study at Union Theological Seminary in New York, in 1911, and again to rest and regain the health he had lost in working too hard for the construction of the Kobe Central Methodist Church in 1925. That year he returned to Duke for a visit, and led the prayer at Commencement.

War Brings Silence

When Mr. Hinohara first came to Duke in 1901, he formed fast friendships with the late Edward O. Egerton, '03, and Frank N. Egerton, '09, A.M. '11, now on the Duke faculty. He went home with them during holidays, where he met and captivated the other members of the Egerton family. After his return to Japan he wrote to them often, and visited them during subsequent stays in America. Later, however, his duties increased and took such a hold on him that his letters became less frequent and finally stopped altogether. Friends in America thereafter had no news of him for many years, except for a story in a Methodist Missionary magazine which told of his service as president of the Methodist College for Girls at Hiroshima, and messages from occasional visitors to Japan who found him hard at work.

The war closed the curtain of communication completely. And in 1945, when the news came that almost 900 girls at the Hiroshima Girls' College were casualties in the atom bomb explosion, the Egertons thought that they would hear no more of their friend.

But in 1947 the same missionary magazine again brought news to his friends through a picture and information that he was then pastor of a church in Tokyo. He had reached the age of 65 in 1942, and so had been retired as president of the college before the bombing. Unwilling to stop preaching, however, he had taken a pastorate in a small chapel in Tokyo, had built up the congregation so much that the old meeting place was outgrown, and so was supervising the financing and construction of a new, larger church and parsonage.

When Mrs. Blanche Egerton Baker, a younger sister of the boys Zensuke had known at Trinity, wrote to him, he answered quickly and enthusiastically. In the following months several letters were exchanged, and Zensuke told all that had befallen him since his student days.

A Sudden Decision

When he first came to America he had planned to prepare himself to teach English and English Literature in Japan. His decision to go into the ministry came about in this way: He was in church, and had just heard the pastor make a request for contributions to the missionary fund. "When the offering was announced and the plates were traveling from seat to seat, I felt my very last silver coin, (a quarter) in my pocket for my offering, while others had so much more. I was so ashamed of myself and said to myself, 'Is that all that you can give to the Lord for the very service you have to render for your own country while all others are doing even more for your country and for your unsaved people? Oh Lord, do thou accept this my last coin with this very myself.'"

Zensuke Hinohara pledged himself that morning to become a preacher and pastor, and he has been that from 1906 to the present. Even when appointed president of a college, he accepted on condition that he could serve as the college chaplain also.

During his stay at Hiroshima, Hinohara secured official recognition for the college, and obtained a new, larger, and more pleasant site for it, on which it was reconstructed after the war. He had a continuous struggle against the "militaristic pressure," for the college was located between a great army and a great naval base. In spite of repressing influences, Hinohara continued the daily chapel services, and preached every Sunday in the college church.

Telling of his present work, he has said: "After I finished my term of service at Hiroshima eight years ago, I came up to Tokyo with my wife and our youngest daughter Tamy, and accepted the place as pastor of Tamagawa-Heian (Peace) church. Despite the acute situation of the war, my congregation kept on growing until the joint room proved inadequate. A year ago we completed both a new church building and parsonage to move in. My congregation is not well off financially. But they have done more than they could afford, being self-sacrificingly responsible for the costly church lot and church building, one of the very best in the country."

Mr. Hinohara promised his congregation he would finance one wing of the church and the whole parsonage himself, if they could raise the funds for the lot and the rest of the church. He also raised the money for the church furniture.

Mrs. Baker, in one of her letters, asked the minister what she could send him. He told her that they needed most of all sugar, coffee, and baking powder, and asked also for a typewriter ribbon, a bottle of ink, shaving soap, and especially some tooth powder, "which I so enjoy to use when my heavily scheduled day's work is over late at night just before my last talk with my Abba Father in Heaven."

When the package came, it was something Americans regard as a simple necessity for which Hinohara made his most elaborate thanks—dental cream. It pleased him, he said, so much that he always spent a few minutes by his window in grateful prayer after using it.

Now 74 years old, this alumnus still puts in more than a day's work each day. He prepares daily devotionals and Bible studies for distribution to the Methodist churches in Japan, carries out his duties as executive secretary of the United Church of Christ in Japan and as pastor of his church.

And also, he writes sadly, now again he prays for peace each day.

New Mechanical "Brain" Is Made

Donald Jacobs, A.M. '37, of Bethesda, Md., who founded the Jacobs Instrument Company about three years ago, has developed a revolutionary new digital computer, or "electrical brain," which, though no bigger than an overnight bag, solves complicated equations in millionths of a second.

The machine is the "Jaincomp A." Weighing forty pounds, it is a miniature variation of the giant electrical brains which are used by great research laboratories to solve the most complicated mathematical problems.

Mr. Jacobs says that the machine "offers for the first time to industry an ultra-high-speed and exceedingly accurate electronic brain for controlling operations of great complexity." Accuracies of one part in a billion can be obtained, and as for speed, the slowest unit of the Jaincomp can add two sixteen-digit numbers in forty-eight millionths of a second.

Before founding his company, Jacobs was with the Bureau of Standards, the U. S. Naval Observatory, and the North American Aviation Company. In addition to his degree from Duke, he holds degrees from Rutgers University and the University of Rochester.

Alumni Are Rotary Governors

Two alumni of Duke University, Mark F. Hawthorne, M.Ed. '40, of Anderson, S. C., and Walter T. Nau, A.M. '42, Ph.D. '49, of Hickory, N. C., are District Governors of Rotary International, worldwide service organization, for the present year.

Their duties include coordinating the activities of all the Clubs in their respective Rotary Districts and visits to each of the Clubs to offer advice and assistance in Rotary service work and administration.

Mr. Hawthorne, who is superintendent of schools in Anderson, assists 48 Rotary Clubs in his State. He is a past president of two local Rotary Clubs, in Lancaster, S. C., and Anderson, and is very active in all the civic work of his town.

Dr. Nau has been professor of modern languages at Lenoir-Rhyne College since 1945. He assists 35 Rotary Clubs in one of the four Districts in North Carolina. Born in Crishnagiri, India, Dr. Nau was

Washington Law Alumni

The Law School Alumni Association of Washington, D. C., has tentatively selected O'Donnell's Restaurant, 1209 E Street, N.W., Washington, as the regular place at which they will hold monthly luncheon meetings on the first Monday of each month at 12:30 p.m. The Association will be glad to have other Duke alumni join them for luncheon when they are in Washington.

a Lutheran minister for 15 years before accepting his present position. He is also a past president of the Hickory Rotary Club.

Alumna Will Retire as Dean

Leah Boddie, A.M. '25, is the first and only dean of students at New Jersey College for Women, Rutgers University. At the end of this academic year, she plans to retire.

Miss Boddie was appointed to the young institution in 1926 when the enrollment was 697. This year, as she rounds out a quarter of a century of devoted service, the enrollment has increased to 1,325.

Under her guidance, a student life counselling program has been built up which has as its primary duty making the general college experience a positive contribution to mature living. Dean Boddie and her staff, an assistant to the dean and seven directors of student life, have worked closely with every department of the College, including the teaching staff. They have co-ordinated all phases of counselling and directed this knowledge toward the complete development of the individual student.

A native of Durham, Dean Boddie received her bachelor's degree from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina and her master's degree from Duke. Before accepting the position at the New Jersey College for Women, she served as dean of women at the Duke University Summer School, as a history teacher in the Durham High School, and as principal of a grammar school in Durham.

Dean Boddie has been active in the National Association of Deans of Women. She was co-founder and first president of the New Jersey Association of Deans of Women, now the New Jersey Association of Deans and Counselors.

Campaign Goes Over $6,000,000 Mark

Total Counts Gifts Offered if Matching Sums Are Given

Early this month the Duke University Development Campaign climbed over the $6,000,000 mark, three-fourths of the way to the 1950-51 goal of $8,650,000 and half way to the ultimate goal of $12,000,000.

The gift that brought the total up over the mid-way hurdle, and turned the current campaign into the home stretch of its final quarter, was one of less than $100 from an alumnus recently graduated and now residing some 2,000 miles from the Duke campus. The note received with it was typical of many received on other days with other gifts: "This is a token of what Duke has meant to me—and my hope that it will mean as much to others in years ahead."

The jubilation caused in campaign headquarters by this significant milestone brought this remark from University Vice-President Charles E. Jordan: "This is really illustrative of what smaller gifts mean to the campaign. Yesterday we were counting five millions of dollars—today it is six."

The epic-making gift was quickly followed, in subsequent mails, by other contributions that began to push the campaign onward and upward toward its seventh million and toward the goals in "Brains, Books, and Brieks" that will make Duke greater in its service to "the future hour."

PROGRESS—AT A GLANCE

Below, in the form of a simple arithmetic problem, is the story of the progress made by the Duke University Development Campaign to date and the progress that must be made within the next three months to reach the 1950-51 goal of $8,650,000.

The greater portion of the balance remaining to be raised must come from individual alumni and friends through local campaigns, in gifts both large and small. Many must give, for now success lies in numbers—the number of those who will share in Duke's future.

Gifts during preliminary phase (1949-50).....	$2,000,000.00
(plus) Gifts from the City of Durham Campaign.....	238,860.00
(plus) Gifts from Faculty-Staff Campaigns.....	90,272.58
(plus) Gifts from Alumni-Friends Campaigns to date.....	704,452.47
(plus) Gifts contingent upon matching amounts.....	3,000,000.00
TOTALLING.....	$6,033,585.05
(plus) The Amount Still to Be Raised by June 30.....	$2,616,414.95
TOTALLING.....	$8,650,000.00

Matching Money is Needed

Half of the $6,000,000 comes from the two contingent gifts made some weeks ago by the General Education Board and an anonymous donor. Each of these gifts, it will be recalled, was for $1,500,000, and receipt by the University was made conditional upon alumni and friends raising a dollar-for-dollar matching amount.

The campaign to raise this matching amount is, according to reports from local chairmen throughout the nation, moving at an encouraging rate.

In every major center in North Carolina campaigns among alumni and friends are either already well under way or scheduled for the very immediate future. In North Carolina districts, north, east, south, and west, alumni leaders are rapidly completing arrangements for general canvasses within the next few weeks.

Meanwhile, the rest of the country is keeping pace. While campaign organizations were started later in regions more distant from the campus, early results indicate that similar successes can be anticipated. Arrangements are being made for early canvasses in the big cities where alumni live in large numbers, and already individual campaigners in less densely populated areas are out visiting fellow alumni, seeking and receiving gifts for "a greater Duke."

Campaign News Items

Most recent campaign events include the opening of the Guilford County campaign in Greensboro on February 16 and in High Point on March 5. Kenneth M. Brim, '20, is Guilford chairman and Floyd C. Caveness, '18, and Charles L. Kearns, '32, are general canvass chairmen in Greensboro and High Point respectively. Early reports from Guilford indicate that the campaign is moving forward with extremely promising results.

Faculty-Staff Campaigns Pass $90,000

The faculty and staff campaigns for the Development Program, begun the first of the year, have now passed $90,000. Latest figures announced by Dr. Frank T. DeVyer, chairman of the faculty drive, were $90,976.58 from 554 contributors.

The results of this University campaign have been praised by President Edens as being "most clearly indicative of the value of our efforts to prepare Duke for a future of greater service. Men and women right here on the campus are willing to sacrifice in order to see the University move ahead."

The campus campaign was requested by members of faculties and staffs who wanted to share in the program being pushed forward by alumni and friends. Dr. DeVyer was made chairman of the campaign committee and Walter G. Cooper was named vice chairman in charge of staff solicitation.

Early this month North Carolina Districts Six and Ten (both in the east central part of the State) held a joint meeting of top leaders to prepare for opening their campaigns in the immediate future. Presiding at this meeting was E. N. Brower, '15, chairman of District Ten. President Edens spoke to the approximately 65 campaign leaders gathered for the occasion, and he stressed the need that the University has for the devoted support of each individual alumnus. Chairman of District Six is F. J. Boling, '23.

New Chairmen

Five new Development Campaign local chairmen have accepted appointments within the past few weeks. They are J.

Campaign

On these two pages appear approximately half of the Duke men who are serving throughout the United States as Development Campaign local chairmen. Other chairmen will appear in the April issue of the REGISTER.

These alumni are the leaders of campaigns for Duke in North Carolina key counties are districts, in national regions and key areas in other states. Some have already completed their organizations and now have campaigns underway. Others are in the process of selecting other alumni to help conduct campaigns and are forming committees to begin solicitation.

Every effort is being made to push local campaigns to a successful conclusion by the first week in June, so that reports can be made at Commencement.

The fourteen local chairmen appearing here head campaign organizations scattered among seven states. Chairmen have now been appointed in almost every area where there is a strong concentration of

March has been a busy campaign

Chairmen

Duke men and women, and this includes centers in approximately 20 states.

The chairmen pictured here, others whose photos will appear in subsequent issues, and alumnae and alumni who have volunteered to serve with them in this important campaign for Duke, are doing a magnificent job for the University. This is the first time in Duke's history that large numbers of alumni have been asked to devote a substantial amount of time to work for the University, and the way in which the local area, county, district, and region jobs have been undertaken is indicative of Duke's alumni strength.

Men accepting positions as chairmen are among the University's most outstanding former students and are business and civic leaders in their home communities. They are unselfishly taking time out from other important pursuits to work for Duke's future welfare. For this they are earning the appreciation of the University and of its other alumni.

month, particularly among out-of-state groups.

On March 14, Clay Doss, '14, was host at a luncheon for campaign leaders in Detroit, Mich., where Lee Durham, '21, is chairman. On March 19 leaders of Northwest South Carolina, which area is headed by W. Herbert Smith, '23, met in Greenville, and on March 20 campaigners of the Atlanta, Ga., area met in Atlanta for a session presided over by E. Ralph Paris, '14. President Edens spoke at all of these meetings.

Durham County Kick-off

Kick-off dinner for the Durham County Alumni Campaign was to take place on March 29 in West Campus Union, with County Chairman Sterling Nicholson, '22, scheduled to preside. General canvass chairman for Durham is Russell Y. Cooke, '38.

There are approximately 1,200 alumni and alumnae in Durham County, making it, naturally enough, the largest concentration of Duke people anywhere. The alumni campaign is complete and separate from the Durham City Campaign of last fall, since in that drive only non-alumni friends were asked to give.

Durham County's kick-off leaves only one major center in North Carolina, Wake County and Raleigh, left to go before Commencement, and that campaign is scheduled to begin soon.

Blue Devils Place Second in Southern Conference Tournament

Duke Turns to Baseball and Spring Football Practice

Duke University's basketball team ended its 1950-51 season in a blaze of glory during the first week of March by going to the finals of the Southern Conference tournament at Raleigh, N. C., before being eliminated by champion N. C. State 67-63.

The team, which was the highest scoring aggregation in the history of the University, ended the season with an over-all record of 20 wins and 13 losses. The team scored 2,351 points, for an average of 71.2 points per contest.

Individual scorers for the Blue Devils were paced, of course, by All-America Dick Groat, who tallied a total of 831 points to break a national scoring mark. He averaged 25.2 points per game. Dick Crowder was second in the Duke scoring with 283 points, while Captain Scotty York had 259, Bill Fleming had 234, Kes Deimling had 221, Dayton Allen had 166, Jim Kulpan had 122, Dick Johnson had 93 and Dick Latimer had 76.

Duke ended its regular season on February 23 by collecting a valuable win over rival North Carolina by 84-72. The win was sweet revenge for the Duke team since the loss for Carolina eliminated the Tar Heels from the Southern Conference tourney running, and made up for a similar loss the Dukes had suffered at the hands of Carolina in 1949 that eliminated Duke from the tournament.

Dick Groat set a new national scoring record by getting 29 points against North Carolina and running his season's total to 746. That total broke the previous high of 740 points, set by William and Mary's Chet Giermak in 1949. Runners-up in the scoring for Duke were Bill Fleming and Scotty York, each with 12 points.

The win over North Carolina gave the Blue Devils a 14-6 record for the Southern Conference season and a tie for third place with William and Mary in the loop standings.

Entering the Southern Conference tournament at Raleigh on March 1, the Blue Devils edged Virginia Tech 64-61 after a close battle all the way. Groat led the scoring with 23 points, while Dick Johnson, a much improved Duke guard, had 11 points and Keston Deimling had 10.

Duke had another close battle in the Southern Conference tournament's semi-final round. The Devils edged William and Mary by a 71-69. Groat scored 31 points to tie the Conference tourney record and ran his season total to exactly 800 points. Runner-up in the Duke scoring was Bill Fleming with 14 points. Fleming played a great rebound game, grabbing 17 bad shots. Dick Johnson added eight points for the Devils.

Groat played another remarkable game against N. C. State in the tourney finals, scoring 31 points again to re-tie the tourney scoring record (held by Sammy Ranzino of N. C. State and Chet Giermak of William and Mary for a regulation game). Runners-up in the Duke scoring as the Devils dropped a 67-63 decision were Bill Fleming with nine, Scotty York with eight and Johnson with six.

Groat was elected the tournament's outstanding player by a 37-4 count of the sportswriters and also made the all-tourney first team. Scotty York made the tourney's second team.

In our time off we go to art exhibits or concerts, the opportunities for which are so unending and plentiful that making a choice becomes a chore. We have taken short week-end trips to such tourist attractions as Chartres, Fontainebleau, Versailles, and the Forest of Compiègne in our little Renault. Last week we ventured further to Normandy and saw the badly destroyed Caen and Rouen, and the invasion beaches at Arromanches and Omaha Beach, with Allied ships strewn along the bottom. Up on top of the hill at Omaha Beach, 10,000 white American crosses serve as a simple reminder of what invasions actually consist. The countryside of Normandy and the small towns along the coast were more prosperous and more charming than those nearer to Paris, and we felt we had seen a little of the true France.

But more important than the details of our existence, we think, are our impressions of France's relations with the world. Without Western Europe and its productivity, despite President Hoover and the new isolationists, the United States would find itself in a productive minority, as well as in a minority as far as the manpower of the world is concerned. While Germany is the key to Europe, at the present time France is the key to what will become of Germany. The French today can be divided into three categories, our friends, the "neutralistes," and the communists. As long as we give the majority of French, who are at present with us, full evidence of our good faith and intentions, we may keep a friendly France. The eminent danger is not from the Communists, who keep a firm but non-growing corps of supporters; it is from our present friends who may decide it would be better to face the uncertain future of "neutralisme" with fatalism than to risk all by supporting an American policy that may desert them in the end. We must of necessity change our idea of remaking the world in our own image or else letting it slide down the drain.

From the French papers, as they report the world to us, the question arises: Can the United States rise to the stature necessary for its responsibilities? Can GM refuse to freeze its prices, or the UAW defy wage stabilization while the French risk a momentary invasion from the East? "Perhaps better slow bolshevization than another Occupation and Liberation," says the Monde, whose politics compare about with the old New York Sun. Can our complacent conservatives think the "American Way" will interest a still underpaid French worker who nevertheless has had social security and national hospital insurance since the turn of the century? To the average Frenchman (not even counting the Communists, of course) MacArthur is an over-ambitious American general who obeys no orders but his own and has sacrificed the peace to his personal code of imperialism; the Republican surge in America was a return to the ostrich-days of the nineteen-twenties; and Dean Acheson is now a symbol whose departure will signalize our desertion of Western Europe. The Communists know how to fill a vacuum. Are we going to continue to create them? Perhaps we can continue to carry on in our muddled way, or even retire to our shell, but while we do, we shall be losing more of our friends to the "neutralistes," and more of the "neutralistes" to the strong men who claim they have history on their side.

Our best regards from France to all of you, and best wishes for a Happier New Year.

Blue-White Grid Game

Blue Devil seniors and former stars will meet next season's varsity in the first annual Blue-White football game on Saturday, April 14. Kick-off in the game sponsored by the Varsity-D Club is set for 3:30 in Duke Stadium.

Graduating stars of last fall, including Billy Cox, Jack Mounie, Tommy Powers, Ed Kavanaugh, Jim Gibson, Mike Souchak and others are expected to don the blue for the last time. Also invited to play are stars of other years who are now living nearby or are on the coaching staff. Tickets, sold at the gate, will be one dollar.

Dr. Bolmeier Questions Grading System

The familiar report card that Junior hides from Dad and Mom until the family hairbrushes and razor straps are concealed is an outmoded relic according to Dr. E. C. Bolmeier of the Duke education department.

In "The School Review," Dr. Bolmeier writes that the conventional report card is good for "separating the sheep from the goats," but it fails to encourage the pupil.

The old-fashioned system of a single letter denoting the "grade" of primary or secondary school student makes grading a simple task for the teacher, but does not help the pupil, he points out. Another danger is that often teachers may let personal whims and dislikes creep into their grading when only a single mark is put down in each subject.

"The real purpose of marks should be to help the pupil by pointing up his relative strengths and weaknesses, his special interests, aptitudes, and study habits," the Duke professor says. "A good reporting system will aid parents and counselors in giving sensible advice and will also encourage all pupils, regardless of varying abilities."

Dr. Bolmeier's criticism is constructive, however, for he gives a prescription for report card improvements.

(1) Give a more detailed picture of the pupil's progress than is possible with single marks such as "A," "B," "C," or "D." Pupils should be graded in each subject on such things as achievement on tests, quality or recitation, persistence for mastery, and self-reliance in work.

(2) Give grades in a way that will prevent uncertainty or confusion. Terms such as "very high," "high," "average," "low," and "very low," are understood by everyone. Then, he says, if necessary, these markings can easily be changed to the usual alphabetical grades required by colleges for entrance transcripts.

(3) Occasional changes may improve the system after it has been used for some time. A committee of teachers and school officials should study the system each year and work out revisions.

He is also the author of Industrial Geography and has collaborated with other economists on a series of textbooks.

Clarice M. Bowman, '31, A.M. '37, is the author of a new book, Restoring Worship, just published by the Abingdon-Cokesbury Press of New York and Nashville.

Miss Bowman's book will be one of the few to cover the entire field of worship, and is intended as a tool and an inspiration for ministers, church education leaders, and parents of all denominations who want to guide others to vital worship.

A native of Mount Airy, N. C., Miss Bowman was a Phi Beta Kappa and a Kappa Delta Pi at Duke. She has also done some graduate work at Yale University, consisting mostly of special courses in worship. W. W. Norton and Company, Publisher

Outstanding 17-century writing has been compiled and edited by Dr. R. Florence Brinkley, Dean of the Woman's College of Duke University and professor of English. Published by W. W. Norton and Co., New York City, the 900-page volume is a companion piece to Dr. Brinkley's anthology English Poetry of the Seventeenth Century.

Selections in the prose anthology represent well-known writings from that period, such as diaries, prose lyrics, essays, and autobiography. The volume also includes biographical sketches of the writers represented and an introductory essay by Dr. Brinkley.

The earlier poetry anthology is now being published in a new format to match the prose volume. It has won increasing critical acclaim as a comprehensive and competently edited anthology for students of 17th-century poetry.

Dr. Brinkley is recognized as an outstanding authority on the literature of the 1600's. She is also the author of Nathan Field, the Actor-Playwright and The Arthurian Legend in the Seventeenth Century. Her articles and reviews have appeared in well-known scholarly journals, and she is active in leading professional societies.

Formerly chairman of the English Department at Goucher College, Dr. Brinkley joined the Duke administrative staff in 1947 after 14 months literary research in England.

Rare Biblical Manuscript

A rare, 800-year old manuscript of the Four Gospels in Greek has been acquired by the Duke University Library, Dr. Benjamin E. Powell, librarian, announced recently. The new acquisition brings Duke's total of rare texts of this type to 15 and places the library fourth in the nation in such holdings.

Written about 1150, A.D., the 238-page manuscript is of special interest to scholars because it contains original editing marks made by a monastic "corrector" and shows how different religious views influenced the exact wording of the Bible.

The book was discovered in Egypt by Dr. Kenneth W. Clark, professor of New Testament, while on a special project in the Near East recently. He purchased it from a Greek book collector living in Alexandria, Egypt.

Many requests for microfilms of the book have already come in from scholars all over the country, says Dr. Powell, and these are being filled as quickly as possible.

Operations Performed to Soothing Music

Try having your next operation to the tune of Beethoven's Fifth or the crooning of Vaughn Monroe. It is possible, for Duke doctors have been playing soft, soothing music in operating rooms to make operations easier for patients and speed up their recovery.

Duke plastic surgeons say that operative patients who are under local, spinal or regional anesthetics, and therefore fully conscious during the operation, tend to forget about themselves and relax under the spell of their favorite melodies.

The patients are equipped with comfortable, cushioned earphones which keep out all operating room noises, while an automatic record-player nearby plays favorite selections. Long playing records eliminate the need for frequent adjustments of the phonograph. Besides helping the patients, the music seems to be a good morale booster for the operating room staff. It "relieves the tension" and creates a better atmosphere, the doctors reported.

Although music has long been used at Duke in the children's wards and in patients' rooms to make convalescence easier and shorter by relieving anxiety and as a source of recreation, it has only recently been tried in the operating rooms where often anxiety and worry are strongest. After trying the new technique with several hundred patients from all walks of life, both sexes and all age groups, the doctors were able to make several concrete conclusions about the effects of music. Results of the study are described in Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery by Drs. Kenneth L. Pickrell, James T. Metzger, N. John Wilde, T. Ray Broadbent, and Benjamin F. Edwards.

It was discovered that soft, soothing melodious orchestrations and vocals were favorites, with Wayne King, Sammy Kaye and Vaughn Monroe being most popular. Hymns, spirituals and marching music ranked lowest on the list, probably, the doctors report, because they increased the emotional tension. News broadcasts were informative and pleasing to some patients, but quite distressing to others. This, of course, depended upon the content. Children were most fond of stories and special readings and children's music. The youngsters responded enthusiastically to the idea. According to the doctors, their minds became preoccupied, thereby facilitating the change of painful dressings or the induction of anesthesia.

Types of music used in the study were symphonies, classics, opera, piano, violin and piano, string quartets, martial and band music, hymns, spirituals, jazz, swing, scores from musicals, westerns, hillbilly, theme songs, old favorites, and the current classics and popular music. There seemed to be little difference in reaction among the patients except for their own personal tastes in music. The doctors did discover that "while women have less physical resistance and are more susceptible to nervous disturbances than men, they are as a group more tolerant and adapt themselves more readily to hospital routines."

Grant Aids Polio Research

With the aid of a March of Dimes grant of $17,200 Duke University scientists will pursue their studies of muscle action following attack by polio.

The grant, announced by Basil O'Conner, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, is a part of the million and a half dollars which the Foundation is turning over to universities and research centers in 16 states and Canada for continuing study of the dread disease. The newly approved research projects will also include attempts to develop an effective vaccine for polio, search for a chemical agent that will prevent the virus from damaging nerve cells, development of a rapid diagnostic polio test, and the preparation of a polio antiserum that will increase an individual's resistance to paralysis.

The Duke funds will be under the direction of Dr. J. E. Markee, professor of anatomy. In 1945, Dr. Markee began conducting studies and experiments with National Foundation support in the rehabilitation of muscles affected by polio. He and his assistants are making studies to determine the complete pattern of intramuscular nerve distribution of the arms and legs. This information combined with knowledge already gleaned from research studies will be compiled in a form which can be made readily available to orthopedic surgeons who perform muscle transplant operations as a means of combatting severe paralysis following polio. The material will also be useful to physical therapists who need this essential information of muscle action in their efforts at retaining muscles weakened or partially paralyzed by polio.

Advisory Editors

Two members of the Duke University Faculty, Dr. Wilburt C. Davison, dean of the School of Medicine, and Dr. Weston La Barre, associate professor of anthropology, are advisory editors of the Child-Family Digest, which hereafter will be published by the Lieutenant Gayle Aiken III Memorial Foundation, New Orleans, La.

The Digest reprints outstanding articles on children and family relations for the busy doctor, the clinic, the teaching hospital, the medical school, the visiting nurse, health departments, college teachers and students, and all who have need of such a concise publication. The need for the non-profit Digest has been established by the previous publication of 20 monthly issues. The Foundation has taken over the Child-Family Digest as a means of promoting emotional health and total well-being.

Blood Preservation Studied

Prolonged preservation of whole blood, the field of research being intensified by a Duke research team headed by Dr. Ivan W. Brown of the Duke Medical School, recently received a grant of $10,503. The Duke group has been carrying on this type of research for two years.

Blood research at Duke is now a part of a newly launched national program stimulated by "the grave international situation," announced Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator recently.

Chairman of Committee on Psychiatric Treatment

Dr. Maurice H. Greenhill, associate professor of neuropsychiatry at the Duke University Medical School, was recently named chairman of a committee of four North Carolina doctors appointed to seek funds from the State Legislature to improve psychiatric treatment at State Hospitals. He was appointed by the Medical Advisory Commission of the State Hospitals Board of Control, of which he is a member.

Dr. Greenhill says that the committee will take the campaign to the Legislature, the State Medical Society, and the people of the state.

ARCHIE LANEY LEE, '08

Archie Laney Lee, '08, board chairman of D'Arcy Advertising Company, and famed advertiser of Coca-Cola, died in Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., of cancer on December 22, after a brief illness.

Funeral services were held in Christ Episcopal Church Cathedral, and burial was in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Lee, a native of Monroe, N. C., became a reporter on the Atlanta Georgian in 1908 following his graduation from Trinity College. His newspaper work was interrupted by service as a captain in the infantry during World War I.

In 1919 he became a copywriter at D'Arcy Advertising upon the recommendation of Samuel C. Dobbs, then president of the Coca-Cola Company, who was impressed with the reporter during a newspaper interview. He immediately went to work on the Coca-Cola advertising. Robert W. Woodruff, longtime head of the Coca-Cola Company once told his directorate, "No single individual has done more to popularize Coca-Cola than Archie Lee." It was Mr. Lee who created the basic pattern for the poster campaign that made "The Pause That Refreshes" famous. Since then, repetition in advertising has become standard for virtually all nationally advertised products. After successfully selling the beverage as a fountain drink, he also induced people to drink Cokes right out of the bottle by another vigorous poster campaign. It was Mr. Lee who legally claimed the popular name of "Coke" for Coca-Cola alone, leaving the generic word "cola" to represent all such bottled drinks. The familiar pixie character with the friendly, saucy grin, who so often appears on Coke ads, is also a creation of Mr. Lee's. In addition to these forms of advertising, Mr. Lee emphasized Coca-Cola as a mark of hospitality.

In 1925 Mr. Lee became account executive at D'Arcy and was elected a member of the board of directors. He had been chairman of the board since 1945. At the time of his death he was also director of Coca-Cola Bottling Company, St. Louis; Western Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Chicago, and Coca-Cola Bottling Plants Inc., Portland, Me.

Number 6...THE BEAVER

FOR once in his life, our fervent friend admits that eagerness can be over-done! He's alluding, of course, to all these quick-trick cigarette tests—the ones that ask you to decide on cigarette mildness after just one puff, one sniff, one inhale or one exhale! When the chips are down, he realizes cigarette mildness can't be judged in a hurry. That's why he made . . .

The sensible test . . . the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test which asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke—on a pack after pack, day after day basis. No snap judgments needed. After you've enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you'll know why . . .

More People Smoke Camels

Letters

The following letter was received from an alumnus who, as he explains, only attended Duke for a short period of time. Local associations are always glad to welcome into membership any alumnus who attended Duke for any period of time and who is interested in becoming affiliated with an active organization.

The Lancaster County Association is offering a scholarship to a worthy boy or girl who wishes to attend Duke. Mr. Bucher is chairman of the committee which is working on the award. Money has been raised for the scholarship through rummage sales and other activities given by the Lancaster Association.

119 East Clay Street
Lancaster, Penna.

Enclosed you will find a check which I am sending for alumni purposes. Since I attended Duke University only three summers, I suppose I am ineligible for membership but I do want to express my appreciation to Duke.

The local Duke association has invited us, who have been part-time students, to join them in their activities. I have been serving as the scholarship committee chairman. Today we went on television to tell the public about our proposed scholarship. I am sure that Miss Marguerite Herr, our corresponding secretary has kept you informed about this project. We have a small but a very active group. Our present enthusiasm is directed toward the Men's Glee Club concert which is to be held March 26.

Duke University has a spirit which none of us ever forget. In spite of the fact that I am a graduate of several other schools, those three summers at Duke stand out as the finest experience I have had in school work.

I'm returning your record album in today's mail. It was certainly grand of you to allow us to use it. We all feel that it played an important part in the success of last night's concert . . . of which, more later.

Just to give you an idea of how much use we got out of the records, I want to tell you how they were used. I prepared a fifteen minute program using all but two of the Glee Club selections together

Here and There

The Development Campaign is in high gear as we come into the home stretch. It is the hope of all of those responsible for the program that by June 30 we will have reached our goal of $8,650,000.00. Present indications are most encouraging. Reports are arriving from all sections of the country, such as Forsyth County in North Carolina, where workers have done a remarkably good job. More than 40 per cent of all alumni there have made a gift to the University. In Guilford County almost 40 per cent of the alumni in the entire county have already given, and the campaign is not complete. The percentage of participation in Mecklenburg County is most encouraging and new areas are being opened all the time. Some sections have not been reached, but the alumni in these areas will be given an opportunity to participate as soon as possible either by personal solicitation or by mail. Please be ready to make your commitment when you are called on. Remember that each dollar you give means two, and that this is the first time in 25 years Duke University has called on its alumni for giving on a capital basis.

The eighth annual Alumnae Week End was a success in every way. The alumnae especially enjoyed the innovation of having the students on the campus while they were here. The attendance was good and the program excellent. Those who couldn't come back certainly missed an outstanding occasion.

It seems a little out of order to mention that Homecoming will be October 27, the day of the University of Virginia game. However, we hope you will put this date on your calendar and plan now to attend that occasion.

This year's baseball team gives promise of being the best Duke has had in many years. If you haven't seen the wonderful infield perform, not to mention the outfield and pitchers, it is worth your time and effort to see a game.

To be married in the Duke Chapel has become quite the fashion for sons and daughters of Duke. Almost every day sees another wedding in this beautiful building. It seems to tie the young men and women closer to the University and at the same time to give them the best wishes and blessings of the institution.

Many things happen in the Spring of the year. In addition to house cleaning, it seems the migratory bug bites about 50 per cent of our alumni. If you have been bitten by this bug and haven't sent us your change of address, please do so. We can't tell you about the University's program or keep you in touch with your fellow-alumni unless we know where you are.

Congratulations to the History Department for the excellent letter which it mailed to alumni who majored in history. If you didn't get a copy, we suggest you write to Dr. William B. Hamilton, the editor.

The Physics Department also issued a similar letter which was full of information and news of interest to alumni of that Department. Likewise, if you didn't get a copy and are interested, write Dr. W. M. Nielsen.

The second issue of the School of Law Newsletter was issued late in March and was enthusiastically received by the alumni. The Newsletter is published several times during the year.

Tom Fletcher, '42, like so many other alumni, is finding opportunities in connection with his everyday job to serve Duke University and to call it to the attention of the public which he serves. On the letter page of this issue is reproduced a letter from him which illustrates this point.

Have you had a meeting of your local alumni association within the past twelve months? If not, wouldn't it be a good idea to hold one in the near future? During the Spring of the year many groups are having outdoor affairs, such as picnics. This gives the members a chance to get together, know each other better, and have a visit with some fellow alumnus they have been intending to go to see but, because of the pressure of things, have failed to do so. Other groups are inviting as guests high school students who are interested or might be interested in attending Duke University.

The 1951-52 bulletins and catalogs are now coming off the press. If you would like a copy of one of these for yourself or for some interested person, please write the Alumni Office or the Secretary's office.

The parents of one of our former students stopped by the office a few days ago. While here, the mother remarked that she and her husband, together with two friends, were on their way South. She said that the last instructions given by her son were to bring their friends by the Duke campus for a visit, although it was a quite a bit out of their way, and to visit the Chapel, the Sarah P. Duke Gardens, and other places of interest on the campus. The parents were also instructed to come by the Alumni Office to say "hello." We appreciate this thoughtfulness on the part of the parents, as well as the alumnus.

Quotes

"Our way of life in its entirety was built to make government the servant and not the master of the American people."

Development Campaign Chairmen

Last month the REGISTER printed photos of 14 alumni who are serving Duke as Campaign Chairmen throughout the United States. This month 12 more are presented. These photos are published so that all alumni may see and know at least a few of their fellows who are working vigorously and unselfishly for "a greater Duke."

The 1951 Commencement Program

Duke University's 1951 Commencement is being anticipated as one of the greatest in history, from the standpoint of alumni participation.

Alumni everywhere—Duke's former men and women students—are daily made increasingly aware of the significance of free institutions standing for democratic principles and striving to protect a cherished liberty. This is evidenced, for one way, by the truly mighty support that has been put behind the Duke University Development Campaign during the past year. And one of the high points of the Commencement season will be the report of what has been accomplished through the Campaign and how much it has and will affect the University's position in the world of education.

The Speakers

Speakers for the 1951 Commencement will be The Reverend Paul Ehrman Scherer of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, who will deliver the baccalaureate sermon, and Dr. Robert L. Calkins, director of the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation. Biographical notes on these two prominent Americans will appear in the May REGISTER. The Hon. W. Kerr Scott, Governor of North Carolina will deliver the message to the graduating class.

Something New

In response to many requests, a new entertainment feature has been added to the Commencement program. This is a presentation of the Hoof 'u' Horn's latest production, the very excellent "Belles and Ballots." This student musical has received high praise from all who have seen it in Page Auditorium on the campus and in Winston-Salem on tour. The unanimous opinion is that it is one of the best Hoof 'n' Horn productions ever staged. Returning former students, therefore, will have an opportunity to see what their present-day counterparts are capable of doing.

And Golf, Too

The third annual Alumni Golf Tournament will take place again this year at Hope Valley on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, June 1 and 2. As usual, the tournament will give duffers as well as old pros a fair chance at prizes, since it is on a handicap basis. Scenes From Eighth Alumnae Week End

Alumnae Event Attracts Many to Campus

For the first time in its eight years, the annual Duke Alumnae Week End was held during the regular school session and the innovatiou met with great success. Former Duke coeds enjoyed being on campus with future alumnae while college life was in full swing.

The three-day event, featuring lectures, art and music events, and varied social activities, opened Friday afternoon, April 6, and extended through Sunday, April 8.

All alumnae who attended returned home with a much clearer idea of what is happening at Duke today. They became familiar with new activities of both students and faculty, and they reviewed the operations of the University in today's world.

New Alumnae Officers

New officers were elected for the Alumnae Association at a meeting Saturday afternoon. Coma Cole Willard (Mrs. W. B.), '22, of Raleigh, N. C., was elected president to serve for a term of two years, according to a new rule passed by the Alumnae Council at its meeting the previous afternoon. On the action of the council, Thelma Albright, A.M. '37, outgoing president, will remain as a member of the executive committee for one year. Other officers are: first vice-president, Frances Davis, '32, Washington, D. C.; second vice-president, Lee Anne Seawell, '40, Athens, Ga.; representatives at large to serve for three-year terms: Helen Cockrell Henderson (Mrs. E. L.), Detroit, Mich.; Trurlu Strickland, Charlotte, N. C.; and Louisa Hooker Bourne

(Mrs. C. W., Jr.), Greensboro, N. C.

Awards were given to various alumnae at the informal dinner held Saturday evening in the West Campus Union at which President Edens, C. A. Dukes, director of Alumni Affairs, and student leaders were guests.

Blanche Moss, '23, was recognized as being the first to register for the Week End. Coming from the greatest distance was Lee Anne Seawell of Athens, Ga. Miss Mamie Jenkins and Miss Annie Pegram, both members of the class '96, represented the oldest class with members present. The delegations from Raleigh and Asheboro were the largest from any of the cities represented. Classes with members present ranged from '93 to '50.

All-Duke Program

Featured on the program this year were members of the Duke faculty and students. Dr. Weston La Barre spoke to the alumnae following a dinner in the Woman's College cafeteria Friday evening. His subject, "The Family, Its Functions and Its Future," touched the widely varied concepts of family life held throughout the world. Dr. La Barre described the many customs which are strange to our culture, and his conclusion was that the family life in America is superior to the others.

Following the lecture, alumnae attended a coffee hour in East Duke Building. Daughters of alumnae were hostesses for the occasion.

After visiting the campus Saturday morning, alumnae heard Dr. Marianna Jenkins, associate dean of undergraduate instruction at the Woman's College and assistant professor of art, speak on the controversial theme "Are Modern 'Isms' Modern?"

Later in the morning, a student panel discussed the question "Can Democracy Survive?" for the group. The Moderator was Alan Raywid, '52, Washington, D. C., and participants were John O. Blackburn, '51, Miami, Fla.; Joan Craig, '51, Camp Hill, Pa.; Dante L. Germino, '53, Durham; and Beryl Roberts, '54, Asheville, N. C. Alumnae were impressed with the deep thinking of today's students, and expressed a desire to continue having student panels at their future meetings.

At the Alumnae Association meeting at luncheon on Saturday, a suggestion was made that Alumnae Week End be held every other year or discontinued for the duration of the national emergency. The matter had been discussed the previous afternoon at Alumnae Council meeting. The proposal to cease having Alumnae Week End was voted down unanimously. It was felt that the Week End means much to alumnae and to the University, and it was decided to continue having it as long as the national situation permits.

The meeting was adjourned after Dr. R. Florence Brinkley, professor of English and dean of the Woman's College, and Miss Florence Wilson, dean of the School of Nursing, gave reports to the alumnae on the activities of the Woman's College and the School of Nursing.

Students Participate

Seniors from the Woman's College and the School of Nursing were honored at a tea held Saturday afternoon at the University House by the Alumnae Association. It was an opportunity for returning alumnae to talk with students and get to know them.

Following the Saturday night dinner, alumnae were entertained by a student variety program which included the Duke Brass Ensemble conducted by Robert Gray, the Madrigal Singers directed by Mrs. Eugenia Saville, and the Modern Dance Group led by Modena Lewis.

A coffee hour given by the members of Phi Kappa Delta, senior woman's honorary, was given for the alumnae later Saturday evening.

Dr. Ray Petry, professor of church history, delivered a sermon, "Lift Up Your Hearts," at the regular worship service in the University Chapel on Sunday. His words were especially directed

The concluding event of a full Alumnae Week End was an organ recital by Samuel Tilgham Morris, head of the Organ Department at Hollis College. His program featured works of Mozart, Bach, César Franck, and Marcel Dupré. Mr. Morris has studied under some of the most eminent organists of the day.

Summer Session Program Announced

The 1951 Summer Session program beginning June 12, will be one of the most extensive in the University's history, according to plans just announced by Dr. Paul H. Clyde, director.

Entering students will be admitted to the freshman class in June, as part of the program to meet educational needs during the period of national emergency. Upperclassmen, meanwhile, are expected to enroll for summer courses in larger numbers, as they strive to complete requirements for degrees before facing the military service.

This intensification of undergraduate activity in the Summer Session will be accompanied by an expanded program of institutes, conferences, and workshops, many of which are annually scheduled and others which are innovations this year. Prominent among the new conferences is the Science Teachers Laboratory, to take place from July 23 through July 27.

The Acceleration

Attracted to the Summer Session by the acceleration program will be those men students who are uncertain as to their academic future and who are anxious to move as far along as possible toward a degree before being plucked out of school for military service. Draft laws affecting college students are still not crystallized completely, and most students have the feeling that existing national policies are subject to momentary change.

Enrolling, therefore, for summer study will be (1) undergraduates attempting to complete degree requirements as quickly as possible; (2) high school graduates entering as freshmen in order to get as much work behind them as there is time for; and (3) students of other colleges and universities who find it convenient to take work at Duke during the summer and then have their credits transferred to their own colleges.

By attending classes 12 months during the year, a student may graduate in three instead of four years, and then, as things appear now, take basic training in seamanship or infantry tactics in lieu of accumulated vacation.

Also attending the Summer Session will be graduate students working toward advanced degrees or professional advancement, post-doctorate scholars doing special research which requires the University's wealth of facilities, and professional people, including teachers, who will attend conferences and institutes to become familiar with the latest knowledge and methods in their fields.

New Courses

The members of Duke faculties who remain to teach during the summer will be supplemented by a number of distinguished teachers from other institutions, and new courses will be opened for Summer Session students.

A course in acarology (the study of mites) will be given by the zoology department for professional workers, and it will be the only course of its kind ever offered in any university.

The English Department has added two new speech courses, methods in teaching speech and American oratory. courses in Poe, Hawthorne, and Melville, and is emphasizing play production, history of the theater, and contemporary literature.

The popular and internationally known School of Spanish Studies (June 12-July 21) will add to its curriculum a treatment of contemporary Spanish-American literature by generations. The Division of Nursing Education has added a course in nursing education problems in nursing care and a seminar in medical and surgical specialty.

At Beaufort, N. C., where the Duke Marine Laboratory is located, new courses will include a study of aquatic populations and a study of invertebrate embryology, dealing with animals native to salt water. The marine lab will be open for two terms, from June 12 to July 21, and from July 23 to August 31.

The Department of Education will present a full program both terms for candidates for advanced degrees. Special courses will be given for teachers, supervisors, and administrators for certification.

Special Conferences

Throughout the summer there will be various institutes, conferences, and workshops on the campus. The schedule of these events is now complete and includes:

North Carolina Conference for Social Studies—June 19-22.

School of Spanish Studies—June 12-July 21.

Nursing Education Workshop—June 24-30.

School for Accepted Supply Pastors—July 3-19.

Science Teachers Laboratory Conference—July 23-27.

Institute of North Carolina English Teachers—(Aug. 2-4).

Institute for Teachers of Mathematics—Aug. 7-17.

Those interested in enrolling for summer courses at Duke, or attending any of the various conferences, are advised to write to The Director, Duke University Summer Session, Duke Station, Durham, N. C.

Gardens in Bloom

Nature, with a little assistance from the gardeners, is adding the finishing touches for the annual spring pageant of color in the Sarah P. Duke gardens at Duke.

The gardens reach their full beauty in mid-April. The Japanese cherry trees and magnolias have begun to bloom. Masses of red buds have been covering the crab-apple trees, and forsythia and spirea have flowered. Pansies, hearts-ease and many varieties of narcissus blossomed along the pathways during March, and banks have been covered with daffodils and periwinkle.

The annual pilgrimage of nature lovers began Easter week end, when many hundreds of visitors visited the gardens. As the gardens unfold their spring loveliness, visitors are welcome to come to the campus to enjoy the array of colorful blooms.

The wearing of the green has become a regular feature of Duke University campus. The wearers, however, are not paying homage to St. Patrick and old Ireland; they are fledgling officers in Uncle Sam's Air Force, who are training under the Air R.O.T.C.

The Duke Unit of the Air Force R.O.T.C. was given birth on July 1, 1949. At that time there was an enrollment of only 65 students, and Duke was one of only seventeen colleges in the country to have the air-training program. Now there are well over a hundred colleges with R.O.T.C. units, and Duke has reflected the expansion. There are now 448 Duke cadets, who spend five hours every week in training.

The Corps constitutes a regular department of instruction known as the Department of Air Science and Tactics. Its object is explained by Colonel Byron Switzer, commander of the Duke Unit and professor of Air Science and Tactics. "Our immediate job here," said Col. Switzer, "is to train these boys for four years in air-force fundamentals. At the end of that time they receive a commission in the Air Force Reserve, and the outstanding men will be offered commissions in the regular Air Force."

Three of the weekly training hours are spent in the classroom, and an average of three semester hour credits is given for each of the eight semesters. The two remaining hours are devoted to military drill in the good old-fashioned manner under T/Sgt. Anthony Filardo.

The course is divided into two parts, basic and advanced, and all students en-

Training Air Force Reserves

This is the second of two articles dealing with military training on the Duke campus. The first, published last month, described how future naval officers are trained at the University. The current article is about the younger Air Force Reserve program. Emphasis on armed service training is greater now, perhaps, than ever before, as college men are constantly aware of the parts they may soon be called upon to play in national defense.

rolled in the latter receive approximately $27.00 a month during the academic year. All cadets wear the dark green coat of the Air Force officer, though the advanced cadets are distinguished from the others by their "pink" trousers and visored service cap. Uniforms are provided free, and include overcoats where climatic conditions warrant them, and summer uniforms for those attending summer camp.

Areas of Training

Do the cadets receive wings when they graduate? No, they don't. In fact, they don't get any flight training at all. As of G- (Graduation) Day they are among the 50 percent of Air Force officers who are administrative rather than flight personnel. Flight training can come later—R.O.T.C. graduates have top priority on flight training—but it is the concern of the Air Force that its flight officers shall be more than mere airplane drivers. First they must specialize in some basic aspect of air operations.

Duke cadets engage in two of these basic aspects, air installations engineering and administration and supply, which includes logistics. The first specialty is open to civil engineering students. Their civilian studies are adapted and expanded to include problems of airstrip and airbase construction and maintenance, crash and rescue operations and firefighting. Administration and Supply cadets, taken from the ranks of general students, learn to handle the business end of Air Force operations, specializing for example in the logistics of airlifting armament, munitions, food, fuel and similar supplies.

Planned for the near future is a third specialty, air operations, whose officers work on the technical and non-strategic details of getting flights of bombers and fighter aircraft off the ground and back down out of the air, establishing air traffic control, planning missions and similar problems. This may develop next fall at Duke.

In addition to Colonel Switzer, an Air Force Command pilot with many hours of flying time to his credit, other officers attached to the Duke unit are Lt. Col. Jackson V. Rambeau, Major J. P. McBride, Captain F. R. Renken and Captain R. W. Clark, '42. Cadet Commander is senior Peter L. Kastrinelis, who comes from Framingham, Mass.

As Part of University Life

Draft deferments are given to some members of Air R.O.T.C., but as Colonel Switzer recently emphasized, "The individual enrollee must maintain a sufficiently high R.O.T.C. and academic standing to demonstrate his acceptability as a future officer or he will not be allowed to continue in the program."

Having established itself in the academic pattern of the University, Duke Air R.O.T.C. is now developing itself as a social unit on campus. February of this year saw three innovations planned to integrate more fully the social activities of the cadets.

Last November Duke was represented at a conclave of the Arnold Air Society, held at St. Louis, Mo. This is a national military fraternal organization to promote outstanding leadership and to encourage team work. In February, twelve Duke cadets were initiated into the Duke Chapter of the Society, which was named for William A. Sally, '40, a Duke alumnus who was killed while on aerial maneuvers at Kelly Air Force Base. All advanced Air R.O.T.C. cadets are eligible for membership, and the Duke Chapter is making plans to have guest speakers on current, particularly military, affairs, and to show technical and general military films.

The first issue of "Contact," A.F.R.-O.T.C. paper edited by George C. Lynch, Duke junior from Alaska, appeared on February 21. In an editorial Colonel Switzer writes, "This, the first issue of the 'Contact' marks one more milestone in the record of achievement. I commend you. May it bring that pride of achievement which is such an important factor toward creating a high degree of morale in the organization."

Also taking place in February was the first Air Force R.O.T.C. Ball. Bill Byers and his Duke Cavaliers furnished the music for the Ball which was held in the East Campus Gym. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of an Honorary Cadet Colonel. Virginia Lee Harris, a junior from Summit, N. J., was chosen, and will reign until the next military ball.

In its twenty months or so of life, the Air Force R.O.T.C. unit at Duke has become an increasingly important aspect of university life, both academically and socially.

No longer does the Navy have things all its own way at Duke. A friendly rivalry exists between the boys in blue and the boys in green. But beneath the mutual bantering that goes on there is the awareness of the serious purpose of the Officer Training Corps. Cadet Captain Joseph R. Tamille expresses the sentiments of the cadet body at large when he writes in an editorial appearing in "Contact," "We have grown together in both friendship and cooperation, and we as Air Force cadets are learning the meaning of honor, success, and failure among ourselves."

Fraternity Pledges Work To Build City Playground

Between sunup one day and sundown the next, a swarm of Duke fraternity pledges, supervised by upperclassmen and Durham Recreation Department officials, transformed a debris-littered, stumpy, uneven field in Durham into a well-equipped children's playground. The occasion was Greek Week, a four-day program designed primarily to replace the pre-initiation period, formerly known as "Hell-Week," with a program of inter-fraternity activities. Planned and sponsored by undergraduates, the accent is on cooperation and community service.

Some 250 pledges worked a total of

Next Year's Concerts

An up-to-the-minute list of stellar attractions has been announced for the 1951-1952 All-Star Artist Series to be presented in Page Auditorium.

Next year's series will be the most expensive yet offered at Duke, and will include many favorites. Artists who will appear are Jerome Hines, basso, Monday, October 15, 1951; Frederick Gulda, pianist, Tuesday, November 13, 1951; Singing Boys of Norway, Thursday, January 31, 1952; Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, Thursday, February 21, 1952; and Patrice Munsel, Metropolitan Opera Star, Monday, March 10, 1952.

As an added attraction, the series will again present the ever popular First Piano Quartet. The exact date for this performance has not been determined but will be during the latter part of October, 1951.

Alumni and friends of Duke University may be interested in attending this outstanding series of musical events on the Duke Campus. Further information may be obtained from J. Foster Barnes, director of music, Box 4822, Duke Station, Duke University, Durham, N. C.

Engineers' Show Above are scenes from the 19th annual Engineers' Show, held in the College of Engineering Building on March 16-17. The two-day exhibition, featuring working displays from all three departments of the College, civil, electrical and mechanical, attracted more than 5,000 spectators. At top left a young spectator watches in amazement while his voice records itself in light waves on the complicated gadget before him. At top right delighted spectators observe a toy electric train set up in the Mechanical Department to demonstrate technical principles. Bottom left is a boiler assembly for a power plant, also in the Mechanical Department. Bottom center is a photoelasticity set-up designed to test strength of materials. Screen at right records in colored light waves material's resistance to pressure. Bottom right is a group gathered outside the cage behind which electrical engineers allow a trained 1,000,000-volt bolt of lightning to cavort.

approximately 750 hours carting off three truckloads of broken glass, removing stumps, filling holes, planting shrubs, constructing a basketball court and a baseball diamond with a permanent backstop, installing swings and seesaws. The four-day program opened with a special chapel service. The construction project was followed by a banquet at which the principal speaker, introduced by President Hollis Edens, was Edwin L. Jones, '12, Duke trustee and president of the J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte. Closing events were an interfraternity athletic field day in Duke Stadium and a dance in the old gymnasium on West Campus.

L. E. Hunt, '50, Dies in Korean Action

Private Lawrence Ellerbe Hunt, '50, of Pleasant Garden, N. C., was killed in action on March 13 in Korea. A member of the Second Infantry Division, Larry was attached to a South Korean unit at the time of his death. The last letter his family received was dated February 10. During World War II, Larry served with the armed forces and was stationed with the Army of Occupation in Japan for eight months. An enlisted reservist, he was recalled to active duty last September, exactly four years from the day he returned from service in World War II. In addition to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Hunt of Pleasant Garden, he is survived by one brother, Jack Hunt, a student at Duke; two sisters, Frances, a student at W.C.U. N.C., and Elizabeth, of the home; and his paternal grandfather, William B. Hunt, also of Pleasant Garden.

The New York Alumni Association has had a busy season this year. Their dinner dance at the Beekman Tower Hotel on February 16 was a great success. On March 6 they had a business meeting at which arrangements for the March 30 and other future meetings were made.

the annual dinner meeting of the Wilson County Alumni Association. Some 60 alumni met at the Hotel Cherry in Wilson on Thursday evening, April 5. President John Graves, '43, presided at the meeting, which featured a turkey dinner.

Charles A. Dukes, '29, spoke briefly to the group about the progress of the Development Campaign and introduced Coach Bradley, emphasizing his outstanding success in succeeding the late K. C. "Gerry" Gerard just as the season opened and guiding the Blue Devils into the Southern Conference finals.

Coach Bradley discussed his favorite subject, basketball, and treated the group with a film of the January 6th Duke-N. C. State game, a fast and furious overtime thriller.

Officers elected for the coming year were the Rev. Robert W. Bradshaw, '19, president; E. R. Bridgers, '35, vice-president; Carl M. Whitley, '37, secretary-treasurer; Littlejohn Faulkner, '29, alumni representative; and Dorothy Barrow Kennedy (Mrs. K. D.), '35, alumnae representative.

Washington Law Alumni

Officers for the Washington, D. C., alumni of the Duke Law School are Frank Fletcher, '35, president; and Abraham B. Book, '30, LL.B. '34, secretary-treasurer. They are serving for the present year.

The Law Alumni group has held several monthly meetings this year, the first of which honored Judge Justin Miller, who was dean of the Duke Law School from 1930 to 1935. That meeting was held January 12 at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington. On March 5 the group met at the Vandenberg Room in the Senate Office Building. O'Donnell's Restaurant has tentatively been selected as the regular meeting place for the luncheon meetings held the first Monday of every month.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Among recent functions given by the Philadelphia Duke Alumni Association have been a dinner meeting at the Lido Restaurant in West Philadelphia for the executive committee on January 3; and a Valentine's Day dance held February 16 at the Plymouth Country Club. There was also a large crowd of alumni who attended the Duke-Pennsylvania basketball game.

The Duke Alumni Association of Philadelphia and vicinity is planning to have its spring meeting Friday, May 11, at 6:30 p.m. at the Old Bookbinders Restaurant, 125 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. There will be a dinner, a prominent guest speaker, and an entertaining variety program including singer Novella Murray Snyder (Mrs. Thohurn R., Jr.), '44, a magician, and others. Following the dinner and the program there will be dancing.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

Duke alumni from Rocky Mount, N. C., and members of the Rocky Mount Sportsman's Club turned out by the hundreds on March 23 to pay tribute to a native son who made good—William D. Murray, '31, new head football coach at Duke University—at a banquet in his honor held in the ballroom of the Rieks Hotel in Rocky Mount.

Among the special guests present for "Bill Murray Night" was band leader and star of radio, television and the movies Kay Kyser, a lifelong friend of the new Duke mentor. Mr. Kyser, a Rocky Mount native himself, was Bill Murray's first football coach when he starred on a midget team known as the Rocky Mount Tigers.

Also in attendance were Eddie Cameron, director of athletics at Duke, Charles A. Dukes, director of alumni affairs, Glenn E. (Ted) Mann, director of sports information at Duke, and Freddie Crawford, '34, former Duke football star and first North Carolinian ever to make an All-American football team. William Bennett, '43, president of the Nash-Edgecombe chapter of Duke alumni, presided.

Coach Murray was introduced by E. E. (Knocker) Adkins, '32, Rocky Mount high school athletic director and former assistant to Bill Murray at Delaware. The new Duke coach said that he returned to his alma mater because "I saw great things in store there and wanted to be a part of them." He was accompanied to the dinner by his daughter, Marilyn, a Duke freshman.

Kay Kyser presented Bill Murray with an electric clock as a homecoming gift from the Sportsman's Club. After giving him the clock, Mr. Kyser quipped, "This is the first time I ever heard of a coach getting the works before he gets started."

Horrors! But Not Quite

If any reader of these pages is still in doubt as to the frightful condition of this staggering old world, let him give heed to the following item. It should shock into a state of horrible awareness the most complacent ostrich who ever hid his head.

This occurred during the evening of March 23 in Rocky Mount, N. C. Duke alumni of Nash and Edgecombe Counties, having invited Coach Murray to speak to them, were anxious that other Rocky Mount residents have equal opportunity to welcome back a popular native son. A huge crowd gathered, and, inevitably, there were representatives of certain other colleges and universities.

From all reports, proceedings were smooth enough until time came to vote on a new president for the Association. It was at this point that an alert presiding officer stopped everything with a mighty shout. For he had discovered that a Wake Forest man had nominated a Carolina man for president of the Duke organization.

Diamond Victories Cheer Devil Fans

The smile on the benevolent countenance of Coach Jack Coombs, as he holds his morning conferences in the southeast corner of the Union lobby, is broader this spring than it has been for some several baseball seasons past.

There are several reasons for this pleasant phenomenon. They all concern the great national pastime, as played on Coombs Field by the 1951 Blue Devils.

First, the Blue Devils, at this writing, are on top of their division in the Southern Conference race. They gained this lofty eminence on Saturday, April 7, by whitewashing a Wake Forest nine that has been persistently sweeping conference and Big Four, as well as national, honors for the past three years. The Demon Deacons had not been blanked since 1948, until Duke took them 8 to 0.

Second, the pitching of sophomore Joe Lewis has been sensational in his first three games, all of which he won handily and the last of which was the Wake Forest shindig mentioned above.

Third, the Devils are also on top of the Big Four heap.

Fourth, last, and by far from least, the Duke infield this season, in spite of being manned at key corners by inexperienced sophomores, is probably the best in collegiate baseball.

This dream infield is composed of Bill Werber, sophomore son of another famous Duke athlete, on first; Bill Bergeron, senior sensation from Greenwich, Conn., on second; Dick Groat, the dead-eye basketball All-America, at short; and Tommy Powers, last fall's slashing wing-back and a Phi Beta Kappa, at third.

As of mid-April the Blue Devils had won seven and lost two. The pair of losses, both by teams Duke defeated on a previous day, brought temporary bitterness to the heart of Coach Jack. Both were lost on errors—given away—in the final frames of what appeared to be sure Duke victories.

Michigan State picked up three unearned tallies late in the seventh inning of the second of a two-game series to take the contest 8 to 5. A few days later, before the kinks were out, Yale took an 11 to 9 victory by pushing across eight runs in the ninth inning without the benefit of a single hit. The next day the regular Coombs lecture tour of the Union was cut short by several unhappy minutes.

But the victories have brought smiles of joy. The Devils were truly impressive in taking two from Indiana, 23 to 1 and 12 to 1; two from South Carolina, 12 to 7 and 6 to 0; beating Michigan State 7 to 6; Yale 3 to 1; and Wake Forest 8 to 0.

Benny Cavalier, expected to be a stalwart in the outfield this year, has been out of action since breaking a leg in early season practice.

Baseball—N. C. State 12-Duke 10; Duke 7-South Carolina 6 (14 innings); Duke 5-Wake Forest 2; Duke 8-N. C. State 7; and (alas) Carolina 14-Duke 0.

Golf—(undefeated) Duke 26-N. C. 1; Duke 23-Michigan 4; Duke 27-William and Mary 3; Duke 25½-Richmond 1½; Duke 27-Maryland 2½; Duke 26-George Washington 1; and Duke 26½-Wake Forest ½.

Bill Murray's "T-party" Calendar for '51

A 10-game football schedule which will pit the Blue Devils against some of the best teams in the nation has been announced by Athletic Director Eddie Cameron.

One of the new teams on the schedule is the University of Virginia, and the game with the Cavaliers on October 27 will be observed as Homecoming.

The long-time rivalries with Tennessee, N. C. State, Georgia Tech, Wake Forest and North Carolina will be continued. In addition, South Carolina, Pittsburgh, Virginia Tech, Virginia, and William and Mary will be met.

The home card is an attractive one with State, Virginia, Wake Forest and Carolina being met in Duke Stadium.

The schedule:

Sept. 22—South Carolina at Columbia.

Sept. 29—Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh.

Oct. 6—Tennessee at Knoxville.

Oct. 13—N. C. State at Durham.

Oct. 20—Virginia Tech at Norfolk, Va.

Oct. 27—Virginia at Durham (Homecoming).

Nov. 3—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

Nov. 10—Wake Forest at Durham.

Nov. 17—William and Mary at Williamsburg.

Nov. 24—North Carolina at Durham.

Buddy Grisso, senior quarter-mile dash runner, is captain of the highly successful track team this year.

Spring Teams Are Impressive

Based on their records at mid-season, Spring athletic teams at Duke University had rolled up some of the best marks of the year. Three outfits, track, lacrosse and golf, were undefeated as The Register went to press, and the tennis and baseball teams had also looked impressive in early season showings.

The track team especially looked good in early meets. Not expected to be particularly strong on a Spring vacation tour, the track crew blasted the University of Miami 73-53 and Florida State University by 103-28 in dual meets and looked good in taking the majority of the first places in the Florida Relays at Gainesville, Fla. Returning home, the track crew gained a tie with a strong, undefeated Princeton outfit by a 65½-65½ count. Princeton had previously handed North Carolina its first dual track loss in three years. The eindersmen were very impressive, too, in the Carolina Relays, although no team score was kept.

Poss turned in a fast time of 9.7 seconds for the 100-yard dash against Florida State University and missed the Duke broad jump record by an inch against the same team. For this show, Poss was elected "Athlete of the Week" on April 3 by the Greensboro, N. C. Daily News.

Paced by co-captains Louis McLennan and Mike Souchak, the latter of football fame as an end, the golf team rolled to five straight wins over Georgia Tech, Georgia, Clemson, Davidson and Williams. The closest decision the Blue Devils took was a golf victory by seven points, that coming against Georgia. The most decisive was the 25-2 win over Williams.

The lacrosse crew took things easy in rolling to decisive victories over Lehigh and Williams in early season games. Although the team does not have the depth it possessed last year when it won the Dixie League championship, Coach Jack Persons' outfit looked especially powerful against its first two opponents. Fred Eisenbrandt and Brooke Cottman have been the early season high scorers.

Duke's tennis team racked up seven wins in eight early matches, losing only to Rollins by 7-2 on a Florida Spring vacation trip. Wins have been over Michigan State, Florida Southern, Florida, Williams, N. C. State, the Jacksonville, Fla. Naval Air Station, and Dartmouth. John Ross is captain of the track team, while other top players are basketball star Keston Deimling, Hal Lipton, Jack Warmath, John Tapley and Norm Schellenger.

Kes Deimling, basketball stalwart during the winter, emerges as the No. 1 man on the tennis team this spring.

Divinity Session Scheduled

The Second Annual Convocation and Pastors' School, under the auspices of the Duke Divinity School, has been set for June 5-8, opening Tuesday morning and concluding at noon Friday. The Convocation Committee under the chairmanship of Dean James Cannon III has outlined a program of courses, lectures and recreational events. A nominal registration fee of $2.00 will be asked of persons who attend class work.

The special feature of the Convocation will be the second series of the James A. Gray Lectures, "The Ways of God—A Study in the Book of Job," to be delivered by the Reverend Professor Paul Scherer, of Union Theological Seminary, New York. Bishops Costen J. Harrell and Paul N. Garber, presiding in the areas of Charlotte and Richmond respectively, will be heard in devotional periods and addresses.

The annual business meeting and luncheon of the Duke Divinity School alumni will be held during the Convocation at 1:00 p.m. on Wednesday, June 6. The president of the alumni associa-

Additional information can be obtained by writing to the Duke Divinity School, Durham, N. C.

Special to the Members of the Class of 1926

It looks as though we will reach our "Majority"—come June, and this calls for a reunion, and we hope that we can throw the Bull around in such fashion to make it a memorable event. To that end Ben Powell has been placed as Chairman of a committee on arrangements; Stanton Pickens has been assigned as Chairman of a Committee on entertainment; Charlie Clegg will lead a small "wrecking crew" to keep the wheels running financially; the various "writers" and "commentators" in our hull pen will try and exhibit their talents in the field of libel or slander by a little publication of some kind as well we hope as with some verbal nonsense.

Bulletins and announcements are going forward to you individually. In case you do not receive your mail at the address carried by the Alumni Office, then write to me at Raleigh, or to Jack Caldwell at 38 Hillside Rd., Dohhs Ferry, N. Y., Earl McFee, 207 Essex Ave., Gloucester, Mass., Frances Holmes McCausland, 3780 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. So far some 30 of our Bulls and Bullettes have met to discuss plans for the reunion. All plan to attend and many of you have received letters from them urging your attendance. Plan to come back—with husband or wife and children and impedimenta not otherwise specified. We will try and provide baby sitters and nurses for those needing such services.

So plan to be on hand June 2-3-4, or any part thereof and let us know what you want—how you want it and any screwball ideas for the event will be most welcome. If you want dormitory accommodations please make sure you check that item on the form which will be sent to you shortly or write direct to the Alumni Office. If you desire hotel rooms, please write direct to the Durham hotel of your choice.

For sometime you will continue to receive letters and notices relative to detailed plans. Ed. Cannon

WARM UP

"Mr. Kent will see you in a few minutes," the receptionist said pleasantly.

"Thank you." Tom Wilson went to the far side of the room and sat down. This was his first "big" call, on his own, as a New York Life agent and he was nervous, frankly nervous.

Tom picked up a magazine and turned a few pages idly. He had that same tense feeling in his stomach that he had the day he pitched his first big baseball game in college. Tom put the magazine down and let his mind wander back to the baseball diamond and that first big game.

He remembered warming up, he and the catcher, standing along the first base line. Then Tom had gone over to talk with his mother, who was sitting just behind the screen where she could see every pitch. Her understanding smile turned out to be the best part of the warm-up.

Tom had been so proud of her, looking as smart as any of the girls and, when she laughed, looking almost as young. Nobody would have guessed that she had borne the cares of the family all alone, helped only by the memories of her husband and an income from the life insurance he had so thoughtfully left her.

Tom had been proud of his father, too, for the love and forethought which had made it possible for his mother and himself to live and grow, not hemmed in by want. In fact, it was the deep realization of all the things life insurance had made possible for his family—and could make possible for others—which had led Tom to become a New York Life agent himself . . .

The receptionist's voice punctured Tom's thoughts. "Mr. Kent will see you now."

"Fine," he said. He got up and started to Mr. Kent's office. The warm-up was over. He had the confidence he needed now.

with a bit of information about the concert. This was put on the air by three stations. Another station used almost the entire album in a half hour program customarily devoted to classical music. On still another station, a disc jockey used them each night for several nights with information about the concert. (I understand some of the boys picked this up in Durham.) Then, on my station, we used selections from the album as incidental music on several programs.

We had a turn-out of probably 700 for the concert. The boys gave their usual wonderful performance, and we felt the project was a complete success. Thank you very much for coming through—as you always do—when we needed a bit of help.

preme Court of North Carolina in June, 1879, Col. Abell opened his law office in Smithfield and had practiced his profession there continuously since that time. He was trying cases in the Superior Court before he was 21 years old.

Col. Abell was also active for a time in the field of politics. He was mayor of Smithfield for three terms, and was chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee in Johnston County for 16 years. An outstanding Democrat, he was a presidential elector under Grover Cleveland, and was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore in 1912 when Woodrow Wilson was first nominated for president. Until recent years he was a biennial delegate to the State Convention. He served three terms in the State House of Representatives and two terms in the Senate.

No one can remember where Mr. Abell got the name of "Colonel," because he never served in any of the armed forces. He thought it might have come from his earlier days of active politics.

At the time of his death, Col. Abell was senior partner in the firm of Abell, Shephard and Wood. He and his partnership had been counsel for Southern Railway in Johnston County for more than 60 years and counsel for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad for more than half a century. Until his last year Col. Abell still went to his office every morning, weather permitting.

Col. Abell was an excellent shot when he was younger, and was an enthusiastic hunter and fisher until his later years, when he turned to gardening as a hobby. He was blessed with perfect health and eyesight almost all of his life.

Mrs. Abell, the former Irene Page of Fayetteville, whom Col. Abell married on December 17, 1885, passed away just a year ago. They had seven children, four of whom survive: Marie Stevens (Mrs. H. P.), Ione George (Mrs. Jerry L.), and Edward S. Abell, Jr., all of Smithfield; and Jean Israel (Mrs. W. L.) of Wilson. Four grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; and two sisters, Mrs. Dan Galloway of Fairmont and Mrs. George Bissett of New York City, also survive.

"Colonel" Edward Stanley Ahell, '78, of Smithfield, N. C., veteran attorney, political leader, and oldest living alumnus of Duke University, died April 6 the day following his 96th birthday.

Funeral services were conducted at the Centenary Methodist Church, of which he had been a member for nearly 75 years, and interment was in Riverside Cemetery.

Born April 5, 1857, Col. Ahell attended a free school in Smithfield for two months a year until he was 12 years old. He then attended a private school in Selma, which was taught by Professor J. S. Searborough, who later became State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Mr. Abell entered Trinity College in Randolph County when he was but 16, and there studied law under Dr. Braxton Craven, president of the college. During the summer vacations he studied law under his father, the late J. H. Abell, who was a successful attorney with offices in Smithfield.

The oldest of a family of eight children, Col. Ahell could recall the days of the Civil War when several battles took place not too far from his home.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

NUMBER 7...

THE HARLEQUIN DUCK

"I may be a clown—but I'm no fool!"

He might be the merry-andrew of the marshlands, but lately he's been downright glum about these trick cigarette mildness tests. Never one to duck facts, he holds nothing much can be proved by a sniff of one brand or a quick puff from another. Snap judgments can't take the place of regular, day-to-day smoking. That's why so many smokers are turning to . . .

Letters

February 1, 1951

The Food and Agriculture Organization (of the United Nations), of which I have been associated for the past four years, is transferring its Headquarters to Rome, Italy. I am, therefore, leaving Washington to take up residence in Rome but it will take a few weeks before I get settled there. I shall send you my new address as soon as possible.

I had hoped to visit Duke University before leaving, but pressure of work has been such that I have not been able to get away from Washington. I regret very much missing this opportunity but shall try to visit you whenever I may happen to return to the United States.

April 3, 1951

Your kind letter of 6th February reached me in Rome about a week ago. As you are aware, I left Washington early in February and it was almost five weeks before I arrived in Rome, as I spent some three weeks in Paris and elsewhere in France.

I have just rented an apartment and my personal address now is the following: Via Guido d'Arezzo 2, Interno 7, Rome, Italy.

There is, of course, no prospect of my returning to the United States in 1951. But when I do go back, I shall certainly do my best to visit Duke again. I have very warm feelings for my old Alma Mater and all the friends I have there.

If there is anything I can do here in Rome for Duke alumni who happen to come over I shall be only too pleased to help.

Choir Welcomes Old Members

Alumni and alumnae who were once members of the Chapel Choir will find their same old seats in the choir loft awaiting them whenever they return to the campus for a visit. All they have to do is appear in time for the final practice just before the Sunday service and they may again add their voices to the sacred strains. Student choir members will gladly make room in the choir loft for the returning vocalists.

With Commencement approaching and summer vacations pending, alumni and alumnae are especially invited to take advantage of this constant opportunity to become an active member of the college community and the Duke Chapel Choir once again.

THIS MONTH'S COVER

A moderate frenzy of fun and foolishness seemed appropriate for the period just preceding final exams, especially for the seniors, whose undergraduate days of comparative freedom from worldly cares are almost over. Joe College Week End filled the bill perfectly. Inaugurated before World War II, the event was suspended for several years during hostilities and chaos that followed. With a vivid sense of drama students lampooned their own college fads and customs by elaborately overdoing them. A highlight was a parade from West Campus to East Campus, followed by a field day of comedy events.

LINOTYPE · MONOTYPE · HAND COMPOSITION

We have all 3 Types of Composition

WHEN setting type we give due consideration to the ultimate purpose . . . In deciding whether to use linotype, monotype or hand composition, we first ascertain the function of the particular piece of work. Each method was designed for a specific service, therefore initial cost is beside the question. We shall be glad to assist you in deciding which of the three will do the best job for your particular problem. Our composing room service is planned for today's demands.

About the Campaign

When the Duke University National Council meets at Commencement, a report on the progress of the Development Campaign will be given. Thousands of alumni have done an outstanding job of making this undertaking a success.

If, however, you have been asked to see some of your fellow alumni and haven't completed your task, please do so as soon as possible. If you are not in a community where an active personal solicitation for the Development Campaign is being conducted, don't worry. You will not be overlooked. In every section where there is a sufficient concentration of alumni, they will be given an opportunity, sooner or later, to participate in this program, which is so vital to the future of Duke.

Remember Duke University is counting on every former student to make his gift as large as possible, based on a three-year commitment. Though we have said this before, like the advertisers, once again we repeat, "This is the first time in 25 years alumni and friends of the institution have been asked to make a capital gift to the institution." The Loyalty Fund and the capital gifts program are one and the same, if the commitment is made over a three-year period. The Loyalty Fund is not to be discontinued, but will be started again at the end of the commitment period for the Development Campaign.

One of the finest things that has ever happened on the Duke campus has been the volunteer campaign put on by the students, among the students, for the Development Campaign.

Several weeks ago, representatives of some of the student organizations came to the Alumni Office and requested permission to share in the Development Campaign. They were referred to President Edens, who told them that, if the movement among the students was entirely voluntary, he would be glad to give his permission.

The students then invited a representative of every student organization to attend a meeting and hear the President tell about Duke's present and future. This meeting resulted in a campus-wide campaign which has just been launched.

More than 500 students are preparing letters to be mailed to parents and materials for use by solicitation committees which will reach every student on the campus. The students will contribute whatever they can, according to their ability. In so doing they say to the world at large that they are grateful to those people, who, because of their interest in the past, have made the institution what it is today, and to the alumni and friends and all others who are now sharing in this program to make Duke's opportunities for service even greater.

The student participation completes the entire University family circle, every division of which is now sharing in a magnificent manner.

In and Out

May we remind you that Commencement is June 1, 2, 3, and 4, and that, if you haven't made plans to attend, there is still time, provided you hurry. The Special Occasions Committee of the National Council has made another innovation in the program for returning alumni which we believe will meet with universal approval.

On Saturday evening immediately following the General Alumni Dinner, the Hoof 'n' Horn Club of Duke University will present "Belles and Ballots," its spring musical comedy. The Hoof 'n' Horn Club is a student organization that writes, produces, and directs all of its own productions. This year, the ingenuity of the students, plus their enthusiastic presentations, takes you on a pleasant trip to the twenties.

For a number of years the returning alumni have asked that they be given an opportunity to see the work of some of the student organizations. This year's change in program is the result of these requests.

The admission price to the musical is reasonable, to say the least—only $1.00. Not only will the alumni attending the dinner have an opportunity to see the presentation, but it will be open to parents of students, students, and the general public. In order to reduce expenses seats will not be reserved but a special section will be reserved for those attending the General Alumni Dinner. We suggest, therefore, that those planning to attend write the Alumni Office immediately for tickets. Alumni are urged to give their complete and enthusiastic support to this Commencement feature if they wish similar student attractions presented in the future.

The golf tournament will be held for the third year. It will be sponsored by the Class of '41 with Robert J. Montfort as class chairman. Mr. Floyd S. Bennett, our No. 1 alumnus, will be in charge of the occasion. Prizes will be awarded for faculty, trustee, and alumni participation.

Classes which have not arranged for representation are requested to do so. The tournament is to take place at the Hope Valley Country Club Friday afternoon and Saturday morning.

Last year the booby prize was won by a score of 135. Surely you can beat this. If you can't, we shall expect you to win the booby.

Rooms, at a minimum charge, will be available on the campus for parents of students, single alumni, and alumni couples. Those desiring to stay in the dormitories should make reservations in advance.

Dr. Robert D. Calkins (left), director of the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, will deliver the Commencement address on Monday, June 4. Dr. Calkins, a noted economist, is former dean of the College of Commerce of the University of California. A native of Connecticut, he holds degrees from William and Mary and Stanford.

The Reverend Paul Ehrman Scherer (right), who will deliver the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday, June 3, is professor of homiletics at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. For 25 years he was pastor of Holy Trinity Church in New York and is one of the nation's most famed preachers.

June Exercises End Another Year

Another academic year will close with Commencement Exercises extended over the three-day period between June 2 and 4, and when degrees have been awarded as the finale of the occasion, something more than 1,000 young men and women, graduates and undergraduates, will move into a future even more uncertain than usual.

This fact, however, has failed noticeably to subdue the high spirits of young men and women about to finish their college careers. Seniors are bending to the task of preparing for final examinations with a little greater intensity. Candidates for graduate degrees are plugging to finish all-important theses. Failure for today's students doesn't always mean another chance, and present opportunities, therefore, cannot be regarded too lightly.

But despite these serious considerations, the campus is rapidly assuming the familiar jubilant air that invariably heralds the Commencement season. And, as usual, the senior class prepares to leave the University with a sense of triumph and achievement tempered by the sadness of departure. This sadness is reflected in farewell columns in the Chronicle, conversation, and thoughtful expressions of faces regarding for the last few times such familiar scenes as the Chapel tower, the flagstone walks, and the shaggy oaks that adorn both campuses.

Later, however, these students of 1951 will return to future Commencements to refresh old and pleasant memories, recall youthful experiences, and revive and strengthen the knowledge and sense of permanent values that the University imparted during the process of education.

They will return, just as in 1951 students of other years will return to renew their attachment to Duke and to recognize the role that the University continues to play in their lives.

Many Are Expected

This year a record breaking number of former students are expected to be on hand for Commencement Exercises. One reason is the stronger interest that alumni have taken in University affairs during 1950-51 through such activities as the Development Campaign and already visible effects of new programs instituted by a still new president.

To accommodate those who will return, to make their visits enjoyable and worthwhile, the University organizations of fellow alumni, and Commencement committees have cooperated to plan what will certainly be one of the greatest Commencement programs in Duke's history.

Some events will be especially for alumni; some especially for students; but most will be for every member, past, present, and even future, of the University community.

Activities for alumni will begin on Friday, June 1, with the third annual Alumni Golf Tournament at Hope Valley. The tournament this year is sponsored by the Class of 1941, tenth reunion class, and will continue through Saturday morning. Winners will be announced at the General Alumni Association meeting Saturday night.

The second major event for all returning alumni will be the annual dinner meeting of the General Alumni Association in West Campus Union, beginning at 6:15 p.m. Saturday, June 2. Presiding will be C. B. Houck, '22, retiring president of the Association.

Hoof 'n' Horn Show

Following the Association dinner meeting the new feature of Commencement will be inaugurated. This is a production of the Hoof 'n' Horn, student musical comedy organization, this year entitled "Belles and Ballots." Alumni who purchase tickets for the production with their Saturday dinner tickets will find a special section of seats reserved for them in Page Auditorium. Other than this, there will be no reserved seats.

Reunion Classes

The classes which are holding reunions June 1, 2, and 3 will each have their own schedule of special activities. They are '01, '10, '11, '12, '26, '35, '36, '37, '41, and '49.

There will also be a number of events planned in which all returning alumni will take part. In addition to the Hoof 'n' Horn show and the annual alumni golf tournament, the General Alumni Dinner will be held Saturday evening, June 3.

Returning alumnae will be guests of the Woman's College staff at a coffee from 10:30 to 12:00 a.m. Saturday in East Duke Building. There will be open houses, teas, and many other forms of entertainment designed for everyone.

Accommodations may be secured on campus for alumni, alumnae, and their families. For further information about this, write to the Alumni Office.

The Class of 1901 will celebrate its Golden Anniversary by attending the Half Century Club Luncheon on Sunday, June 3. At that time, members of the class will be inducted into the Club.

1910, 1911, 1912

A joint luncheon of the classes of 1910, 1911, and 1912 will be held on Sunday, June 3, followed by an open house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Brower.

1926

Class President, Edward L. Cannon, and his committees have gone all out to plan a fun-packed week end for this year's Silver Anniversary Class of 1926. The committee in charge of publication has prepared biographical sketches of all class members. Along with other week end activities, the committees in charge of local arrangements and of entertainment, headed by Benjamin Powell, Durham, and Stanton Pickens, Charlotte, respectively, have planned a special class dinner Sunday night, and a tea to be held for the class and members of the Duke faculty of their generation.

1935, 1936, 1937

A royal welcome awaits the classes of 1935, 1936, and 1937. The program is packed with action. In addition to the schedule of general alumni activities for all returning classes, there will be an open house Friday evening at the Hope Valley Country Club and a picnic on Saturday at Smith's Cabin on the Wake Forest Highway for the three classes.

1941

According to reunion chairman R. F. (Bob) Long, plans for the tenth year reunion of the Class of 1941 are just about complete. There'll be a continuous program for every interest—a golf tournament—open houses—cabin parties—campus tours—a beach party—in fact everything that will make a reunion complete.

1949

The Class of 1949 will be returning to the Duke campus for their first class reunion. Betty Boh Walters Walton (Mrs. Loring B., Jr.), general chairman, and her committee have made plans for a class picnic at Gate 7 on Sunday. They promise a good time for everyone. The class of 1949 will also take part in the many other activities planned for returning alumni.

"What Is Duke?"

The lines below were penned by a member of one of the younger reunion classes in contemplation of rejoining his classmates on the campus this June. While the author modestly prefers to remain cloaked in classical anonymity, the REGISTER feels that his work is worthy of publication at this particular season of the year.

Reference to Duke is always in the present because it lives on in time and space through our lives. It is a many-sided experience like a gem of many facets giving off many rays of light.

It is the Chapel on a foggy night shrouded in mist and mystery. It is the sepulchral and medieval atmosphere, the odor of stone, the roar and tinkling whisper of a mighty organ, the gothic arch, the swelling anthem's praise, and glowing stained glass . . . the preacher who anesthetized and the preacher who stirred strange and hidden depths.

It is a memory . . . of freshman week long, long ago . . . of homesickness, of hurning autumn days, the struggle of academic discipline, the good and the had professors, roommates, bull-sessions, and the wonder of soaring and sordid human nature.

It is the smell of a sweaty dressing room, the thrill of excelling if only once in coutest, the race run, the panic of examination, suspense of postcard grades, the football games, and pep rallies, the quadrangle riots, the night serenades, a rare snow, a goodnight hy flashing dormitory lights, the spotlights, and gravel drives on East . . . a girl . . . the thrill of new friendship, the profound contact with character and wisdom . . . and a dean, the good shepherd.

It is the shared bond of nicknames: of "Bishop," "Scrappy," "Suitcase," "Nurmi," and "Uncle," and a greeting: "hey." It is the remembrance of Negro characters on campus . . . of Ralph and "yo shoes is turrible," of Arch the messenger philosopher, Big Bill, confidant of college presidents, and the living relic of heroic Randolph County days, the "Old Chief" of the Union. It is our keystone cops "Cloud" and "Shadow" . . . and the times we weren't caught. It is Whitford's office and room keys.

It is "next gentlemen" in the barber shop and "thank you gentleman" at the end of lecture. It is help in time of trouble, an understanding word and a stinging reuke too . . . the resolve, the growth, and in the end, an intangible development. It is the paradoxes of youth . . . worry, loneliness, and exhilarating joys.

It is Durham . . . the Saddle Club, Blue Light, Miller's, Bailey's, Rinaldi's, the Center, the Carolina, the Astor. . . . It is rolling, wooded Piedmont hills. . . . It is a cabin party and a country lane. . . . It is the loneliness of murmuring pines, and the hum and stir of city factories. It is gothic towers hy moonlight and lawns at nooutside.

It is initiation into mysterious realms of secret orders . . . and it is a crowded and sometimes joyous, sometimes tragic dance . . . a special week-end, a special date, a special time.

It is springtime come as it comes nowhere else . . . it is a hot June day and Commencement, it is a realization sometimes too late that these truly were the haleyon days, the golden years, and this the best of all worlds . . . where imperfections glared out because of contrast with an otherwise perfect whole.

It is concealed hut real pride in saying "I went to Duke." . . . The spine tingling at hearing "Dear Ole Duke" after one is "out on life's broad seas."

It is the shared knowledge of these secret ways that set Duke folks apart. It is this, that unknowing and unknown, is Duke spirit. . . . It is this that evokes a loyalty and devotion that, so nurtured, grows to include the cause of liherty and the love of God in a barren age of sell-out and treason.

"These are the things," an alumnus says, "that makes these halls hallowed for me, that make Duke my school, that make it my alma mater dear."

Fraternity Pledges Adopt a New Role

The sublimation by Greek-letter fraternities of the pledge-hazing instinct, and the redirection of irrepressible energies into such projects as constructing a public playground in Durham, performing volunteer work in hospitals and painting houses for needy families have induced commentators to describe Duke's third annual Greek Week as epoch-making, in a minor way at least. Judging from newspaper coverage, editorial comment, the reaction of city officials and the evaluation of the University's own administrators, the general opinion seems to be that the fraternities are maturing in a highly approved manner.

Greek Week is a planned program of fraternity activities of a community welfare nature, in which pledges participate, under the supervision of their brothers-to-be, as a part of their fraternity initiation. Initiated in 1948, the program has broadened in scope with each succeeding year.

The National Interfraternity Council also has placed a definite stamp of approbation on Greek Week, having adopted the program as being expressive of the highest fraternity aspirations. Dr. John O. Moseley, former president of the University of Nevada, reporting on Greek Week to a recent convocation of the National IFC, described it as "the biggest step forward since World War II." He emphasized three features of the Week: first, it is a substitute for "the harmful features characteristic of the pre-initiation period in many schools"; second, Greek Week is primarily a local program and must be set up by and under the sponsorship of each college or university's IFC; and third, its ultimate objective is the discovery and development of latent talents for leadership in "an uplifting and forward looking movement of the fraternity system characteristic of its true aims and ideals."

News of the Duke program, centering mainly on the labor of 244 pledges working three hours each on the playground project (the labor was worth about $750 at current rates, according to the Durham City Recreation Department) found space in papers throughout the state. Editorial comments were of course subjective, ranging from sincerely laudatory to slightly sarcastic. A Greensboro Daily News editorial began by reciting the marvels of the modern age and followed with a cursory description of the playground job in a second paragraph beginning "But the most astounding of all is. . ." The piece was headed "Wonders Never Cease."

City Manager R. W. Flack of Durham seemed genuinely delighted, and expressed the community's gratitude for the "magnificent job done." Enlarging on this the director of the Department of Recreation, Mr. C. R. Wood, in addition to volunteering the statistics quoted above, expressed the hope that such activities would become an annual feature of Greek Week. He added that many civic organizations had in the past formulated similar plans for rehabilitating neglected city playgrounds but that never before had anyone actually offered to perform the pick and rake part of the job.

The University's Dean of Men is perhaps particularly qualified to evaluate Greek Week in terms of the reactions of the students themselves. He is too experienced a man to be misled by superficial considerations. He understands that student projects of this kind can hardly be instituted from above; to be at all effective they must be in the nature of a grassroots movement, since student participation is the core of the program, with administration guidance the incidental factor. Dean Robert B. Cox has both warm-hearted approval and deep admiration for the fraternity organizations that have made Greek Week a part of their theory and practice. In the manner of a father describing the coming-of-age of his sons he remarked, "Yes, they're doing all right. They're growing up." Equally specific approval has come from the office of the president. Dr. A. Hollis Edens expressed his desire, in a letter to John O. Blackburn, president of the Interfraternity Council, to compliment the Council "for its wise planning."

"It must be satisfying, indeed, to have a part in such an undertaking," Dr. Edens wrote, "and I commend each person participating in the program. . . . Congratulations!"

The boys themselves are proud of the new turn of affairs. "It goes to counteract the general impression that fraternities are merely frivolous associations," one of them remarked. "We feel pretty good about it." They are becoming men, and are putting away childish things.

Student Officers for 1951-52

Reports of student organizations on election of officers for the coming year indicate that all sections of the country are being drawn on for undergraduate leadership at Duke.

The Men's and Women's Student Government Associations, the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., and the Publications Board have chosen officers for the 1951-52 academic year. Names of class officers also have been announced.

Alan Raywid, of Washington, D. C., has been elected president of the Men's Student Government Association. His fellow officers-elect are Robert Younts, High Point, N. C., vice-president; William Werber, Jr., College Park, Md., secretary; and Robert Bush, Lenoir, N. C., treasurer. Excepting in the presidential race, which Raywid won by a landslide margin, the positions were so hotly contested that the first balloting of 1,485 student voters was inconclusive and runoff elections were held.

Cheerleaders elected were Henry Clark, Reidsville, N. C.; Kenneth Derrick, Hartford, Conn.; Robert Trebus, Irvington, N. J.; Raeford Gibbs, Asheville, N. C.; and Richard Farquhar, Monessen, Pa.

Elections of the Publications Board resulted in the naming of Ronny Nelson, Longmeadow, Mass., as editor-in-chief of the 1952 Chanticleer, and James F. Young, Havertown, Pa., and George Grune, White Plains, N. Y., as business manager and editor, respectively, of the Archive. Next year's Chronicle staff will be headed by Denny Rusinow, St. Petersburg, Fla., editor; Mary Flanders, North Weare, N. H., co-ed editor; and Malcolm Crawford, Wilmington, N. C., business manager.

Chester Hwang, Arlington, Va., is the new president of the Engineering Club. Class presidents elected in Engineering College polling were Glen Marlin, Strothers, O., senior class; Lyle Connor, Pembroke, Mass., junior class; and George Gerber, Arlington, Va., sophomore class. S.G.A. representative is George Marsden, of New Rochelle, N. Y. New Divinity School officers are Robert Regan, Pine Bluff, N. C., president; Joseph Warner, Greensboro, N. C., vice-president; Clifford East, Richmond, Va., treasurer; and Douglas Shepherd, Huntington, W. Va., secretary.

On the women's campus Thelma Stevens of Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen W.S.G.A. president, with Fay Cobb of Park Ridge, Ill., as vice-president. Other officers are Barbara Seaburg, Tenafly, N. J., executive secretary; Ann Gundersen, East Orange, N. J., treasurer; Mary Bryson, Durham, assistant treasurer; Dorothy Platte, Upper Montclair, N. J., junior class representative; and Audrey Earle, Durham, sophomore class representative.

Co-eds elected to the three top chairmanships are Joan Ingwersen, Middletown, O., Judicial Board; Nancy Runyan, Washington, D. C., Social Standards; and Molly Bixby, Detroit, Mich., Freshman Advisory Council. Marjorie Pettit, of Washington, was elected Judicial Board secretary.

Hester Hough, Ft. Myers, Fla., was elected president of the Duke Y.W.C.A.

In a heavy vote Robert Windom, of St. Petersburg, Fla., won the Y.M.C.A. presidential race. John Carey, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., was elected vice-president and Lawrence T. Bowles, Garden City, L. I., defeated his competitor for the post of secretary. The students chose Ray Ammerman, Lakeland, Fla., as treasurer. A new board of directors includes faculty members Dean W. C. Archie, Dean R. B. Cox, Coach Jack Coombs, Dr. Edmund Perry, Dr. H. S. Roberts, A. C. Jordan, E. B. Weatherspoon, and J. Foster Barnes.

"Devil's Den" Is Opened

The Student Lounge recently opened in the basement of the Woman's College Pan-Hellenic House has won the complete approval of the students. Handsomely panelled and decorated with blown-up photos of campus scenes and student activities, the room is furnished with a soda fountain and a juke box. Two of the walls are lined with booths. It is designed to supplement the students' recreational facilities.

An adjoining launderette, where students may have their clothes washed and dried, is a convenient feature of the new arrangement.

In a Women's Student Government Association contest to select a name for the new dope shop the girls decided on the roguish appellation "Devil's Den." Barbara Wilson, freshman, daughter of Tina Fussell Wilson, '21, and L. A. Wilson, L '22, was awarded a prize for submitting this name.

College men in short pants and golf caps, and coeds in full skirts and peasant blouses joined in a colorful parade held during Joe College Week End. As pictured here, some of them added a touch of old to the newly established week end of fun as they burlesqued the life of college students.

“Joe College Week End” Is Revived

One of the more lovable roles of a lovable screen comedian was the portrayal of “The Freshman” by Harold Lloyd. The emotional extravagances of college social life were set off in poignant contrast to the rather serious business of getting an education. The same note was struck last month as a gay serpentine procession of festooned cars wended eastward from the main Duke quadrangle, bristling with arms and legs and oddly costumed torsos, on the opening day of Joe College Week End. The arms and legs tumbled out and spread over East Campus, patterned themselves into line-ups for absurd field day events, tossed strange kites to the April breeze, paraded past the women’s dormitories and formed multitudinous judgments of the decorative displays fluttering from windows and balconies or set up on lawns. Textbooks were safely stowed away between classes; no serious thought intruded. For three days students gave themselves wholeheartedly to the lampooning of the college fads and fashions whose easy yoke they bear.

The annual celebration, revived from pre-war days, had begun Thursday evening with the opening performance of the Hoof ‘n’ Horn Club musical comedy “Belles and Ballots.” The costume parade on Friday was preceded by a picnic lunch and followed by a picnic supper and another “Belles and Ballots” performance. An informal dance in the Indoor Stadium ended the day.

The festivities on Saturday, the third day, began with a picnic lunch and concert on West Campus. Afternoon hours were whiled away with baseball and lacrosse games (Duke-U. N. C., Duke-Washington College) and a track meet (Duke-N. C. State). Duke teams, exhibiting a splendid dramatic sense, won all three. Evening brought the Shoe and Slipper Spring Forrual with music by Les Brown, ’35, and his band at the Indoor Stadium.

Duke’s Men’s Glee Club on TV

The Duke University Men’s Glee Club appeared on a television show for the first time with the Perry Como Chesterfield Hour on WCBS-TV from New York City on April 2. A photograph, taken just before the TV show began, is shown above.

The group also sang on an NBC broadcast from New York and gave a concert at the Savoy Plaza Hotel.

The Glee Club recently completed a very successful season after a northern

On Sunday morning the Chapel services became a part of Joe College Week End, with gaiety temporarily suspended. Fraternities held picnic lunches under a now threatening sky, but the week end’s purpose had been accomplished, and a mere spring shower could not change that.

Students Donate Blood To Aid Korean Struggle

An emergency appeal for whole blood to be flown to Korea met a quick response on the Duke campus when 545 students and administration officials contributed blood to the Durham Chapter of the American Red Cross. The goal had been only 400 pints.

A student committee, headed by James R. Solomon, senior from Fort Wayne, Ind., chairman, moved quickly to line up pledges. All students were contacted, and letters were sent to the homes of students under 21 years of age who needed parental permission to donate.

The blood was collected in the West Campus Union and was flown the same day to Korea, where the need for whole blood has been reported dangerously acute.

Alumni Local Meetings

Buffalo, N. Y.

Dan Hill, '39, line coach at Duke, gave an illustrated lecture after the dinner meeting held by the Duke University Alumni Association of Western New York in April. Students planning to enter Duke next fall and parents of present students, as well as several local personalities in the sports world, were invited to attend. Mr. Hill was introduced by the president of the association, Marvin A. Rapp, A.M. '40, Ph.D. '48.

John K. Hill, '44, and Mrs. Hill were co-chairmen for the evening, and John F. Cree, '39, and Mrs. Cree were chairmen for the reception. Responsible for arrangements were William F. Shirley, II, '40, and Jean Metz Shirley, '41. Mrs. Oliver J. Bateman, Jr., wife of Oliver Bateman, Jr., M.D. '40, was chairman for reservations.

Forsyth County

Officers elected to serve during the coming year for the Forsyth County Duke Alumni Association are: Luther Williams, '36, president; Jerry Marion, Jr., '35, vice-president; Sid Gullledge, Jr., B.S.M.E. '43, secretary-treasurer; and DeWitt Cromer, '50, alumnae representative.

Cleveland, Ohio

An informal reception and dance was held by the Cleveland Duke Alumni Association for members of the Duke Glee Club following their concert at the Towne Club on Prospect Avenue in Cleveland on March 23.

Members of the Glee Club were guests of alumni in their homes during their visit. The students felt that the Cleveland audience was one of the friendliest they had ever performed for.

Jane Grant Koch (Mrs. George B.), '42, was head of the social committee which planned the party. William H. Slocum, '43, and Roland Russo, B.S.E.E. '38, were co-chairmen in charge of arrangements. Thomas O. Matia, '47, is president of the association.

N. C. Education Association

At the 67th annual meeting of the North Carolina Education Association held in Asheville during the month of April, A. B. Gibson, '26, of Laurinburg was named president for the coming year without opposition. Mr. Gibson is a past vice-president of the Association.

Dr. Benjamin Guy Childs, professor of education at Duke, took part in a panel discussion on "Teacher Education in North Carolina Today" held before the Association's Higher Education Division. Duke alumni who were members of the panel were Elsie Smith, '33, A.M. '40, of the Durham city schools, secretary of the Art Division; and Ruby Williams, A.M. '43, science teacher at Durham High School.

A breakfast was held by the Duke alumni of the North Carolina Education Association during the annual N.C.E.A. meeting, in the Victory Room of the Hotel George Vanderbilt in Asheville.

New officers were elected to serve for the coming year. B. L. Smith, '16, A.M. '37, superintendent of the Greensboro schools, is president. Other officers are Dr. Sam Holton, '21, president of Lousburg College, vice-president; and Everett Spikes, '24, M.Ed. '34, superintendent of schools in Burlington, secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Paul Clyde, director of the Duke Summer Session, was guest speaker at the breakfast meeting.

First Alumnus to Become A Brigadier General

Robert F. Sink, '26, of Lexington, N. C., was recently promoted in Korea from Colonel to Brigadier General. He is the first Duke alumnus to receive that rank.

Brig. Gen. Sink is now assistant commander of the Seventh Division, which has been very active in the Korean War.

An officer in the famed 101st Airborne Division during World War II, he holds many medals and honors, including citations from the Belgian, French and Dutch governments.

Brig. Gen. Sink, who was graduated from West Point, comes from a Duke family. Four brothers and a sister are Duke alumni: J. David Sink, '22, deceased; Charles Varner Sink, '29; Joe S. Sink, '33; Fred O. Sink, Jr., '45; and Rachel Sink Philpott (Mrs. J. Robert), '36.

Dan Edwards Accepts Post In Department of Defense

Dan K. Edwards, '35, has left his job as Mayor of Durham to take the post of Assistant Secretary of Defense, to which he was appointed by President Truman. He was chosen largely on the basis of the Defense Department's evaluation of his record in World War II and his activities in the North Carolina National Guard. As Assistant Secretary of Defense he will be in charge of handling legislation for the Defense Department before Congress.

The 37-year-old Durham lawyer served in the Army during the war, winning the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star, the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal, the Combat Infantry Badge, and the Purple Heart. He achieved the rank of Lieutenant Colonel and served as aide to General Robert Eichelberger in the Pacific Theater of Operations.

In 1947 he was elected Commander of the Durham Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. In the North Carolina

Boston, Mass., Area

Campaign Chairmen Above are four more alumni and friends of Duke who have served, or are serving, as chairmen of local campaigns for the Duke University Development Campaign. Mr. Hill headed last winter's drive in Durham among friends and business firms—a drive which produced more than $240,000 for the creation of a student activities center. Mr. Houck, president of the General Alumni Association and first member of the "Duke 100" group, is directing the campaign in and around Roanoke, Va. Mr. Van Hanford heads the region of North Carolina around Salisbury and Mr. Meyers is organizing the Boston area campaign. These four make a total of 30 chairmen whose photos have been in the REGISTER. A few chairmen have not yet appeared, but additional photos will be published when they become available. It is through these men and women, and the alumni and alumnae and friends of Duke that they select to help them in their campaign areas, that the University has been able to make such a vigorous effort toward strengthening its resources and intensifying its programs. Just what has been accomplished during the past year through the Development Campaign will be announced in detail at Commencement and will be reviewed in the June REGISTER.

National Guard he commands the First Battalion of the 119th Infantry, holding the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. Active in politics for many years, he represented Durham County in the 1947 and 1949 sessions of the North Carolina General Assembly. In the latter year he entered the Durham mayoralty race and defeated his opponent by 2,000 votes.

The new Assistant Secretary of Defense is a native son of Durham. He was born February 17, 1914, the son of Charles W. and Eva Marie Kramer Edwards. His father, a member of the Class of '94, was for many years a professor in the Duke Physics Department. After graduating from Duke Dan Edwards attended Harvard Law School. In 1941 he married Mary Partin, and they have four children, Katherine Leroy, Daniel K., Jr., Claire Egan and Jane Harrison Edwards.

He is a member of the American Bar Association and the North Carolina State Bar Association, a past president of the Durham Civitan Club and former chairman of the Durham County Chapter, American Red Cross. He is the author of "Amphibious Operations" and "The Use of Government Centralization in North Carolina."

First AF Woman Doctor Is a Graduate of Duke

Dorothy Armstrong Elias, M.D. '46, is the first woman doctor in the United States Air Force Medical Corps.

The oath of office was administered to her on March 14 by Brigadier General Edward J. Kendricks, director of staffing and education for the Air Force Medical Service, at special ceremonies held in Air Force headquarters in the Pentagon Building, Washington, D. C.

Dr. Elias will hold a captain's commission in the United States Air Force Reserve Medical Corps. The ranks of medical officers have been open to women since last September, but she is the first to be accepted. She is a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology and has been assigned to the Air Force Indoctrination Center at Sampson Air Force Base, Seneca, N. Y.

The wife of a surgeon, Dr. William Sibley Elias, of Washington, D. C., who is now resident physician and surgeon, Virginia Hospital, Martinsburg, W. Va., she is a native of Port Arthur, Ontario. Before entering the Duke Medical School, Dr. Elias did her undergraduate work at Tufts College and was for three years a registered nurse at the Port Arthur General Hospital. She served as interne at Mallory Institute, Boston, Mass., and George Washington University Hospital, Washington, D. C. She has held staff and resident physician positions as obstetrician and gynecologist at Women's Free Hospital, Brookline, Mass., and for the past year has held a residency at Prince George's General Hospital, Cheverly, Md. She previously served a year as a senior assistant surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

Dr. Elias being sworn in as first Air Force woman doctor.

Order Tickets Early for Best of Seats

Duke Athletic Director Eddie Cameron has announced that orders are now being accepted for season tickets to Duke's four home games next fall with N. C. State, October 13; Virginia, October 27, Homecoming; Wake Forest, November 10, and North Carolina, November 24.

The season books are priced at $14.00 each, and ten cents should be added to the cost of the entire order for insured mailing. Orders should be addressed to the Business Manager, Duke Athletic Association, Duke Station, Durham, N. C. They will be filled as soon as tickets go on sale this summer. Alumni are advised to order now to be sure of good seats for the games.

Seven weeks of spring football practice closed recently with the first annual Blue-White game between the varsity and a group of former Blue Devils headed by Bill Cox, last year's captain and the greatest passer in Duke history. The "old timers" made a good game of it for some 4,000 fans before bowing to the varsity 21-7.

Charlie Smith and Gerald Mozingo, a couple of subs from last year, along with sophomore Jack Kistler and 1950 subs Byrd Looper and Lloyd Caudle provided most of the offensive fireworks for the varsity. Charlie Smith got away on the longest run of the day, a 38-yard jaunt to the varsity's third touchdown.

Here is a general view of the prospects for next fall as carried in a spring football booklet prepared by the Office of Athletic Information of the Department of Athletics:

"Duke University will switch from the age-old single wing to the Split-T under new coach William D. (Bill) Murray this fall, and Murray is the first one to advise over-enthusiastic Blue Devil followers to expect no miracles.

"You simply cannot change systems in a matter of months and expect the new one to work without any flaws," Coach Murray said. "We must have time to develop it. We have had only seven weeks and much-much-work remains to be done. I am pleased with the spirit of the squad."

"The Blue Devils face a tough 10-game schedule with the first three games—South Carolina, Pittsburgh and Tennessee—all away from home.

"Coach Murray, the new mentor, worked this spring on two main things:

1. Familiarizing himself with the squad.
2. Familiarizing the squad with the Split-T.

"Practically all of the time was spent on offense with some work being done on defense the last two weeks of spring maneuvers. Early scrimmage sessions were highly satisfactory to Coach Murray as the boys apparently took to the Split-T with great speed.

"Things slowed down a bit later on, however, and Coach Murray was not completely satisfied with the way the team looked in the final scrimmage session of the spring when they had a struggle beating a group of seniors from last year's squad, 21-7. The seniors gained much ground with their single wing attack which featured the passing of Billy Cox, star of last year's outfit.

"In a nutshell, Duke is expected to win some this fall, and may lose some. The hacks, ends and centers appear to be well-manned on offense, but much work remains to be done to replace the men who played at the guards and tackles last year and on the entire defensive set up."

Spring Teams Hold Victory Paces

It has been a cheerful spring for followers of Blue Devil teams. Without exception, spring athletic aggregations have done exceedingly well in their respective endeavors.

Most outstanding have been the lacrosse and golf crews, each of which has endured but a single defeat this season, and that only recently.

For a while the lacrosse team could consider itself as ranking either No. 1 or No. 2 in the nation. A recent 9 to 7 victory over Johns Hopkins, perennial national champs, climaxed a victory skein of six games, and placed the Devils on the summit of the national standings. The win-streak, however, was finally broken by the University of Virginia who won by a score of 11 to 10.

Top performers for the stickmen of Coach Jack Persons have been Rod Boyce, Brook Cottman, Fred Eisenbrandt, and goalie Don Bafford.

In golf, Duke squeezed out its 14th straight victory over U.N.C.'s Tarheels, and in doing so handed the neighboring linksmen their first defeat in 14 matches this year. In this particular match, staged at Hope Valley, the Tarheel's captain, Frank Brooks, fired a phenomenal 63 for the eighteen holes to shatter the course record—but not enough to vanquish the Blue Devils.

The Tarheels came back in a return match, however, to hand the linksmen their lone defeat of the season. Afterwards, the Devils went on to take the Southern Conference Tournament.

Leading golfers are co-captains Mike Souchak and Louis McLennan and Henry Clark.

The tennis team has pounded out 13 victories in 15 matches, losing only to North Carolina and Rollins.

Tennis captain is John Ross and top stars are basketballer Kes Deimling, Hal Lipton, Jack Warmath, John Tapley, and Norm Schellenger.

Duke's cindermen have not lagged behind their colleagues on other fields. Right now they can boast a record of four wins against two losses—to Navy and U. N. C.—and one tie—Princeton.

After defeating Carolina in an early match, they lost by a close 61-70 score in a return engagement when star Henry Poss couldn't participate due to a leg injury.

Baseball

Coach Jack Coombs began the current baseball season smiling broadly, as his sophomore-studded nine slammed out early victories over strong opponents, losing but two of the first 10 games. Both of these losses were due to bobbles brought about by inexperience in key positions. This same trouble plagued the Big Blue during the mid-season campaigns and, currently, the team holds second place in the Southern Division of the conference standings with a record, for the season, of 14 wins and eight losses in and out of conference play.

With an infield consisting of Bill Werber, sophomore son of a former Duke and major league great, on first; Bill Bergeron, senior from Greenwich, Conn., on second; Dick Groat, junior basketball All-America at short; and Tom Powers, last fall's gridiron wingback, at third, the Devils can boast of one of the best infields in collegiate baseball. The pitching staff, headed by Joe Lewis, Frank Graham and Bob Davis is strong throughout, while an outfield of Dick Johnson, John Gibbons, and John Carroll adds to the team's potent hitting strength.

Almost without exception, the early losses sustained by the Coombsmen this season resulted from a sporadic defense which lagged at crucial moments in major games. Such procedures have caused Coach Jack, a thorough-going perfectionist, to tear at his hair in agony. More recently it has been weak pitching that has lost ball games. The Coach, however, can consider next season's prospects with grinning optimism, because his youthful performers by then will have been seasoned in competitions, and, barring military demands upon athletic manpower, will return for new glory.

Meanwhile, the men of the diamond have not done bad at all this year—not bad at all.

Wake Forest Chooses Tom Rogers to Coach

Thomas Tinsley Rogers, '35, was "one of the best ends ever to play at Duke University," according to the Wake Forest College Alumni News. It is no wonder that they admit this fact, for Tom Rogers has succeeded fiery D. C. "Pea-head" Walker as head football coach at Wake Forest.

He has been line coach at the Baptist school for the greater part of the time since he was a student at Duke, and took over the top coaching post when Mr.

Development Campaign Honor Roll of Donors on Press; 2,000 Names To Be Listed

The first compilation of the Honor Roll of donors to the Duke Development Campaign is now on the press. It will include over 2,000 names of alumni, trustees, Durham City subscribers and friends of the University whose gifts had been received and recorded up to May 10th.

On that date, a total of $1,220,127.57 had been subscribed in cash and signed pledges toward the $3,000,000 needed as a minimum to match $3,000,000 promised by the Rockefeller-sponsored General Education Board and an anonymous donor. This $1,220,127.57, with the $2,087,646.25 subscribed during 1949-50 (and not available for matching) and the $3,000,000 "promised" makes a grand total of $6,307,773.82 in sight toward the $8,650,000 Development Campaign goal.

The Honor Roll, printed as an advance proof, will not include the names of the 565 members of the faculty and administrative staff nor the 500 students who had made gifts up to May 10. The Student Campaign was launched on May 2. In the first eight days, over one-tenth of the student body had contributed. The campaign was continuing as this issue went to press.

A progress report on the over-all campaign will be made to the Duke National Council on Saturday afternoon, June 2, by B. F. Few, '15, National Chairman and University Trustee. An average of $35,000 a week was sent in by local committees during April. This increased to $45,000 in the first ten days of May as the end of the intensive campaign period on June 30 approached.

The Honor Roll, showing the names of donors by regions, will be mailed out over Commencement week end to all alumni except those in a few areas where the campaign is not yet organized. The flyer will include a listing, by class groups and graduate schools, of average gifts made by alumni up to May 1st. This shows proportionate giving—and generous giving, too—and demonstrates that alumni are giving substantially to the Development drive. These average gifts are shown (in the adjoining column).

Walker left the Deacons for an assistant coaching job at Yale University.

A native of Hinton, W. Va., Tom Rogers began with the Duke varsity the same year Wallace Wade started his coaching career with the Blue Devils in 1931. He made All-Southern and received numerous other All-State honors. In his final year, he was named on several All-American squads including that of Grantland Rice. While at Duke he was president of ODK, national honorary leadership fraternity.

Tom Rogers continued at Duke as line coach for freshman teams and physical education instructor until 1938, when he joined the Wake Forest coaching staff. In 1940 he took a post at Clemson College as line coach and varsity baseball coach, under the direction of Frank Howard.

May 27, 1943, brought a commission as lieutenant in the United States Navy for Tom Rogers. He was attached to the Navy athletic program and was first sent to Chapel Hill where he became an instructor with the 11th V-5 indoctrination course in the Navy Pre-Flight School at the University of North Carolina. He also coached the Pre-Flight Cloudbusters football squad while there. Later he was transferred to the Pacific Coast where he coached the Arlington, Wash., Navy team.

After being discharged from the Navy in 1945, the new Deacon head football mentor returned to his Clemson post. It was not long before he had coaching offers from several other schools. He chose to return to Wake Forest, where he has remained ever since. Coaches Howard and Walker had nothing but complimentary words for him when he was considered for the top Deacon position.

Although he maintains he is no golfer, Tom Rogers was also given the job of coaching the Wake golf team in 1946. He plays consistently in the 80's and 90's, but has won a few prizes for himself. As an all-round athlete, and as a coach, Tom Rogers is sure to come out on top.

He was married to the former Frances Moore of Durham on July 29, 1938. They have two sons, Tom, Jr., 10, and Robert Kent, who will soon be eight.

Sculptor of Statues on Duke Campus Dies

Charles Keek, noted sculptor who executed the sarcophagi of James B., Benjamin N., and Washington Duke in the University Chapel and the statue of James B. Duke which stands in the quadrangle in front of the Chapel, died April 23 at his home, Gypsy Trail Camp, Carmel, N. Y., at the age of 76.

A native of New York City, Mr. Keek was famous for the heroic monuments he created for municipalities, the Federal Government, and civic groups. His works may be found in virtually every state in the Union and several foreign countries.

Mr. Keek designed some of North Carolina's best known monuments, including the monument to the three Presidents the State gave to the nation, located on Capitol Square in Raleigh; and the Charles B. Aycock monument in the United States Hall of Fame in Washington, D. C.

One of his best known works is the statue of Francis P. Duffy, famous fighting chaplain of New York's "Fighting 69th" during the first World War, which stands in Times Square, New York City.

At the time of his death, figures which Mr. Keek had designed were being carved on the World War II Memorial on the mall leading to Borough Hall in Brooklyn. He had recently finished an outstanding statue of Abraham Lincoln as a boy.

Mr. Keek first worked with the sculptor Philip Martini. After studying at the National Academy of Design, the Art Students League, and the American Academy in Rome, he became assistant to the world renowned sculptor Augustus St. Gaudens in 1893. His style, thereafter, followed that of St. Gaudens.

Mr. Keek was a former president of the National Sculptors Society, of the Century Association, the Architectural League and the Numismatic Society.

Surviving are the widow, and his sons, James Charles, Jr., '49, now a second year medical student at Duke, and John William.

FUTURE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES?

No, but she is an important young lady. Her hand clasped confidently in mother's, she's leaving the hospital after a minor operation. Blue Cross-Blue Shield benefits will take the financial sting out of her first hospital adventure—and whether or not she's going to be our country's first woman president, when it comes to sickness expenses, her future looks bright. Clean-up man on the baseball nine, this slugger doesn’t like to reach for ‘em . . . wants it right over the plate. And that’s the way he likes his proof of cigarette mildness! No razzle-dazzle “quick-puff” tests for him. No one-whiff, one-puff experiments. There’s one test, he’s discovered, that’s right down the alley!

It’s the test that proves what cigarette mildness really means. THE SENSIBLE TEST . . . the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as a steady smoke—on a pack-after-pack, day-after-day basis. After you’ve enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your “T-Zone” (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you’ll know why . . .

Who gave you the word on my doings? I'm sorry I haven't kept in touch. It certainly has not been for lack of things to write about for I've been most fortunate in leading a very busy and exciting life for the last two years.

I spent a year and a half in that most wonderful city of Seattle—flying as a stewardess for Pan American to Alaska and the Yukon Territory—Annette Island, Juneau, Whitehorse, Fairbanks and Nome. I got to know the people and the territory pretty well by flying feeder lines to such out posts as Kotzebue—one of the last truly Eskimo villages on the Bering Sea, going goose hunting and skiing in the hills behind Fairbanks; climbing the mountains, flying over the ice caps and down into remote lakes around Juneau to go trout fishing, and even catching large salmon by hand as they crowded up the streams on Annette Island. The best time of all though was the trip another stewardess and I made in a small boat with a 12-horsepower outboard motor down the Yukon River from Whitehorse, Y. T. to Circle, Alaska. The 737 miles took us 6½ days—counting time out to visit with all the old timers and natives along the way. Spent one afternoon in Dawson and another in Eagle. The rapids were very tame, and the wild life, including the mosquitoes (thank goodness), very scarce—only saw one grizzly and chased one moose that was swimming the river 'round in circles. We would have loved spending 3 weeks or more on the trip but Pan American had to have us back.

In Seattle I had the wonderful experience of living with seven other gals in a four-bedroom house right on Lake Washington where we had our own dock for swimming and sunning. Four of us bought a sail boat from Hunter Simpson, a boy who worked for IBM in Seattle and of whom you'll hear more later. Our summer life consisted of lake-side activities plus trips down the Hood Canal, hiking around Mt. Rainer, camping in the Olympic forest and jaunts to Vancouver and Victoria. In winter we were less diversified, just skiing, skiing and more skiing.

THIS MONTH'S COVER

Early each June, on a Sunday morning—usually a hot Sunday morning—Duke University's seniors file into Duke Chapel for their final religious service as students. The seniors are proud and happy, because they have accomplished the objective of their college careers and are about to receive the University's official salute. But they are no prouder than parents—and sometimes brothers and sisters—who come to see them graduate and who share this last worship service with them. The photographer caught the crowd just at the conclusion of the morning program.

For Dick Williams
the future
wasn't lost.

Only Postponed

THE LAST THING Ed Nichols had expected to get mixed up in was a square dance. But here he was swinging lovely young Patsy Stevenson. "This is fun," Ed puffed.

"You're the best one on the floor, Mr. Nichols," she said, and then she spun off and Ed found himself swinging Martha Williams. "It's a great party, Martha."

"Thank you, Ed. I guess it is. I'm almost having a good time myself."

"It's better if you do, Martha. It'll make it a little easier, maybe." He glanced at Martha's son, Dick, who was now dancing with Patsy—and looking as if he were having the best time of all. Good boy, Ed thought. Here he was about to go into service and . . . well, he was a swell kid.

A few minutes later Ed was standing on the sidelines sipping a cool drink and resting.

"Having a good time, Mr. Nichols?" somebody said. It was Dick Williams.

"Yes, I am, Dick." He paused a second. "I had hoped that I'd be seeing you off to college at about this time but . . ."

"Uncle Sam comes first, Mr. Nichols. But I'll be back before you know it . . . and heading for college as Dad and you planned."

"I hope you will, son. Soon!" Ed remembered how Dick's dad had talked about the boy's future and how he, as the New York Life agent, had helped Dick's dad give those plans definite form. When Dick was ten, his father had died, leaving the boy proud memories and enough life insurance to see him and his mother through the years ahead.

"I want you to know, Mr. Nichols, that this whole thing is a lot easier for me, knowing that Mom will have everything she needs while I'm away."

"Mrs. Nichols and I will look in on her often, Dick."

"Thanks," the boy said simply. "And before you know it, we'll throw another party—after I'm back from service and on my way to college." Dick shook hands. "Now, if you'll excuse me, I want to find Patsy Stevenson. I have something important to say to her . . ."

Ed watched the boy and girl going out the side door. "Great kid," he said to himself. "This country's got a great future as long as it has kids like that."

Naturally, names used in this story are fictitious.

FEW OCCUPATIONS offer a man so much in the way of personal reward as life underwriting. Many New York Life agents are building very substantial futures for themselves by helping others plan ahead for theirs. If you would like to know more about a life insurance career, talk it over with the New York Life manager in your community—or write to the Home Office at the address above.

Another Duke Service

Many Duke alumni will remember a member of the faculty by the name of Archibald C. Jordan. They will remember him as being a person who believed that the students who attended Duke University should know what to do with the English language when they had occasion to use it. As a Duke alumnus and a member of the English Department, several years ago Professor Jordan, in cooperation with the North Carolina English Teachers Association, decided that the time had come for someone to do something about the kind of training the young people were getting in English grammar. He asked the English teachers in the colleges and universities, as well as in the high schools of North Carolina, to take aggressive action to improve the spelling, punctuation, and rhetoric of the students in their various educational systems. One indication of how fruitful this movement has been is the editorial in the Charlotte Observer on Monday, June 11, entitled "Students Do Write." It follows:

"The fellows on the copy desk of a newspaper, some of whom have grown gray in the unheralded work of correcting the spelling, punctuation, and rhetoric of the younger news writers, may be pardoned if they sometimes express cynicism about the teaching of English in high schools and colleges.

"Their common complaint is, 'These kids can't even spell. Why I couldn't have passed out of the fourth grade—etc. etc.'

"But the current Student Issue of The North Carolina English Teacher, containing thirty-one examples of compositions written in the high school English classes of North Carolina, proves that some of these students—at least thirty-one of them—can really write. Moreover, it gives us a little glow of pride to notice that six of the thirty-one compositions chosen for inclusion in the pamphlet were written by students of Charlotte High School—the largest number for any one school.

"The compositions include short stories, descriptive sketches, simple narratives, and poetry. All of them are excellent, and some of the poetry is of a distinctly high caliber. We are not going to risk the usual brickbats that come the way of the critic by singling out any of the compositions for special praise, but all of them show what good teaching can do with good talent.

"Some 47 other compositions, not included in the pamphlet, were given honorable mention, and since they represent high schools all the way from Wilmington to Asheville—and not all of them in the big towns, by any means—it must be conceded that the teaching of English is not half as bad as it is sometimes represented to be."

The author of the editorial, as you will note, wound up by saying that "the teaching of English is not half as bad as it is sometimes represented to be." We like to think that Duke University, through one of its professors in service to education, has made it possible for the author to conclude his editorial in this manner, and that perhaps this contribution of Duke University has had some influence in improving the teaching of English. Duke University continues to serve.

Just Rambling

The addition this year to the Commencement Program of the Hoof 'n' Horn presentation on Saturday night was a success by any measurement. The students worked overtime on polishing up the production and adding new features, until it would have been a credit to Broadway. The alumni and the University are grateful to them for their enthusiastic cooperation in making possible this delightful addition to the Commencement Week End. Approximately 1,000 alumni, parents, students, and others were on hand to express their approval. . . . The class of '26, the Silver Anniversary class, came early and stayed late. Its round of festivities was one of the most complete of any 25th year class. In fact, those present had such a good time that they are looking forward to the next reunion of the class with renewed enthusiasm. . . . More alumni and parents stayed on the campus than ever before; and, in spite of the fact that the dormitories are not especially prepared to take care of groups of this kind, the general opinion was that the parking facilities, the good fellowship, the talkfest, and the other things that make up a well-rounded visit to the campus outweighed any minor inconveniences of the dormitories. . . . The announcement by President Edens that the alumni and friends of the University had raised seven and a half million dollars toward a goal of $8,650,000 was most encouraging. The National Council unanimously recommended that the Development Campaign be continued through December 31 in order to raise the million dollars needed to reach our goal. There seemed to be a general feeling the goal of a million dollars would not only be reached but that it would be surpassed. . . . The hundreds of workers among alumni and friends of the University have not slackened one bit in their efforts to make this program an outstanding one in the history of the University. Not only are they anxious to reach the goal in regard to the amount of money, but they hope that every former student and friend of the University will have his name on the final honor roll.

Development Campaign Total of $7,500,000 Is Announced

A temperate spring gave way to summer with unwelcomed enthusiasm during Commencement week end. Temperatures hovered between 95 and 100 degrees in the coolest shade. But the sudden invasion of an equatorial sun failed miserably if its intent was to parch the spirit of over 1,200 graduating students, their parents, a thousand celebrating alumni, and hosts of other visitors to the campus.

This 1951 Commencement Week End will be remembered as one of Duke's brightest. Those former students who returned for class reunions and other alumni events made the Gothic halls of West Campus ring with the good will and good cheer of fellowship and loyalty. While falling slightly short of being the largest alumni turnout, this year's crowd was, without doubt, one of the liveliest.

There was cause for jubilation. Over and above the fun of meeting old classmates and girl friends, of dinners and picnics, there was a sense of serious accomplishment that lent the 1951 Commencement observances an air of triumph.

The Big Announcement

President Edens, speaking before the graduating class in the Indoor Stadium on Monday morning, made public an announcement that had been made privately twice before: first before the National Council Saturday afternoon, and second before the General Alumni Association Saturday evening.

Monday the public was allowed to hear the news that alumni had heard two days earlier:

Through the Duke University Development Campaign, Duke's alumni and friends had raised $7,500,000 for "a greater Duke," and the immediate goal of the campaign was but one million dollars away!

Furthermore, the President announced, work would soon start on the final major building project of the program, the new Administration and Classroom Building, scheduled for the corner of the quadrangle directly across from the West Campus Library.

Additional details of the Development Program's achievements during 1950-51 are carried in this issue of the REGISTER with the story of the National Council meeting.

Another Large Class

Degrees awarded at graduation exercises numbered 1,216. Of these 137 were earned as of September 1, 1950, and the rest during the current academic year.

The University's three undergraduate colleges produced 691 candidates for degrees this year. Trinity College offered 369 for the Bachelor of Arts and 19 for the Bachelor of Science; the Woman's College 197 for the Bachelor of Arts and nine for the Bachelor of Science; and the College of Engineering 46 for Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering, 24 in Electrical Engineering, and 20 in Civil Engineering.

Graduate and professional school degrees, numbering 525, were broken down as follows:

Diploma in Nursing, 39; Bachelor of Science in Medicine, 4; Doctor of Medicine, 76; Bachelor of Laws, 78; Master of Laws, 5; Bachelor of Divinity, 33; Master of Religious Education, 3; Master of Education, 1; Master of Arts, 46; Doctor of Philosophy, 56; Master of Forestry, 45; and Doctor of Forestry, 2.

The Robert E. Lee Prize, presented to a member of the senior class on the basis of leadership, character, scholarship and athletic ability, went this year to Noyes Thompson (Tom) Powers, of Cumberland, Md. It is the University's highest student honor.

Tom, who graduated magna cum laude, was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, senior class president, a member of the honorary society Red Friars, and an outstanding football and baseball star. The Robert E. Lee prize is the gift of the Rev. A. W. Plyler, '92, and Mrs. Plyler.

A number of those seniors receiving degrees were simultaneously given reserve commissions in various branches of the armed service. Four Army Air Force commissions were granted, the first since the Duke Air R.O.T.C. was organized two years ago. The Navy commissioned 39 ensigns, the Marine Corps six second lieutenants, and one doctor was commissioned into the Medical Corps. Six other Duke doctors have been commissioned in the Army during the academic year.

It might be anticipated that a number of other graduates will be inducted into the armed service with somewhat less ceremony in coming weeks.

No Time for Neutral Minds

An audience of parents, alumni, and visitors estimated at 6,000 was on hand in the Indoor Stadium to witness the exercises. The academic procession, which began forming in the traditional manner along the walk from the Clock Tower to the gymnasium at 9:15 a.m., attracted a host of amateur photographers anxious to record on film their graduating sons and daughters and the colorful pageantry of caps and gowns.

The Honorable W. Kerr Scott, governor of North Carolina, delivered the message to the graduating class. Commencement speaker was Robert D. Calkins, Ph.D., LL.D., director of the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation.

In the presidential address to the degree candidates, Dr. Edens commented:

"The University believes in you; otherwise she would not have placed the imprint of her seal upon you. The members of the faculty and your other friends in the University will remember you for what you were at your best in conduct and performance. They will expect much from you in the future.

"You have come in contact while here with men and women of strong convictions. This is no time for neutral minds. The University stands for something. It believes in something. It expects the same of you, and we have confidence that you, as educated men and women, will subject your judgments always to the noblest criteria which educated men and women have devised."

Approximately one-third of the degrees awarded this year went to students who are native North Carolinians. The graduating class contained representatives of 40 states and eight foreign countries. The 1950-51 student body at Duke was composed of students from all 48 states and 33 foreign countries.

"In Quest of the Great Age"

Excerpts from the "Commencement Address"

by Robert D. Calkins, Director General Education Board

Half a century ago, shortly after his election as President of Princeton University, Woodrow Wilson, speaking on "The Ideals of America" at ceremonies commemorating the one hundredth and twenty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Trenton, concluded his remarks by referring to this country's coming day of strength in the Twentieth Century:

"It is by the widening of vision," he said, "that nations, as men, grow and are made great. We need not fear the expanding scene." . . .

Woodrow Wilson foresaw, as others have foreseen, the coming shift of political and economic power in the Twentieth Century. But he could not foresee, as one rarely can, the precise events by which those shifts would be brought about. . . .

Our day of strength has arrived, and yet the vision with which we were expected to exercise that tremendous power is so wanting or uncertain, that we now think less of establishing the great age of which Wilson spoke, than of avoiding wholesale destruction of the things that mark our civilization. . . .

Upon thinking people, such as you in this audience, falls in your time the major responsibility for turning helplessness into mastery, drift into purposeful direction, and ideals into realities. In a republic such as ours, where the people govern, even if only by consent, thinking people and universities, like this, which develop the capacity for thought and vision, hold the only power we have to steer our course in the surging torrent of world events in which we now move.

You who will shortly take over the direction of affairs in this country may wish to pursue your careers and seek your own quiet lives undisturbed, as men have done before you; but the world of your times is destined to allow you no such retreat. Because of this nation's power and influence, your behavior and even your attitudes have become of vital concern to distant peoples whom you may never see and never know. . . .

Perhaps the greatest difficulty we must overcome in order to play the international role to which we have fallen heir is our want of historical and cultural perspective for dealing with other peoples. We are new at world politics, and heretofore we have seen little need for an understanding of remote people beyond the orbit of our traditions. Now suddenly we find the whole world stirring with ambitions, or being stirred by friend or foe. Our neglect of education relating to foreign cultures and world history has left us bewildered and unable to understand the forces at work in critical places whose names and locations we scarcely know. . . .

One of the most immediate threats to our conception of life is Russian imperialism and communism. Of them we know relatively little, yet with them we must contend. But it is illusion to regard communism and Russian imperialism as the sole obstacles to peace and harmony. . . .

Whether we seek allies for a balance of power against totalitarian communism, or in the longer view seek friendly relations in a world in which communist imperialism has been contained or removed, we must recognize our own weakness in the eyes of others. We are a wealthy nation with good intentions, but we are not wholly trusted even by our allies. They dislike much of our behavior, and too many of us hold the notion, widely suspect beyond our borders, that if only other nations would adopt our institutions and ways—democracy, free enterprise, materialistic objectives, and neighborly good-will toward others—concord and progress would be assured. This to foreign countries is often unconvincing or unpalatable in their customs. . . .

Since the Great Discoveries of the fifteenth century, European supremacy, occidental civilization and Christianity have been extended to the far corners of the earth. For four hundred years we have come to think of European strength and culture as the only influence of consequence in the world. We have forgotten that prior to the Great Discoveries, China, India and the Islam states were and had been for years the dominant powers in the world. . . .

Whether or not the era of occidental supremacy has passed, the era of increasing influence from non-Western cultures is at hand. In grasping this situation we are at a disadvantage for we know little of these cultures. As Toynbee explains (Civilizations on Trial) the stirrings in non-Western societies are of our own making. We have provided them with Western ideas and education, and they have incorporated these influences and our history into theirs, thus broadening and transcending their own culture. We, on the other hand, have retained our parochial self-centered Western outlook, that scarcely recognizes the existence of any culture but our own. If we are to deal with these peoples and the forces around us, and that we must, we have no choice but to acquire an understanding of the culture and behavior of those who lie outside the Western tradition. . . .

Our task is very different from that of previous world powers. Heretofore, the great powers have had large sprawling empires reaching over several continents. In their outlying regions they have had a direct economic and political stake and the obligation to rule. The British, the Dutch, the French and the Germans prepared themselves for the world politics of their time and acquired something of a cosmopolitan outlook. We, on the other hand, seek no world empire; we have no desire to rule other lands; we welcome self-rule and independence. We seek to wield no power over other peoples save that of persuasive good-will and helpfulness. We seek to spread occidental ideas—our brand of Western ideas—without coercion, through lands where Western influence has been before, but at a time when those lands are throwing off the harness of occidental rule. . . .

As a people we possess more than a vast scientific knowledge and industrial capacity, more than material comfort and devotion to ideals of freedom. We place no limit upon our capacity to discover further knowledge of the physical universe and put it to man's use. We have only recently come to suspect that the materialism and physical comfort for which we are distinguished is not the whole of a great life, nor the whole of a great civilization. When we turn our attention and energies resolutely to discover man's experience and possibilities for rounding out great lives and great cultures, we may find the missing route to the great age, not only for themselves, but for peoples who desire to share its blessings everywhere. . . .

Our universities have long approached the physical world in search of universal uniformities, but in the social and cultural fields they have ventured little beyond our Western heritage. Unless I misread the signs, we are now entering a period when, from practical necessity, we shall lift our eyes and examine civilizations that up to now we have ignored. From a study of their history, their institutions, their religions, their aspirations and their conduct, we shall gain understanding and acquire vision for the mission that falls to us in our day of strength. From that study of non-Western cultures we may enrich our own heritage and carry men forward not only to a better life, but to a better comprehension of a universe, the penetration of whose mysteries is man's unending quest.

“What Do You Make of Life?”

*A digest of the Baccalaureate Sermon
by The Reverend Paul Ehrman Scherer,
Professor of Homiletics
Union Theological Seminary*

Ask the next person you meet that question, and the chances are he will answer you quite flatly, Nothing. Nothing at all. It's a hopeless jumble. Things just go round and round, toward the hole in the sink. You fight a war to make the world safe for democracy, and there's less democracy when you finish than there was when you began. Then you fight another war for the four freedoms; and the outcome? More devilment than ever with want and fear; and every man's religion is free only to accommodate itself to his side of the iron curtain, or to how itself off the stage entirely, with its hat under its arm, into the comforts of the Gospel. I can make nothing of life, says the man on the street.

But put the question to him a bit differently. Ask him this time, What do you make of life? That undercuts the puzzle. If he answers now, I can make nothing of it, he's talking worse than nonsense; he's taken to lying. A good deal can be made of it. A good deal has been made of it.

Here you are, on the threshold of a world that isn't exactly holding out its arms to you in eager welcome. It's a world with a frowning face behind its fitful smile, threatening every other year or two to fall apart half a dozen ways into ruin. The issue is going to depend in far greater measure than you imagine on how your generation regards this Christian faith to which you have fallen heir. It is intended to be essentially creative. It is here to make a difference, both inside and out. Not to repair a breach in the walls. Not to shore up the foundations. Not to patch the roof where the rain comes in. To shape order out of chaos. To stand against some darkness or some void and watch the light come. To have a go at shaping where you are some little corner of God's kingdom, as a potter shapes a vase. To chisel out of the crude granite of the world “carved angels, eager-eyed, with hair blown back, and wings put cross-wise on their breasts,” “choir over choir, face to face uplifted.”

There is no earthly objection to anybody's using Christianity as a refuge. Never offer any apologies for it on that score. There are times when we need shelter: shelter from the mind's fear and the heart's anguish, from sheer futility and despair. But God help us if we go on thinking that's enough! Nobody can stand still and be safe by fighting off attack. A nation can't, an army can't, and a soul can't. Sometimes we talk about saving Protestantism. On the global scale we are busy saving our American enterprise against the inroads of Communism. And do you know what it all means? It means that both of them—Protestantism and the American ideal—are in a bad way! The ultimate secret of physical health doesn't lie in brushing your teeth and gargling and spraying yourself with germicides.

Why is it so hard to learn as much about these things in our Western culture with which we have fallen so deeply in love? Unless we can manage somehow to get them out from under the defenses we have been trying to build around them, and set them on their feet in the world's face, conquering and to conquer, they're done!

Paul was sure that the Christian faith was essentially creative, that it was here to make a difference. And he was sure of this too: that with such an incomparably great thing as the grace of God involved in it, nobody could ever be satisfied to set it meagre tasks or reap from it meagre harvests. That was unthinkable. To have the whole of God in your hands—that's what he says—to no point and no effect, would be to harness the tides and turn not even a flutter-mill! That would be to garner the driving energies of all Creation, and use them for no purpose! He wasn't afraid that God would waste anything: he was afraid that people would waste God! Maybe you can set that God as he did—and it was no fool's errand!—against the world you have on your books. God will not tell us how to whip the Russians. He had no word for Paul about how to whip Rome. He has a word about human life, and He has a word about Himself: I the Lord thy God have spoken it. It shall come to pass.

But that word isn't for anybody who keeps feeling his spiritual pulse, or looking on from the side-lines to see how the game is going now. It isn't for anybody who hoards the faith he has, and thinks that Christianity is his own private road to peace of mind. It's for those who will confront the world again with God's creative challenge: men and women, as Visser t' Hooft has put it, who will raise the simple, direct, concrete, primeval human issues, about our racial inequalities, our moral indifference to the rights of others, our callous exploitation of everything in the heaven above and in the earth beneath. It's for those who without fear of result or hope of reward will take their place on the side of the poor and the needy and the disinherited: not to solve the sterile problems of living, but to set once more for men the problem of life.

National Council Surveys a Year of Great Achievement and Plans New Moves

Duke University's drive toward an immediate $8,650,000 Development Program goal during 1950-51 has produced $7,500,000.

This was announced for the first time, officially, by Benjamin F. Few, '15, A.M. '16, at the Commencement meeting of the National Council on Saturday, June 2, the very day that the $7,500,000 figure was reached.

The national chairman emphasized, in his announcement, the double importance of the approximately $1,000,000 still needed to reach the $8,650,000 objective. This sum must be raised as part of the $3,000,000 still required to match gifts offered by the General Education Board and an anonymous donor on a contingent basis.

Edwin L. Jones, '12, of Charlotte, N. C., presiding at the meeting, in the absence of Chairman Kenneth M. Brim, '20, reminded Council members that the total announced included these contingent funds, and that all of the money cannot be counted as actually in hand until the last dollar of the matching fund is pledged.

The Council then unanimously carried a motion by Mr. Few that the campaign be extended to December 31, 1951, and that alumni who have volunteered to serve as campaign workers be requested to dedicate their efforts to raising the amount still necessary to the goal within the next six months.

Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, new National Council Chairman, inspects the Development Campaign display in the Union lobby during Commencement.

"This next $1,000,000," Mr. Few commented, "should be within easy reach. I would remind you that only a small percentage of our fellow-alumni have thus far pledged to give to this program. This is true primarily because only a small percentage has as yet been asked to give. Among those who have been asked, the response has been great.

"In the sort of an intensified campaign necessary to raise the kind of money Duke must have, it has been impossible to reach into every segment of the alumni body within the time that has elapsed. Nor has there been available a staff large enough to push this thing everywhere it should be pushed.

"We have, therefore, an opportunity to reach our goal by extending our plea to all of our alumni. If we can get the participation that the Loyalty Fund has enjoyed in past years, with an average gift equal to that of this past year's Development Campaign, then success is a foregone conclusion."

The Source Is Important

During the discussion of Mr. Few's motion to extend the campaign until the Few, '15, the campaign's national chairman; Alex H. Sands, Jr., of the Duke Endowment and a University trustee, and Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Senator Willis Smith. end of the current calendar year, Leo S. Brady, '23, of New York City commented:

"Out of the more than 25,000 prospects the amount subscribed to date has been from about 4,000 alumni and friends. We need to raise the money, but equally important is the source of that money. Along with our attempts to raise the money should go the attempt to visit personally every single alumnus and to obtain some subscription, no matter how small. Much of the lack of response is due to the fact that our alumni are not in the habit of giving. I have a notion that we ought to start getting that habit."

Members of the Council were welcomed by President Edens at the opening of their Commencement meeting. The President expressed to each of them his own and the University's deep appreciation for the part that they had played, by giving of their time and their means, in the great success of the 1950-51 campaign.

Dr. Edens revealed to alumni at the General Alumni Association dinner Saturday night the news of the Development Campaign's outstanding success. On Monday he announced it to the public at graduation exercises and added that the proposed Administration and Classroom Building would soon begin to rise on West Campus.

Each member of the National Council was given a full and detailed report of the campaign, with results by regions, classes, and schools. The report for the current fiscal year will not be complete until June 30. Later some of the details of the results of the campaign will be published for all alumni to examine.

Edwards Is New Chairman

Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, of Hookerton, N. C., was unanimously elected chairman of the National Council for 1951-52. Mr. Edwards is one of North Carolina's leading farmers and has been prominent in State and national farm organizations for a number of years. Vigorous and active and an able leader, he is expected to direct the efforts of the National Council to a successful culmination of the current campaign for urgently needed funds.

Mr. Edwards succeeds Kenneth M. Brim, '20, of Greensboro, N. C., who was unable to attend the Commencement meeting of the Council because of business of an emergency nature. Mr. Brim, who has been outstanding in University activities during the year, has drawn high praise from President Edens and from fellow-Council members for his accomplishments.

Elected vice-chairman of the National Council was Dr. H. K. Terry, '36, of Miami, Fla. Dr. Terry received the D.M.D. from Harvard in 1940.

Named to the executive committee were Edwin L. Jones, Jr., B.S.C.E. '48; Charles S. Clegg, '26; and B. Everett Jordan, '18. Elected representatives-at-large to the Council were Mr. Jones; Charles S. Rhyne, '34; Mr. Jordan; Leon S. Ivey, '26; and Estelle Flowers Spears (Mrs. Marshall T.), '14.

The slate of officers was presented by Richard E. Thigpen, '22, on behalf of the Executive Committee.

After Four Years

After four full years of activity, the Duke University National Council, organized in 1947, can look back upon a brief but significant history of contributions to Duke.

Since its organization it has brought into a cohesive and effectively operating unit representatives of the University's somewhat heterogeneous alumni groups. It has succeeded in coordinating the activities of alumni organizations and in bringing them and the University into a profitable and productive partnership.

Its major accomplishment has been the organization of the Loyalty Fund, through which Duke has received, and will continue to receive, annual financial support, and the conduct of the Development Campaign to provide urgently needed money for capital expenditures.

The National Council enters its fifth year with a record of significant accomplishments behind it and prospects for even greater achievement ahead.

Gordon Gray, U. N. C. president; Julian Boyd, Princeton librarian, and Liston Pope, Yale Divinity School dean.

Three Receive Honorary Degrees

Julian Parks Boyd, '25, A.M. '26, librarian of Princeton University, historian, editor, and administrator, was awarded the Litt. D. degree at Commencement. A tireless collector and accurate interpreter of historical materials, Mr. Boyd is the editor of a 50-volume collection of Jefferson's papers. Like Jefferson, he is an aristocrat in intellect and a democrat in his desire to put the power of truth and the privilege of inquiry at the free disposal of all men.

Gordon Gray, president of the University of North Carolina, received the LL.D. degree. He is also a lawyer, legislator and an editor. Having entered the Army of the United States as a private, he rapidly advanced in the service, and then became Secretary of the Army. A far-sighted statesman, he has merited the commendation of his country for, among many other distinguished services, a significant report on international economic matters of far-reaching importance. President Gray is an effective leader of democratic higher education at one of the nation's oldest and foremost state universities.

Liston Corlando Pope, '29, B.D. '32, who was presented the D.D. degree, is the first son of the South to become Dean of the Divinity School of Yale University. A native North Carolinian, a brilliant scholar, author, and lecturer in social ethics, he is an unexcelled pioneer in the professional education of an ecumenical ministry for a world in grave moral crisis.

Alumni Association Holds Annual Meeting

Bill Werber, '30, Is Elected President for 1951-52

William M. Werber, '30, of Washington, D. C., was elected president of the General Alumni Association at its annual dinner meeting in the West Campus Union on Saturday evening, June 2. He succeeds C. B. Houck, '22, of Roanoke, Va.

An insurance counselor in Washington, Mr. Werber was one of the all-time greats of Duke baseball. He was a star shortstop on the team from 1928 through 1930, and later became a major league player. This spring, his son, Bill, Jr., a sophomore, was one of Duke's leading diamond stars. He was chosen 1951's most valuable player in the Big Four.

Other officers elected for the coming year were three vice-presidents: Richard E. Thigpen, '22, Charlotte, N. C.; Fred Folger, '23, Mount Airy, N. C.; and Kenneth Brim, '20, Greensboro, N. C.

Approximately 500 alumni filled two West Campus dining halls for the dinner meeting. Classes holding reunions had the largest representations, but practically every class for the past 60 years sent delegates.

Representatives of the senior classes and their parents were guests of the Association for the occasion. The class of 1951 was presented to President Houck for acceptance into the alumni association by Charles A. Dukes, director of Alumni Affairs.

Presiding over the meeting was outgoing president, Mr. Houck. President Hollis Edens welcomed the alumni, and he added words of high praise for the success of the Development Campaign that was due to the enthusiasm and vigorous activity of alumni. He made an advance announcement that the fund total had reached $7,500,000.

The Program

The triple quartet from the Duke Men's Glee Club, led by J. Foster Barnes, director of music, sang three numbers for the entertainment of the alumni. This completes the 24th season of music leadership on the Duke campus by Mr. and Mrs. Barnes.

Coma Cole Willard (Mrs. Walter B.), '22, of Raleigh, president of the Alumnae Association, brought greetings to the assemblage from the alumnae, and welcomed the incoming senior class.

Edward L. Cannon, '26, also of Raleigh, president of the class of 1926, which this year celebrated its 25th anniversary, was recognized. He spoke to the alumni about the Silver Anniversary class and enumerated some interesting statistics about the various professions and activities of its members.

Several alumni were especially recognized at the dinner. Nellie Edwards Crauford (Mrs. W. I.), Durham; Frank Armfield, Oxford; and the Reverend M. T. Plyler, Durham; all members of the class of '92, shared the honor of representing the oldest class with members attending. Thomas Smart, '41, LL.B. '47, and Rae Elizabeth Rogers Smart (Mrs. T.), '41, from Denver, Colo., were the alumni coming from the longest distance.

WILLIAM M. WERBER, '30

Winners of awards in the Third Annual Alumni Golf Tournament were also announced.

In addition to the speakers, the Reverend and Mrs. Paul Erhman Scherer were guests seated at the head table. Dr. Scherer, professor of homiletics at Union Theological Seminary in New York, delivered the Baccalaureate Sermon in the Duke University Chapel the following morning. Other guests at the head table were Mrs. A. Hollis Edens; Mrs. C. B. Houck; Mrs. Charles A. Dukes; Annabelle Lambeth Joes (Mrs. Edwin L.), '12; Mr. Walter B. Willard; Mrs. W. H. Wannamaker; and Dr. Wannamaker, A.M. '01.

The new slate of officers selected by the nominating committee was proposed by Edwin L. Jones, '12, University trustee. Nominations were seconded, and the committee's candidates were elected unanimously.

Following the dinner and the combined entertainment program and business meeting, alumni adjourned to Page Auditorium to see the student musical production, Belles and Ballots. Some 1,000 alumni and townspeople attended the performance, which was the first Hoof 'n' Horn show to be presented at Commencement. The show met with the enthusiastic approval of an audience that has requested more entertainment by student groups at future alumni sessions.

Professor Hargitt Retires

Dr. George T. Hargitt, 70, professor of zoology at Duke for the past 21 years and director of graduate studies in his department from 1930 to 1949, retired from active teaching at the end of the past academic year.

About 60 colleagues and former students honored Dr. Hargitt at a dinner in the spring. Leather-bound books of letters from former students and reprints of scientific writings done by students under his instruction were presented to Dr. Hargitt by Dr. Henry S. Roberts, Jr., assistant professor of zoology. The wives of staff members gave him a silver bowl. Dr. C. G. Bookhout, assistant professor of zoology, was toastmaster, and a warm tribute was paid by Dr. I. E. Gray, department chairman.

A native of Fairfield, Ind., Dr. Hargitt received the A.B. degree from Syracuse University in 1902, the A.M. degree from the University of Nebraska in 1903, and the Ph.D. degree from Harvard in 1909. Syracuse University awarded him the Sc.D. degree in 1939. He came to Duke in 1930 from the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia, Pa.

Golf Tournament Attracts Record Number of Entries

A record field of 61 entries, representing 20 classes from 1911 to the present graduating class, distinguished the third annual Duke golf tournament played over the Commencement week end at the Hope Valley links.

John Enander, '51, of Plainfield, N. J., took top honors with a low gross score of 73 for the 18-hole course, and also turned in the low net score for his class group. E. R. (Skip) Cobb, '31, of Durham, made the tournament's lowest net score of 65. Wallace E. Seeman, '41, Durham, led the 10th-year reunion class with a net score of 67. Lillie Clements Sloan (Mrs. Perry, Jr.), '40, shot a 72 to take low net score for alumnae.

The tourney, which has attracted more participants with each succeeding year, is sponsored annually by the tenth year reunion class. It is open to alumni and alumnae, wives and husbands, and members of the faculty, staff and board of trustees. This year's sponsoring class contributed 11 men to the field of entries. Classes represented, in addition to those holding reunions this year, were '19, '21, '22, '23, '29, '31, '34, '39, '40, '45, '47, '50, and '51.

This year's tournament, played on a dry course under a blazing sun, saw the two-year champion Bill Cozart, of Durham, dethroned by John Enander. Mrs. Perry Sloan, Jr., winner in the women's group, retained the distinction she won last year. Dr. W. L. Thomas of Duke Hospital played a gross 75-net 66 to lead the faculty, staff and trustees group, succeeding A. H. Sands, Jr., of New York, last year's winner.

Trophies were awarded to the winners at the annual alumni dinner on Saturday night. The annual trophy cup went to the class of '41 for having the largest number of entries. Other prizes were china dinner plates decorated with University scenes, drinking glasses with the University insignia, and golf balls.

General arrangements for the tournament were in the hands of Floyd Bennett, '12. Wesley McAfee, '41, and Bob Pike, '41, both of Durham, served as co-chairmen of the event. Dan Hill, Jr., '39, assistant athletic director, whose class sponsored the first tourney three years ago, functioned as manager and starter.

Association Meetings

New York City

Fred "Doc" Walker, '47, secretary of the Duke Alumni Association of New York, has announced that his group scheduled an open house to welcome to New York the Graduating Class of 1951. It took place in The Cafe of the Ambassador Hotel on Wednesday, June 13, from 5:30 to 9:00 P.M.

The Duke Lounge in the Williams Club Library, 24 E. 39th St., is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 5:00 to 7:00 P.M.

Any alumni who are interested in attending the meetings and social affairs of the New York Association, are urged to write F. L. (Doc) Walker, secretary of the Duke Alumni of New York, c/o John Swift Company, Inc., 455 West 30th Street, New York 1, N. Y., or call LACK-awanna 4-1144. The Association will be delighted to have more alumni join their group and participate in their good times.

Jacksonville, Fla.

The Duke Alumni Club of Jacksonville met at Timuquana Country Club on Friday, May 25. Good food, swimming and dancing highlighted the meeting. A showing of the film "A Year at Duke" was also a feature of the evening.

The dinner meeting was the second gathering of Jacksonville alumni in the past few months. On Monday, March 27, the club held a reception and dance, honoring the Duke Glee Club and its choral director, J. Foster Barnes. The affair was held following the Glee Club concert in Robert E. Lee High School.

The Jacksonville group plans another meeting and an election of officers in November.

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Duke Alumni Association of Philadelphia and vicinity continued its high peak of activity with a spring party on May 11.

Highlights of the entertainment were a clever magician and a talented group of teen-age dancers who performed Scottish and American folk dances. Plans were formulated for a fall theater party and summer executive committee meetings.

In addition to alumni a number of prominent guests attended, including: Dr. Edward Snow, governor of the Pennsylvania District of the Lions International; Ira Thomas, senior scout for the Philadelphia Athletics baseball team; Al

Wistert, captain of the Philadelphia Eagles and former All-American from the University of Michigan; Joseph Alessandions, Assistant Public Defender of Philadelphia; Annette Coar Gessler, Philadelphia Amateur Women's Golf Champion; Ted Goesuch of the Police Athletic League; and Hal Moore, a local "disc jockey."

Dallas, Texas

Dallas alumni have recently formed a permanent Duke alumni organization, to be known as the Duke University Club. The meeting, attended by 20 alumni, was held on April 13, at Duntons' Cafeteria in Lakewood, a residential section of Dallas.

William C. Wettstein, '47, a native of Scarsdale, N. Y., and now sales manager for Burlington Mills in Dallas, addressed the group about the needs of the University and the importance of the Development Campaign.

Before the meeting closed, Mr. Wettstein was elected president and Jayne Ellen Becker Dale (Mrs. John L.), '47, was elected secretary of the club.

Mecklenburg County

Coach Bill Murray, mentor of Duke's new Split "T," was the principal speaker at a dinner meeting held by the Mecklenburg County alumni on Tuesday, May 22.

Other activities of Mecklenburg County alumni include monthly luncheon meetings. At the first meeting on Thursday, April 26, approximately 20 alumni gathered informally at Thacker's Restaurant in Charlotte. Plans for future meetings were made and another gathering was scheduled for the first Thursday in May. Subsequent meetings will be held on the first Thursday of each following month if the plan meets with general approval.

Benjamin S. Horack, '39, LL.B. '41, 1950 president of the association, stated that it is the present intention that these meetings be primarily for fellowship, offering an opportunity to all the alumni, especially up-town business men, to meet and eat together once a month.

St. Petersburg, Fla.

A spaghetti dinner at Joe & Lee's Spaghetti Palace, St. Petersburg, Fla., featured the first meeting of the year of the Pinellas County Chapter of the Duke Alumni Association.

A short business session followed the dinner and a generous Chapter donation was made to the Development Campaign.

Newly elected officers were: Robert Allen, Jr., '47, president; Betsy Rankin Sinden (Mrs. Richard), '45, vice-president; and Nancy Spangler Moore (Mrs. Thomas J.), '44, secretary-treasurer. Frequent meetings and other activities were planned for the near future.

Alumni who attended the meeting included: Dorothy Lauhdin Beckman (Mrs. A. Woods), '41; Dwight McCormick, '48; Thomas J. Moore, M. D. '45; Roderick Webb, M.D. '39; Charles Donegan, M.D. '44; Richard Siuden, M.D. '43; James I. Edwards, '38; Martha Rudy Wallace (Mrs. John Powell), '48; Robert Thompson, M.D. '47; John H. Hurlburt, '39; Charles Landreth, '39; Porter Garland, '38; Richard Sample, '30; Dorothy Eaton Sample (Mrs. Richard), '33; John Sharpless, '34; Margaret Edwards Sharpless (Mrs. John), '34; Ruth Schiller White (Mrs. Robert), '35; and Lucia K. Berry, M.A. '47.

Cincinnati, Ohio

The first meeting of the Cincinnati Alumni Association was held on Tuesday, May 8. Approximately 40 persons attended, including spouses and friends of the alumni. Many others, while unable to attend, expressed interest and enthusiasm in the plans of the new organization.

At a business session A. R. Thomas, '43, was elected president. Mary Bankhardt Knaehel (Mrs. Irvin G., Jr.), '44, was elected vice-president, and Kathleen Watkins Dale (Mrs. Francis L.), '43, secretary-treasurer. Other alumni who attended the business meeting were: Miriam Silva McCarthy (Mrs. Jack), '42; Eleanor Breth Brust (Mrs. Albert A.), '42; Albert A. Brust, '41; Edna Tefft, '50; Elizabeth S. Bramham (Mrs. Winfrey P.), '28; Alice Booe Bimel (Mrs. Carl M.), '43; Charlotte Newlan Deupree (Mrs. William J., Jr.), '40; William J. Deupree, Jr., '38; Emmet Howe, '42; and Morrow Wright, '44.

Junaluska Duke Day

August 11 will be Duke Day at Lake Junaluska.

Speaker for the 1951 occasion for Duke's alumni and friends in western North Carolina will be Dean James Cannon, '14, of the Divinity School. His address will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Auditorium.

The program has not yet been completed, but as soon as all arrangements have been made, Duke's former students in the area will receive notices by mail.

Dean and Mrs. McClain Entertain Law Alumni

More than 100 people attended the first annual meeting of the Duke University Law School Alumni Association held on the campus June 1 during reunion and Commencement week end.

After a joint luncheon with the classes of 1911 and 1912, the members of the class of 1910 met with the following present:

Rev. J. J. Boone, Enfield, N. C.; Julian C. Bundy, 2319 Pembroke Ave., Charlotte, N. C.; Phillip J. Johnson, 430 Maple Ave., Mocksville, N. C.; A. M. Proctor, Durham, N. C.; Sen. Willis Smith, Washington, D. C.; W. Sinclair Stewart, 1500 Dilworth Road, Charlotte, N. C.; Romulus A. Whitaker, 1207 N. Queens St., Kinston, N. C.; Mrs. B. J. Brogden, Durham, N. C.; Mrs. W. C. Chadwick, Box 567, New Bern, N. C.; Mrs. L. B. Jenkins, Box 667, Kinston, N. C.; Miss Matilda O. Michaels, Durham, N. C.

At the last reunion a committee had been appointed to study the possibilities of a class memorial gift to the University. That committee was composed of A. M. Proctor, J. C. Bundy and Miss Matilda Michaels. A. M. Proctor reported for the committee that some investigation had been made but no action taken. By unanimous vote the committee was continued and instructed to study the matter further and to report to the members of the class by correspondence whatever action they wished to recommend.

The class agent, A. M. Proctor reported on the work of the Development Program and urged all the members to renew their efforts to help make the class come out with a creditable contribution to the program. It was suggested in the discussion that the class agent get out a news letter about the progress of the Program to the various members of the class not present.

Phillip J. Johnson was elected historian of the class and was instructed to gather biographical data of the class members and compile this and send it to all the class members.

Upon recommendation of the nominating committee the following were elected as class officers:

President, Phillip J. Johnson; vice-president, Julian C. Bundy; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Maude Hurley Chadwick; representative to the National Council, A. M. Proctor; representative to the Alumnae Council, Mrs. Mary Tapp Jenkins.

This concluded the business and the class adjourned.

The classes of 1910, 1911, and 1912 were back at Duke for a joint reunion this Commencement of 1951. Of all reunions, this was the very best. We sorely missed each class member who failed to answer roll call, but those of us who did not only had a wonderful time but brought home many happy memories to add to the numerous ones we already have of our college contemporaries and our beloved Alma Mater.

Following the reunion luncheon, which had many high spots, the highest being that we had with us five of our most beloved teachers of former days, the class of 1911 held its class meeting. Sam Angier presided in the absence of Paul Kiker. Sam did a good job, and very quickly the following officers were elected: P. Frank (Hap) Hanes, Winston-Salem, N. C., president; Sam J. Angier, Durham, vice-president; Emma Babbitt Whitesides (Mrs. Blount), Clinton, N. C., secretary-treasurer; Mary Freeman Herring (Mrs. W. H.), Raleigh, N. C., representative to the Alumnae Council; J. B. Courtney, Winston-Salem, N. C., representative to National Council. In addition to the above named officers, other members present were Christine McIntosh Page; Raymond Bell; B. F. Hurley; James H. Warburton; Grace Cocherham; Baxter Proctor, and Lou Ola Tuttle Moser.

At four o'clock the three reunion classes went to the home of Sol Brower for a coffee hour. Mrs. Brower and Sol were so charmingly hospitable that the hour ran into two or more, and we still lingered, enjoying the delicious coffee, the good things to eat, and each other's company.

At one o'clock on Sunday, June 3, a most enjoyable joint reunion dinner for the classes of '10, '11, and '12 was held in a West Campus Union dining hall. P. Frank (Hap) Hanes, '11, was master of ceremonies, and presided in a delightfully informal manner. He recognized our special guests for the reunion, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Wannamaker, Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Laprade, Professor and Mrs. R. N. Wilson, Professor and Mrs. A. M. Webb, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Markham. In turn, in a humorous and happy fashion, our former professors brought greetings to their former students.

President Hollis Edens paid a short visit to the reunion classes, and was introduced. In his inimitable way he brought gracious greetings from the University. Charles A. Dukes, director of Alumni Affairs, and C. B. Houck, president of the General Alumni Association also attended.

Our toastmaster then called upon the presidents of the three classes for greetings or messages. Those responding were Mrs. Mary Tapp Jenkins, '10; Sam J. Angier, vice-president of '11; and Henry A. McKinnon, '12.

"Hap" then presented the most distinguished member of the three classes, United States Junior Senator Willis Smith, '10, who had been chosen as dinner speaker for the occasion. In a pleasing manner he recalled to mind incidents of our college days, dwelling particularly on the inspiration gained in Dr. Mims' English courses, and sent us all in happy reminiscence down memory lane.

Following the speech, A. S. (Sol) Brower, '12, extended from himself and his charming wife a cordial invitation to an open house at their home in Forest Hills.

It was indeed a pleasure to have present at the reunion so many wives and husbands of class members. Their presence added much to the enjoyableness of the occasion.

To the Alumni Office, Miss Anne Garrard and her able staff, and to the various committees, the members of the classes of '10, '11 and '12 are deeply indebted for helping so wonderfully with all the arrangements for the joint reunion. We are grateful for the lovely flowers, the excellent food, and for the endless details so necessary to the success of the reunion, which proved to be the best attended and one of the most delightful the classes have ever held.

At the close of the joint meeting, the individual classes met separately for short business meetings. At the meeting of the class of '12, twenty-four members were present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Henry McKinnon. The minutes of the class reunion of 1946 were read and approved.

Floyd S. Bennett, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate of officers: president, Polly Heitman Ivey (Mrs. L. L.), Raleigh, N. C.; vice-president, A. S. (Sol) Brower, Duke University, Durham; to continue as permanent secretary, Mary Gorham Cobb (Mrs. W. H.), 321 Green Street, Fayetteville N. C.; National Council Representative, J. Allen Lee, Monroe, N. C.; Alumnae Council Representative, Emma McCullen Covington (Mrs. J. N.), Rockingham, N. C. The slate was unanimously adopted.

Reports on absent members were called for and letters of regret from some were read. The secretary was asked to read the names of the deceased members of the class. It was with sorrow that we learned there were 54 names on the list.

The "girls" of the class expressed their appreciation to Leon Jones for the red and white roses presented them on entering the dining hall. A small expense account attendant to the reunion was taken care of by members of the class. A vote of thanks was tendered "Sol" and Mrs. Brower for the lovely courtesy extended the three reunion classes, and the meeting adjourned to the Browsers for a happy ending to the eighth reunion of the class of 1912.

MARY GORHAM COBB (Mrs. W. H.), secretary.

A Friday night open house at Hope Valley Country Club for members of the classes of '35, '36, and '37 got the reunion off to a good start. John Moorhead, '35, and James L. Newsom, '35, LL.B. '37, both of Durham, were in charge. Quite a number were present and enjoyed this informal occasion.

Reuhen Smith's Lake on Wake Forest Road was the scene of a joint picnic at one o'clock on Saturday, attended by members of all three classes, their husbands, wives, and children. A good time was had

From the Fiftieth Year Class President

The following is a message from Stephen W. Anderson, Wilson, N. C., president of the Class of 1901, written for the Golden Anniversary of his class:

I feel sure I speak for those of the Class of 1901 fortunate enough to be present in person, when I say we are thankful after 50 years to be able to attend the Half Century celebration. It is with sadness we note the small attendance. Some have passed on, whose passing we sincerely regret; and I was deeply touched by letters from some whose health would not permit their being here. They are with us in spirit, and we very much regret their absence. It is our hope that their afflictions are temporary, and they will be spared for many years to come.

We appreciate the privilege of being here, and feel honored in being inducted into the Half Century Club of Duke University.

Our Class was at Trinity College when Mr. Washington Duke gave, as I recall it, the first $1,000,000.00. There was quite a celebration. This was followed by gifts from other members of the Duke family, all causes for celebrations, then culminating in the great philanthropy of Mr. Buchanan Duke which has made us feel like celebrating ever since.

The high ideals which made Trinity College a factor in North Carolina's educational progress made a firm foundation for Duke University to build on. We are proud of our connection with that institution. We have been intensely interested and proud of the tremendous accomplishment in building, equipping, and staffing this great University which has become respected on a National scale, and we are even prouder of the fact that our present administration is not "resting on its oars," but is making plans for the future to keep abreast of the changing times. We wish more power to you.

We appreciate the consideration shown our Class today, and feel sure you can count on our continued loyalty throughout the lives of each of us.

"Tremendous Success" Say '26ers, As A Big Reunion Is Remembered

Members of the Silver Anniversary Class of 1926 thought their 25th reunion was a tremendous success. A class headquarters room in Dormitory O formed a center of activities for the whole week end, where hull sessions and hilarity continued until all hours.

By Saturday afternoon, most of the returning members had gathered in the headquarters. A band concert, for the benefit of all those attending reunions and Commencement, was played on the lawn just outside the dormitory. It furnished good background music, and got the class off to a good start.

Yellowed old copies of The Chronicle, resurrected from somebody's attic, a 1926 Commencement Program, programs from the senior dance which was the first given at Duke, and playbills for "Cyrano" and other plays, were displayed in the headquarters. They started many '26ers reminiscing and furnished a basis for much fun and laughter.

Up-to-date information on class members was furnished by the silver anniversary booklet, the "Bull-Etin." Featured on the cover was the class emblem, a bull. Included in the booklet were addresses of class members, biographical data, and pertinent excerpts from "The Chronicle," 1922-26. Badges saying "Champion Bull Shooter" and "Champion Bull Thrower" were also distributed to various members.

The class met in the headquarters room and went together to the General Alumni Dinner on Saturday evening, where Ed Cannon, president, spoke briefly for the class.

Following the dinner, '26ers adjourned to the Washington Duke Hotel where Stanton Pickens had arranged an informal party. Everyone visited from table to table, swapping stories, reminiscing, and bringing each other up-to-date after 25 years. There was music all through the party, and inevitably the group gathered around the piano to harmonize on such old favorites as "Linger Awhile,"

"Who," "Has Anybody Seen My Gal," "Get You a Kitchen Meebanic," and of course, "Trinity" and "Dear Old Duke." The singing stopped only when the pianist did.

On Sunday morning, members of the class wandered off to sit under the trees and listen to the Baccalaureate Sermon over the loudspeakers, or for more conversation.

The class was very pleased and flattered that, with all the demands a Commencement puts on them, so many of the faculty members who had taught them came to the tea in their honor Sunday afternoon in the Union Ballroom. Olive Faucette Jenkins (Mrs. J. E.) was in charge, and was ably assisted by Merle Davis Umstead (Mrs. W. B.) and Elizabeth Morris. Mrs. Martin Black, Mrs. Cary Maxwell and Mrs. Alton Knight served. Many of the children of '26ers were on proud display by their parents.

The class dinner, grand finale of the week end, with Alton Knight in charge, was held at the Washington Duke Hotel. The buffet style dinner was well attended by members of the class and their families. Ed Cannon was master of ceremonies, and called on each member of the class for a word. Informality was the keynote of the gathering.

At a short business meeting, C. W. (Soup) Porter, Lenoir, N. C., was elected representative to the National Council, and Elizabeth Roberts Cannon, Raleigh, N. C., representative to the Alumnae Council. Other class officers are Ed Cannon, Raleigh, president; Garab B. (Jack) Caldwell, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., vice-president; Dr. Frances Holmes McCausland (Mrs. A. M.), Los Angeles, Calif., secretary; and Earl P. McFee, Gloucester, Mass., treasurer.

Forty-niners held their first class reunion on Sunday, June 2, at one o'clock.
Gate seven was the scene of a picnic which was attended by class members who found it possible to get away from their jobs and other confining duties for reunion week end. Several of those present were able to attend other activities planned for all returning alumni.

The business discussed concerned the election of class officers to officiate until the next reunion. Those present voted to consider themselves only a nominating committee in the absence of a larger representation. A slate of candidates was approved by the group, and it will be mailed to a class chairman in each major city.
The chairman will contact members of the class in his city and record the ballots for each candidate, then forward the slate to the alumni office. For those members not residing in the large cities, a ballot will be mailed to them so that their votes may be included in the final tally. It is expected that this business will be completed within the next month so that the new class officers can be announced at the next printing of the REGISTER.

It is hoped that this move on the part of those present will be confirmed by the members of the class, and that response to the balloting will be representative of the desires of the class.

'41's Big Tenth Is Joyfully Hailed

No kidding, OUR Tenth Reunion was one of the few that really lived up to expectations. According to Alumni Office figures we had the biggest crowd, and according to those present, we had the best program and more spirit than any Tenth Reunion Class in a long time
(the latter fact confirmed by the Alumni Office).

The Reunion Committee's plan of "something going on every minute" paid off. Actually only one person from '41 attended the Saturday Campus Tour but all other functions were well attended.
So for those of you who couldn't make it, here are the highlights:

FRIDAY, JUNE 1ST

As the early arrivals came in they were assigned to House N quarters . . . but "no comment" on the later nocturnal ramblings of some of our perennial freshmen classmates! Among the earliest arrivals were Tom and Rae Rogers Smart all the way from Denver, Colo. The 1941 sponsored Golf Tournament got underway with 11 members of the class entered and ended Saturday with Wallace See-man winning low gross score for the class. The most widely attended Friday function was the Open House at "Casa Pike," Med Student Bob Pike's apartment. What exactly went on is a little vague to most of us, but the outstanding event was the midnight snack. Actually, there was nothing of historic value about the cold cuts and tuna fish salad, but did you ever see a tortoise sandwich? This was one delicacy Jill Moyer and Millie Koon (Pike's gal) had just as soon been kept by Duncan Hines, as evidenced by the screams.

About 3 A.M. some of the hardier of the species headed for Raleigh (with wives—fooled some of you wise guys, didn't I) to call on J. D. Long. So the spirit still lives!

SATURDAY, JUNE 2ND

As mentioned before, Jean Linton Sheppard was the sole member of the morning tour group. She had to admit that she learned more about Duke than than she did during her 4-year sojourn.

The afternoon picnic was a big success with the uneaten turtles stealing the show. Ed Bunce christened them the Class Mascots, mainly because of their perseverance and willingness to overcome their main obstacle (their confining box) even if it meant climbing on another turtle's back. The evening saw the finest event of the week end. Social Committe-men Ed Fike and John Dozier obtained at the last minute a lovely private residence somewhere off the Greensboro highway. There was a comfortable cool terrace—a real treat during a searing week end—fine service and excellent food.
After a brief business meeting held between courses, the Alumni Office showed a film of the outstanding football plays during 1939-41, and Lura Abernathy
Rader provided a film of our Senior May Day and Graduation. Tom Latimer, putting his radio personality to work, got some High Point Duke grads together to record a "bull session" of undergraduate days that proved very interesting and enlightening. At midnight another repast that gave everyone second wind, so far, far into the night went another party.

Late Saturday night and early Sunday saw most of us heading for home. But you can wager that most of those who came will be back in 1957 along with many more who hear about the week end just past.

ORCHIDS TO—

All of us who were here certainly owe a "thank you" to the social committeemen—Ed Fike and John Dozier; to the attendance chairman Andy Ducker and his committee; golf chairman and host
Bob Pike; Anne Garrard of the Alumni Office for much hard work behind the scenes; and Tom Latimer, entertainment committee chairman.

From your retiring President and Reunion Chairman—it was a real pleasure and genuine source of satisfaction. Besides, I was justly rewarded by the young lady at the Registration Desk who, without my asking, gave me a ribbon saying: "10 REUNION."

BOB LONG.

Spring—A Victory Season

Coach and Two Players Win Distinctions

Duke University's spring sports teams had their best records in years this season, two gaining Southern Conference championships, another gaining runner-up honors for regular season play, a fourth getting third place honors in the league meet and the fifth claiming national honors in its field. Basketball and baseball star Dick Groat was also chosen the Southern Conference's Athlete of the Year.

The Blue Devil baseball and golf teams won the conference championships in a blaze of glory, while the varsity tennis team was runner-up in conference dual meets. The track team finished third in the annual conference meet despite the loss of its top star, and the lacrosse team finished the campaign with a 6-2 record, dropping only one-point decisions to college foes.

Golf

The conference championship gained by the Duke golf team was the 13th claimed by Duke in 16 years. Louis McLennan, co-captain of the Duke team, won the individual championship over Wes Brown of Washington and Lee, with Mike Souchak and Henry Clark, also of Duke, tying for third place in the tourney.

McLennan shot a 36-hole total of 147 to win the individual title, while the four-man Duke team had a 36-hole score of 590, with North Carolina in second place with a score of 623.

The Duke golfers finished the regular season with a 14-1 record, defeating Georgia Tech, Georgia, Clemson, Davidson (twice), Williams, N. C. State, Michigan, William and Mary, Richmond, Maryland, George Washington, Wake Forest and North Carolina. The only loss came at the hands of North Carolina in a return match.

Baseball

The Duke baseball team, under Coach Jack Coombs for the 23rd year, copped the Southern Conference championship with an 11-0 win over Maryland and a 5-0 win over Clemson in the league tourney played at Greensboro. Sophomore righthander Joe Lewis hurled the win over Maryland and a junior righthander, Bob "Dizzy" Davis, who was voted the tourney's outstanding player, pitched the shutout win over Clemson in the finals.

Duke's diamonders finished the regular season in second place in the Southern Conference's Southern division. The team had a regular season record of 16-7 and tied for the championship in the Big Four League. Coach Jack Coombs and first baseman Bill Werber were selected the outstanding coach and most valuable player, respectively, in the Big Four League, while third baseman Tom Powers won the loop hat championship with a sizzling .417 average and Joe Lewis won the pitching title with a 4-2 record. Selected to the All-Big Four League team were infielders Bill Werber, Bill Bergeron and Dick Groat, utility infielder Tom Powers, outfielder Dick Johnson and pitcher Lewis.

Second baseman Bill Bergeron, the Duke acting captain, has since signed a professional contract with the Philadelphia Athletics and is now with Fayetteville in the Carolina League. Several other players, with college eligibility remaining, are being scouted closely by the major league agents.

Lacrosse

Duke's lacrosse team, coached by W. S. "Jack" Persons, swept its first six wins of the spring season, then dropped an 11-10 decision to Virginia and a 10-7 game to the Mount Washington Athletic Club of Baltimore in its last outings. Most cherished win of the season was a 9-7 one collected over four times national champion Johns Hopkins. The Duke team defeated Lehigh, Williams, Navy, Washington and Lee, Washington College and Hopkins.

Duke lacrosse players named to play for the South team in the annual North-South game at Troy, N. Y., were Rod Boyce, Charles Gilfillan, Don Clausen and Fred Eisenbrandt. All but Eisenbrandt accepted since he had another engagement—marriage—on the day of the game.

Tennis

The Duke tennis team had one of its best regular seasons in recent years, losing only to Rollins and North Carolina and heating 13 teams, but failed to advance any players further than the quarter-finals of the Southern Conference tournament played at Davidson College. Outstanding players were Captain John Ross and Kes Deimling, Jack Warmath, John Tapley, Norm Schellenger, Ronnie Simpson, Frank Carloss and Hal Lipton. Tapley was undefeated during the regular season.

The Duke varsity tennis team defeated Michigan State, the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Station, Florida Southern, Florida, Williams, N. C. State, Dartmouth, Michigan, Davidson, Presbyterian, William

Summer Session Second Term Events

A Science Teachers Laboratory Conference, an Institute of North Carolina English Teachers, and an Institute for Teachers of Mathematics will highlight the second session of the Duke Summer Session which opens on July 21 and continues to August 31. A number of distinguished visiting professors will cooperate with the permanent Duke faculty in presenting this second half of the summer program.

The Science Teachers Laboratory Conference is a pioneering project in the field of science instruction in secondary and elementary schools. The first in an annual series, it will be held from July 23 to July 27. The basic purpose of the Conference, which will cover both the biological and the physical sciences, is to acquaint the science teacher with practical and useful experiments that he may perform in his own classroom, and to give him actual training in the techniques involved in the setting up and execution of these experiments.

The Institute for Teachers of Mathematics will hold its eleventh annual session from August 7 to August 17. With "Mathematics at Work" as its theme, it will comprehend the fields of junior and senior high school through sophomore work in college. Lecturers and teachers of recognized ability in industrial and scientific research and in classroom techniques will direct the program. Ten study groups with a variety of topics will be arranged under their leadership.

Principal meetings of the ninth annual Institute of North Carolina English Teachers will be held at Duke University August 2 to 4. The annual luncheon and afternoon meeting that follows will be held at Chapel Hill, N. C. The work of the Institute will be conducted as round-table conferences, special lectures, standing committee reports and demonstrations.

The regular course work of Summer Session will follow the same pattern during the second session as in the first. Both undergraduate and graduate studies and post-doctoral research are offered, in addition to special conferences, and the resources of the University will be available to the students and conferees.

An extensive program of social and recreational activities have been planned for summer students. Dances and concerts, and all forms of summer sports are quite popular and well attended.

Dean Cannon Is Formally Installed

At mid-morning on Friday, May 18, an assemblage of administrators, faculty, students and alumni gathered in York Chapel to install the new Dean of the Divinity School, James Cannon III, '14. The ceremony was inelaborate but formal, providing a framework within which an appropriate invocation of divine guidance and blessing might be made in keeping with the weight and seriousness of the responsibilities which the executive officer of the School undertakes.

Dean Cannon is the seventh to serve in this capacity since the Divinity School opened in 1926; he was a member of the original faculty of five, and the four men who had shared that distinction with him, Dr. Edmund D. Soper, Dr. Elbert Russell, Bishop Paul N. Garber and Dr. Harvie Branscomb, had likewise held the deanship. His two other predecessors were the late Dr. Paul E. Root and Dr. Harold A. Bosley, who resigned last September.

President Hollis Edens formally installed Dr. Cannon by delivering the official commission. There followed the prayer of installation, intoned by Bishop Garber.

After special greetings to Dean Cannon from the Church, represented by Bishop Garber; from the alumni, represented by Dr. Edgar H. Nease, '31, district superintendent of the Charlotte District, Methodist Church; from Dr. H. E. Spence for the Divinity School faculty and from George G. Henley, of King George, Va., speaking for the students, the new dean responded briefly.

President Edens, in delivering the commission, acknowledged that Duke University has been fortunate in securing as its leaders men and women "who have loved the University long and served it well. You, Dr. Cannon, have earned your place on such a list. . . . Your appointment will prove to be a wise one."

Bishop Garber, in his greetings, declared that the Church is vitally interested in Duke Divinity School.

"Dean Cannon enters his office with the full support of the Church," he said. He added that Trinity College and Duke have long championed academic freedom, high academic standards and have refused "to champion the lesser loyalties of life."

Dr. Cannon, who has been Ivey Professor of History of Religion and Missions since 1926, is the son of the late Bishop James Cannon. He became acting dean last fall after the resignation of Dr. Bosley.

1951 Convocation

The failure to separate church and state in Continental Europe has resulted in the virtual emasculation of the Christian faith, in nations both before and behind the iron curtain, Bishop Paul N. Garber told a congregation of Southern ministers in a lecture during the second annual Convocation and Pastors' School on the West Campus from June 5th to 8th.

Victory Season

and Mary, Navy and Virginia. The win over Virginia snapped a 20-game win streak for the Cavaliers.

Track

The Duke track team started with a bang, but slowed down at season's end, mainly because of the loss of its star point-getter, tiny Henry Poss of Chattanooga, Tenn., who pulled a leg muscle. The Duke eindersmen finished third in the annual Southern Conference meet behind Maryland and North Carolina, respectively.

Grabbing Conference individual championships were 220-yard ace Herbert "Piney" Field, hurdler Tommy Reeves and pole vaulter John Conner. It was the second Conference championship of the season for Conner, also a champ in the diving event during the swimming season. Field captured the 220-yard dash in a time of 21.9 seconds, while Reeves ran the 220-yard low hurdles in 24 seconds flat and Conner pole-vaulted 12 feet, his lowest height of the season.

The Duke tracksters finished the regular season with a 3-2-1 record.

The Methodist bishop of the Richmond and Geneva areas gave example after example showing that, in Sweden as well as in Russia, in Yugoslavia and Switzerland, when church membership is on a level with citizenship, religion loses its moral vigor and its compelling force in men's lives.

Bishop Garber's ringing defense of a free church came near the close of a four-day interdenominational program, attended by several hundred ministers, which included workshop sessions, re-resher courses and public addresses by well-known religious leaders.

Highlighting the Convocation was the second series of James A. Gray Lectures delivered by Dr. Paul E. Scherer of Union Theological Seminary, New York City. The public attended the series, which was on the general subject of "The Ways of God—A Study in the Book of Job."

Bishop Garber's talk was based on his experiences during the past six years in Europe, where he made a grass roots study of the common religious life. The title of his address was "Religion in Europe As I Have Seen It." Bishop Costen J. Harrell, of the Methodist Church, Charlotte area, spoke at the morning devotional services.

Distinguished religious leaders and members of the Duke Divinity School faculty served as instructors for the workshops and refresher courses.

A workshop on "The Minister and Public Relations" was conducted by James Sells, executive secretary of radio and visual aids, Southeastern Methodist Jurisdiction. Guest speakers for the workshop were E. B. Garrett of the Soil Conservation Service, Raleigh; Charles A. Dukes, Director of Alumni Affairs at Duke; and Earl W. Porter of the Duke Bureau of Public Information.

Dr. John J. Rudin II, of the Duke Divinity School faculty, led a "Worship Workshop" with emphasis on effective leadership by the preacher in public worship services. Recordings were used to demonstrate effective religious services, and visiting ministers discussed their own specific problems.

A workshop on "Planning a Church Program" was under the direction of Dr. A. J. Walton, of the Duke faculty. The sessions dealt with evangelical, educational and recreational church activities and related topics.

In a "Vacation Church School" workshop the program included demonstrations of children's religious projects and discussion of church school activities. Mrs. Edith W. Reed, director of children's work for the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference, was in charge of the workshop.

Convocation lecture courses were "The New Testament Faith and the Mind of the Church Today," taught by Dr. Robert E. Cushman of the Duke Divinity School; "Christianity and World Missions," taught by Dr. Daniel J. Fleming of Union Theological Seminary; and "The Minister's Tools and Techniques," instructed by Dr. Nolan B. Harmon, Methodist book editor.

Five months ago I was transferred to San Francisco and now share a very Bohemian sort of shack on Telegraph Hill with two other stewardesses. There we have a perfect view of Berkeley, the Bay Bridge, Treasure Island and even Alcatraz.

In April I started a most wonderful 35-day vacation. After three days in Miami, an ex-roommate of mine from Seattle, who is now flying the South American route for P. A. A., and I left on a round-the-world trip. We went first to New York via San Juan, P. R. and thence to Frankfurt, Amsterdam, London, Paris, Zermatt (to ski), Milan, Rome, Istanbul, Beirut, Cairo, New Delhi, Agra, and Bangkok. Returning thence but not stopping in Hong Kong, Tokyo, Wake and Honolulu—since those spots, as well as Gnam, Manila and Singapore, are now on my regular flights. At present I'm on my way to the South Pacific. It is an 18-day trip. Although we transit Canton Island we stop at Fiji, Sydney and Auckland. I'm most pleased for I have not seen these places before.

As well as flying the regular passenger flights we have been flying Army charter trips as far as Tokyo—taking Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force replacements over and bringing back the wounded, the widows, the boys on emergency leaves, and the high brass for conference in Washington. All of which convinces us that this war is a very real thing even though it has never been declared.

Among the Duke people I've seen lately are Pattie McGowan Black (Mrs. Stanley P.), '46, her husband Pat, and cute young son David, with whom I spent yesterday here in Honolulu.

A week ago while I was visiting my sister Ebie, her three-year-old Ginny, three-month-old Jimmy, and her "back in the Marine Corps pilot" husband in Laguna Beach, Calif., I saw Babbie Mill Kesterman (Mrs. Adrian L.), '46, and her husband who has also been called back in the Marine Corps. Her two sons, Jeff and Tim (2½ months), are mighty cute.

In Miami I saw Johanna Weiland Hoehl (Mrs. John R.), '46, Pat Reed Heath, '42, and her husband Byard—home on vacation also—all looking swell.

In San Francisco I call or see Arleen Palmer, '48, quite often and hope to see Pat Way Anderson (Mrs. Donald A.), '48, soon. Did I miss anybody??? Oh, did run into a P. A. A. pilot out here from Miami—can't remember the name but you told him I was here.

Gad, how did I get so wound up—and I haven't even told you about my main point of interest—that guy who sold me the sail boat in Seattle—frankly I think he just wants the boat (or at least my quarter) back—but he's going to have to support me for the rest of my life to get it. We've been engaged since the end of March and have set our wedding date for August 18th. The wedding is going to be just outside San Francisco in San Mateo with a reception at my Aunt and Uncle's home in San Mateo—the folks are coming out and Ebie and Jack will be up.

Hunter, too, is back in the Marine Corps but, fortunately for us, stationed with the machine accounting group right here in San Francisco.

I could rave on for pages but instead will just tell you he's a Phi Delt from University of Washington and bring him by some day to see you so you can judge for yourself.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

Number 9...THE PELICAN

“How much do they think I can swallow?”

OUR easy-going, big-billed friend has learned to say “No” to these hurry-up, one-puff, one-sniff cigarette tests! “Why”, says he, “they don’t even give you time to finish the cigarette before you’re supposed to decide which is mildest!” Millions of smokers have come to the same conclusion—there’s just one real way to test the flavor and mildness of a cigarette.

It’s The Sensible Test . . . the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as a steady smoke—on a pack-after-pack, day-after-day basis. No snap judgments needed! After you’ve enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your “T-Zone” (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you’ll know why . . .

First off I would like to tell you how much I have enjoyed reading the Alumni News when I have been home on leave. It helps to form a contact between my college days and the new life I am leading serving our nation. I feel sure the REGISTER helps other members of the armed forces keep up this contact.

My main reason for writing is to inquire whether or not it is possible for me to purchase a class ring. I graduated in the Class of 1950 and at the time did not want a class ring. However, having been "out in the world" so so speak, I see that this emblem of recognition is invaluable and I would like if possible to acquire a class ring. Please send me any information you can regarding price, delivery, etc., if the ring can be obtained.

Rings are available, and further information about them may be secured by writing the Duke University Stores, Duke University, Durham, N. C.

Can't you take off awhile this summer and come up to nature's wonderland? You would love the wild flowers and snow-capped mountains. The sun is now rising a little after 3 a.m. Yesterday it rose at 3:15 a.m. and set at 8:32 p.m. Last night at 11:00 p.m. it was like a twilight there. It seems odd when only a short while ago it was dark for so many hours of the day. I've never appreciated the sun so much in all my life as after this dark winter. The trees are just beginning to show tiny buds and they likewise are a welcome sight. Yesterday I saw my first robin of the year. The temperature is rising to around 50° in day time and dropping back to around 30° at night. There is so much natural beauty here—but much that white man has brought is ugliness.

Our kindest regards to everyone. Wish we could be there for the '36 reunion—but 'tis quite impossible.

THIS MONTH'S COVER

One of the most spectacular traditions followed during the celebration of Saint John's Eve on June 24, the shortest night and longest day of the year, is the ritual of men jumping over a fire to prove their strength and prowess. For the past ten years, the Duke School of Spanish Studies has been recognizing this holiday, which has both Catholic and pagan origins, on Friday nearest June 24. Jumping over the fire are, left to right, George J. Kintz, Duke senior; Professor Jose Amor y Vaz Quez, visiting instructor from Brown University; and Elias Torre, Jr., Spanish student.

Football Tickets

The sale of season tickets has progressed beyond all expectations and it looks like alumni who haven't ordered season tickets and are planning to do so had better get their orders in immediately.

The latest ticket order to arrive came from Jack Priddy, '42, in Surry, England. He ordered two season tickets for the fall of 1951. Perhaps this is the best way of saying to the alumni close by that it would be a good thing to get in your orders immediately. This applies not only to the season tickets but to those for individual games as well.

Development Campaign

We have passed the $7,500,000 mark. We begin now on the last million needed to reach our immediate goal. We hope to complete this by December 31. If we do so, it is going to take the combined efforts of every former student and friend of the University.

We are going to have to continue the personal contact so that every one who is the least bit interested in Duke can know the entire story and be given an opportunity to participate in the program. We were unable to get in touch personally with all alumni by the close of our fiscal year, June 30. Alumni and friends who have not been told the story will be contacted during the coming months—between now and the end of the year.

Therefore, if you are helping with the Development Campaign, please continue the work you have begun, for each interested person must do everything he can to promote the program during the summer months. Perhaps summer is a bad time for such campaigns, but there is no good time, and the great need of the institution makes any time a good time.

Just Rambling

May we remind you that the Duke Blue Devils are going to be a "traveling team" this year. Get out your schedule and begin to make plans now to see them in action, not only at Duke but when they appear in your vicinity. A number of the local associations, one of which is Norfolk, Va., are planning to play hosts to all alumni attending the game to be played in their respective communities.

We are going to run a schedule of these dinners, open houses, etc., for your convenience. If you would like to attend one or more of them, as soon as the announcement appears in the REGISTER, please send your reservation with a check to the proper person.

A few days ago we received in the mail a request from one of the local groups for football tickets for the Pittsburgh game. This group is planning to charter a bus or two and see the Blue Devils in action when they play in Pittsburgh. Because the Blue Devils are playing in a number of distant points from the campus, it is going to make the games especially accessible for alumni.

Would you like a program for your garden club, civic club, or some other organization to which you belong? If so, we have a number of 16 mm. silent films that we believe would be found most interesting.

For example, we have a color film of the Sarah P. Duke Memorial Gardens, giving both the botanical and common names of most of the varieties of plants. This film, which runs for twenty minutes, was listed one time as a suggested program for the organization of National Garden Clubs.

We have a film entitled, "A Year at Duke," which gives the activities about the campus and shows some of the buildings. There are a number of other films as well. There is no charge for their use, except to defray the postage when returning them to the University.

If you would like to use one or more of these films or would like to see a list of those available, please write the Alumni Office.

During the past twelve months a number of alumni have made gifts to the Duke University Library. A few of them are:

The Holton family (Miss Grace Holton, Dr. Quinton Holton, Mrs. Holland Holton and sons) presented the Holton family's library, including Professor Holland Holton's personal correspondence. The books are principally education, textbooks and law books.

Mr. J. Braxton Craven—225 volumes from the theological collection of his father and grandfather.

Mrs. E. S. Bowling—122 volumes of literary and historical interest from the library of her late husband.

Mr. Watson Smoot—a collection of about 75 medical and theological volumes from the library of his father, Dr. J. Edward Smoot.

If you know of persons who have items you think should be included in the Duke University Library and whom you could interest in giving these items as a gift to the Library, we suggest you write to Dr. B. E. Powell, Librarian of the Duke University Libraries, Duke Station, Durham, N. C.

Perhaps you yourself may have books or a collection of some kind that you would like to give to the University. If so, may we suggest you get in touch with Dr. Powell.

Each day we find that our alumni and friends are taking advantage of every opportunity to serve the institution. If you would like to have additional channels through which to express your interest and don't know quite how to proceed, I hope you will write to the Alumni Office.

THE SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Summer at Duke—As Active as Ever

Entering Freshmen and Building Projects Are Out of Routine

Summer arrives. Students who have labored through the winter depart for homes or jobs. For a week or two following commencement a university campus has the appearance of a deserted village, tended only by a handful of caretakers and office workers.

This lull, however, doesn't last long. At least not at Duke. Students scatter. Faculty members scatter. But some of each return when the Summer Session begins; and the places of those who have departed for longer intervals are taken by new arrivals from other colleges and universities, from high schools, from foreign countries, and from a dozen other sources. These new arrivals come to learn, to teach, to do research, to engage in all of the pursuits that characterize the University during the fall, winter, and spring.

There is no off-season at Duke, and those who are inclined to envy what they consider the soft summer life of a professor would find a cherished dream shattered if they could observe the intense hot weather activities of the faculty.

A large number of Duke teachers have taken temporary quarters at other universities in the United States and abroad. There they are guest lecturers, researchers, or, in several instances, students themselves. Others are poking about in distant libraries, museums, and laboratories—pushing forward projects in very many diverse fields.

Special Sessions

Over and above the regular classroom-lecture-laboratory schedule of Summer Session students, there are the special schools and institutes which have become a substantial part of summer activities and through which Duke is giving outstanding service to teachers and other professional men and women.

Oldest, largest, and most famous of these special sessions are the School of Spanish Studies, underway the first semester, and the Institute for Teachers of Mathematics, to take place the second semester. The first of these popular institutions has a peculiar effect upon the campus. At any odd moment an unsuspecting stroller may happen upon a lively group of gaily clad gypsies yelping happily at each other in pure, or at least quite acceptable, Spanish. They may dance, sing, or begin to leap over the towering flames of a bonfire. Duke's gothic chambers are touched with Latin-American magic for a few brief weeks.

The Math Institute goes about its business a little less spectacularly, but highly effectively. There is little question that the Institute is doing great work in improving the methods and results of the teaching of mathematics. Dr. W. W. Rankin, director of the Institute, this month was invited to U.C.L.A. to direct a similar undertaking on the West Coast, which is just being launched. Meanwhile, four other math institutes patterned after the one originated at Duke are being organized across the United States.

Other special sessions, of greater or lesser age, have been or are being held for nurses, doctors, hospital technicians, ministers, scientists, and numerous other professional groups.

A brand new undertaking this year—one likely to become greater than any of the others—is the Science Teachers Laboratory. This laboratory will attempt to do for science teachers what the Math Institute has done for math teachers. An outstanding staff, a carefully planned and highly selective program, a large group of intensely interested teachers will combine to give the Laboratory a send-off that should establish it as an annual affair.

Freshmen Enter

Classroom work and special institutes are, however, the more or less normal elements of a Summer Session at Duke. This year there are one or two less familiar elements of summer at Duke.

The first of these is the number of entering freshmen. Last winter, when the draft began to harass those attending and planning to attend the nation's colleges and universities, Duke promptly announced that it would encourage high school graduates to enter in the summer in order to push forward their college work as much as possible before facing the prospect of prolonged armed service. Special arrangements were made to receive them and a suitable curriculum was prepared.

Despite an at least temporary lessening of draft fears, brought about by rumored peace negotiations, more than 100 freshmen enrolled in Trinity College and several women, following the example of their brothers, entered the Woman's College. These youngsters, come what may from their draft boards, are at least getting the jumps on their fellow freshmen.

New Buildings Arise

Another thing that the campus doesn't experience just any summer is the large scale construction now taking place.

On Hospital Drive, facing east, the new nurses home is rapidly assuming discernible architectural proportions. The brick is rising on all four sides and at this moment is nearly roof high. Inside the first of the walls are interposing themselves between large expanses of raw, empty space. Stairways are in, floors are laid, and in a surprisingly short time, it can be assumed, the nurses will be inspecting their new and much-needed living quarters and teaching facilities.

Directly across from the nurses' home is the naked steel framework of the new Graduate Living Center. Already the first rows of brick, visible only to those who take the trouble to peer over the high construction fence, line the baseline of the structure. Floors are being extended between steel beams to give the building a more substantial appearance, and an engineer with a good imagination may now visualize the eventual appearance of the finished structure.

Not too far away the new wing of the Medical Research Building is approaching completion and behind the Physics Building an annex is being erected to take care of the University's new nuclear reactor.

But the most recently begun construction activity is taking place right in the heart of West Campus. Directly across from the Library Building, beside the Social Science (old Physics) Building, there is already a strange clearing. Where a forest used to exist, there is now a level field.

This is where the ground is being prepared for the realization of an old dream, a new Administration and Classroom Building. Plans call for the erection of a gothic building that was designed some 25 years ago to fill the vacant corner of the intersection of the two main quadrangles. While the University settled back to await the time when this building would actually exist, the administrative offices, for 25 years, were located in "temporary" quarters. These quarters have long since become irremediably inadequate.

German University Has Offered Scholarships

A "thank-you" scholarship has been offered by the University of Marburg in Germany to any Duke University student who wants to study there.

Two German students from the University of Marburg, Erwin Merkel and Guenther Bicknese, who studied at Duke last fall under the German Training Program, were so impressed by Duke and American college life that they became more interested in the idea of exchange students and promoted the idea of the scholarship.

The University of Marburg is famous for its Summer School, but any season is reported to be pleasant at the University with its beautiful old buildings and traditions deeply rooted in the past. Tuition-free semesters are offered to Duke students for any time of the year. Several are taking advantage of the scholarship this summer. The German offer will permit them to take advantage of the favorable exchange rate of dollars to Deutschmark and live "luxuriously" on $50 a month (it's reported!).

A pictorial volume of the German University was presented to President Eden by Gunther Strahl, official of the town and one of a new group of German students in the training program in behalf of the town of Marburg. The German students also wished to express their thanks for the contribution of several hundred dollars to Marburg University for the improvement of student accommodation facilities by the Duke Campus Chest Fund through its world Student Service Fund.

Brees in Dedication

Anton Brees, world famous virtuoso of the carillon who plays during the summer at Duke University and during the winter at the Bok Singing Tower, Lake Wales, Fla., participated in the dedicatory recital of the University of Kansas campanile on May 27. He remained in Lawrence, Kans., to play three recitals in addition to the dedicatory service, including a starlight program.

The newly completed University of Kansas campanile is a memorial to World War II and to the alumni of that institution who gave their lives in combat. The carillon bells themselves were made by John Taylor and Company, of Loughborough, England, bell founders since 1360, the same concern which made the bells in the Duke Chapel Tower. There are 53 bells in the Kansas carillon, the largest of which weigh 13,440 pounds.

A native of Belgium, Mr. Brees has since 1924 played more dedicatory recitals than any other carillonneur in this country. His father was the eminent Gustaaf Brees, carillonneur of the historic Antwerp Cathedral. Now a United States citizen, Mr. Brees has brought to this country all of the artistry and technique which has been associated with carillon playing in the Low Lands for centuries, where the bells are considered a national instrument.

On June 3, Mr. Brees presented a carillon recital on the Duke Campus, during Commencement Week End. He will remain in Durham during the summer, and will give two carillon recitals weekly, Sunday afternoons and Thursday evenings. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Carved Crown Is Friendship Symbol

Visitors to the Rare Book Room of the Duke University Library will find among the many interesting objects placed on display there a wood carving of a crown from historic Durham castle in England.

This spring Vice-Chancellor Sir James Duff (center) of England's University of Durham, presented Duke University officials with the carving in a special international good will ceremony in the Rare Book Room.

Dr. Paul M. Gross (right), vice-president of Duke in the Educational Division, received the gift for the University. Former Mayor Dan K. Edwards, '35 (left), represented the City of Durham at the ceremony which took place shortly before he assumed the position of assistant secretary of defense in Washington, D. C.

Other Duke officials taking part were Dr. Charles E. Jordan, vice-president in the Division of Public Relations; Dr. Herbert J. Herring, vice-president in the Division of Student Life; A. S. Brower, business manager and comptroller; Dr. Alan K. Manchester, dean of undergraduate studies; and Dr. Benjamin Powell, Duke University librarian.

Vice-Chancellor Duff made his visit to the United States in connection with his duties as a member of the British Commonwealth Fund Committee of Award. Established in 1925, the fund provides international education and travel opportunities for outstanding young men and women.

Seniors Find Opportunities Are Ample

Appointments Office Reports Great Increase in Openings for Graduates

The Appointments Office, which serves as a free employment service for students and alumni, reports that probably 100 percent of this year's graduates, both men and women, have succeeded in finding jobs. Most of the seniors were registered with the office.

Outstanding facts from the report are that this year there were 4,471 job openings available for consideration by the 691 graduating seniors; that the largest number of openings were in engineering, sales and accounting, with chemistry and physics ranking next; and that there is a developing tendency for employers in commerce and industry to rate applicants primarily on their ability to get along with people, grades being of secondary significance. This development does not hold in professional and research fields, however; in these areas the applicant's academic record is scrutinized with care.

In general, the employment situation is easier now than it was last year, when there was a slight falling off from the post-war level. Judging from the number of employment opportunities, the number of visits to Duke by employers' representatives to interview students, the level of starting salaries and similar indicia the 1950 loss has been more than erased.

Industry and Government

Employment in industrial and commercial establishments which accounts for 55% of the activity of the Appointments Office, has been largely with big corporations. As may be expected, government has entered the field as an employer on a large scale. The comparatively insignificant number of smaller businesses that have engaged personnel through the Appointments Office may be due to the fact, among others, that such establishments find that the expense of sending representatives to universities to interview prospective employees outweighs the advantages of such means for filling their personnel needs as gained depending on the usual local sources.

Most calls in the commercial-industrial market still come from the North and Northeast, but the increasing industrialization of the South is reflected in a corresponding increase in the number of Duke graduates who find permanent business and professional careers in this section of the country.

A total of 184 companies sent representatives to the Appointments Office in quest of new personnel; of these, 19 made two or more visits. They announced themselves as being on the market for additions to their staffs in the following categories and in the following numbers: engineers, 747 (including a round 700 sought by DuPont); sales persons, 242; chemists, 145; accountants, 84 (several were accepted by Price, Waterhouse in New York); merchandisers, 89; physicists, 83; insurance men, 41; bank employees, 16; personnel for training in sales, management, purchasing and similar positions, 81. Vacancies disclosed by these representatives added up to 1,528. By letter and phone the office was apprised of openings for 1,474 engineers, 113 salesmen, 93 accountants and 1,263 others. Engineering opportunities account for nearly half of the total, or 2,241 out of 4,471 openings in all fields.

Four fifths of the requests for teachers originate on the college level, with calls for teachers of education and English predominating. All sections of the country send to Duke for college faculty personnel. In the secondary and elementary school brackets the largest number of openings have been for coaches, administrators and teachers of English, the calls coming mainly from the South. The 59 graduates and others so far registered for jobs in the teaching profession had 333 placement opportunities to choose from, with the most active quarter of the year, in which the foregoing figures will be trebled or quadrupled, falling within the current months of summer. This does not indicate that such a ratio exists between the number of would-be teachers and existing openings; presumably institutions needing teachers list their requirements with every major university having a school of education, as each Spring large corporations canvass the leading colleges for outstanding seniors.

Worthy of note is the fact that the calls for teachers include 110 openings for teachers on the primary, secondary and high school levels in foreign countries. A majority of the openings exist in schools in the Latin-American republics; a number of calls came also from Middle-Eastern countries such as Turkey and Greece. Anchorage, Alaska, requires many teachers; calls have come, through various public and private agencies, for teachers in Japan, Germany, Australia, the Philippines, Egypt and other countries. The requirements set forth for these positions tend to be rather high, usually demanding two years of experience, and often a master's degree. The result is that often by the time a potential applicant has the necessary requirements he is sufficiently well settled that he is reluctant to make so drastic a change.

Women Must Type

With regard to women a peculiarity of the employment situation is that most employers require a knowledge of typing and shorthand, or at least typing, even of applicants for jobs in personnel work, banks, insurance, business administration and government, where stenography is not ordinarily considered as a phase of the work. Typing is of course an understandable requirement in publicity, public relations, advertising and journalism, in which fields there have been many calls for women.

The job outlook in general, as it appears to the college graduate, is well summed up in a letter for college newspapers, for release on June 1, issued by Maurice J. Tobin, Secretary of the U. S. Department of Labor. Characterizing the prospects as "excellent," the letter continues: "Both rising civilian demand and the needs of the defense program have created a generally tight labor market, with acute shortages of workers in some occupations and local areas. In occupation after occupation the demand for workers has risen rapidly since June 1950. The total number of employes in nonagricultural establishments increased by 2 million between June 1950 and

Mistakes Will Happen

Apologies are in order for Joe Richard Phillips, B.S.M.E. '51, president of Senior Engineers, and Roberta E. Williams, R.N. '51, president of Senior Nurses, who were mistakenly identified in the June REGISTER as Richard J. Crowder and Alice Jean Youmans in the picture of flag lowering on page 140. Dick and Alice are next year's Trinity College and Woman's College presidents and will take part in the ceremony in 1952.

Duke Is Represented at Various Events

Four representatives of Duke University participated in special ceremonies at other colleges and universities during June.

Joseph C. Robert, A.M. '29, Ph.D. '33, associate dean of the Duke Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, represented Duke June 3 at the inauguration of Dr. Harold C. Case as president of Boston University, Boston, Mass.

Attending the inauguration of Malcolm A. Love as president of the University of Nevada on June 11, was W. Dwight Billings, A.M. '35, Ph.D. '36. Mr. Billings is chairman of the biology department at the University of Nevada.

Carl H. Deal, B.S. '41, Ph.D. '45, of Orinda, Calif., represented Duke at the Centennial Commencement of the College of the Pacific, June 10, in Stockton, Calif. He is a research chemist with the Shell Development Company, and is also president of his local Duke Alumni Association.

The University was represented at the 100th founders' day of the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., on June 9 by Frederic M. J. Walp, M.D. '39.

Professor Robert N. Cook, LL.B. '36, of the Law School of Western Reserve University, represented Duke at the 125th anniversary of the founding of Western Reserve University on June 11.

Foreign Students to Head Orientation Center at Duke

About 40 students from foreign countries will spend six weeks on the Duke campus from August 1 to September 7 at an "orientation center" designed to familiarize them with American customs and manners before they go on to some other school for work in a field of special interest.

Duke is one of the 20 American colleges and universities selected for the orientation program, which will help 1,000 foreign students brought to this country in State Department sponsored "exchange projects." All of the students are graduates of a foreign university and are preparing to do post graduate work in the United States.

Half of the students coming to Duke are from Japan, and the other half are from various countries all over the world, including India, Pakistan, Turkey, Egypt, France, and Belgium.

Local Associations

Hawaii

The youngest organization that has been added to the ever-expanding list of Duke Alumni Associations is the Duke University Alumni Association Hawaii Chapter. The first meeting was held in the Honolulu YWCA where former Duke students met for a tray lunch-business meeting to form the new chapter.

The following officers were elected to serve the organization: Dr. Dorothy M. Heagy, M.Ed. '44, chairman; Pattie McGowan Black (Mrs. Stanley P.), '46, vice-chairman; and the Reverend Kingsley K. Lyu, secretary-treasurer. Chaplain (Major) Robert M. Price, '18; Woodley C. Merritt, '21; Dr. Cyrus W. Loo, G. '47; and Kwan Hi Lim, LL.B. '50, are committee members.

There are about 40 Duke alumni living in the Honolulu area, and it is anticipated that they will all become active members of the Alumni Association.

Alamance County

Louis C. Allen, Jr., '45, LL.B. '49, president of the Alamance County chapter of the Duke Alumni Association, has recently been recalled to active duty with the United States Navy. For the present, Allen Commaek, Jr., '48, secretary-treasurer, will function as acting president of the organization.

WILLIAM C. WETTSTEIN, '47
Dallas, Texas

The new president of the recently organized Dallas, Tex., Duke University Club is William C. Wettstein, '47, whose picture appears above. A sales manager for Burlington Mills in Dallas, he is now an active worker for the Development Campaign in that area. His address is 5718 West Claridge Circle Dallas.

Predictions for '51 Are Scarce

No One Knows Blue Devil Strength—But Thrills Are Expected

Captain of Duke's 1951 Football Team, James Gibson

From Duke to State

Horace (Horse) Hendrickson, '34, frosh football, baseball, and basketball coach at Duke for the past two years, is taking over as chief scout for the N. C. State College football team, assistant varsity coach, and head coach of the junior varsity football team next year.

A quarterback on the first Duke team coached by Wallace Wade to win the Southern Conference championship, in his senior year he also won varsity monograms in baseball and basketball.

Coaching and sports work have kept Hendrickson busy since his college days. He remained as assistant freshman coach at Duke until 1937 when he went to Elon College as director of athletics and football coach. His Elon teams won two North Carolina Conference championships in football and three in baseball.

He joined the University of Pennsylvania grid staff as assistant backfield coach in 1942, and the Brooklyn Dodgers signed him as backfield coach of their grid team and scout in the baseball set-up in 1948. A year later, Mr. Hendrickson returned to Duke as a member of the athletic system.

With Bill Murray, '31, head mentor at Duke, Tom Rogers, '35, at Wake Forest, and "Horse" Hendrickson, assistant coaching at State College, Duke University is well represented on surrounding football teams for the coming year. Carolina, however, has not yet accepted Duke coaching talent.

Football Coach William D. (Bill) Murray, '31, "officially" returned to Duke and the state of North Carolina in mid-July and after helping Mrs. Murray (Carolyn Kirby), '32, get settled in their home here, he started looking to and planning for the fall.

As he returned, the athletic office reported a brisk sale of season tickets (better get your orders in for both season tickets and individual tickets NOW) and it appears that there is great interest in Murray's debut as boss of the Blue Devils.

Bill himself had little to say. "We may surprise some of our opponents," he said, "and I hope that we can do some scoring. However, I am afraid that our opponents are going to do some too. I am still trying to familiarize myself with the squad which can't be done in the six weeks we had this spring."

There is one thing certain. His selection as coach has met with approval from all sides. He was certainly the "people's choice" for the job. Those who know him best predict great things for him for he is generally recognized as having a keen football mind.

The alumni must give him time, however. Coming here "cold turkey," he has had to start from the bottom and get acquainted both with the boys and with the assistant coaches, but he has gotten a fine start; he is both popular with and respected by the "boys" and he'll eventually do the job.

The schedule is a tough one. Opening with strong South Carolina at Columbia, the Blue Devils then journey to Pittsburgh to meet the resurging Panthers and then to Knoxville to take on the No. 1 team in the nation (in our book), Tennessee. If he can get a couple of wins out of those three, he'll have done his job well indeed.

Coach Murray will make his home debut in the game with N. C. State on October 13 which will be followed by a game with Virginia Tech at Norfolk on October 22.

The Homecoming Day special will be served up on October 27 with Virginia here and it is expected to be a record-breaker as alumni return to watch Duke's first alumnus coach.

Georgia Tech will be met in Atlanta on November 3 and then Wake Forest comes here for the Dad's Day game on November 10. This will be followed by a game with William and Mary at Williamsburg on November 17 and the finale with Carolina here on November 24.

Several announcements recently indicate "terrific" schedules for Duke teams in years to come. Athletic Director Eddie Cameron recently announced that Navy would come to Durham on November 8 of 1952 and that S.M.U. would be met in Dallas, Texas, on September 26.

These games along with the home-and-home series previously announced with Army and Purdue starting in 1953 show the calibre of the opposition that Duke will play in years to come and the fine attractions that will be brought to Duke stadium.

Cameron pointed out that "fans who buy season tickets now will be assured of best seats in future years."

Alumni Recently Honored

A Random Sampling of Recognition of Duke Men and Women

Julian Lentz Is Honored

Julian C. Lentz, Jr., '38, M.D. '42, of Maryville, Tenn., has received the Junior Chamber of Commerce distinguished service award for being named "Young Man of the Year" of Blount County, Tenn.

An active Jaycee and Kiwanian, Dr. Lentz has been a leader in health and civic affairs in Blount County, having served as chairman of the Heart Association drive and diabetic detection clinic. He has worked as medical advisor to veterans, given service in treatment of arthritic patients and found sponsors to pay for their medicine at cost, and helped establish a vitamin bank for needy children of the community.

Dr. Lentz is vice-president of the Blount County Medical Association, secretary of the Blount Memorial Hospital staff, member of the Disaster Preparedness project of the Red Cross, chairman of the underprivileged committee of the Kiwanis Club, and has served as chairman of the Red Cross Medical group. He is an active member of the New Providence Presbyterian Church, where he serves as chairman of the Square of Laymen's Council.

Having interned at Grady Hospital, Atlanta, Ga., and taken post graduate work in Atlanta following service in the U. S. Army Medical Corps with the First Field Hospital, Dr. Lentz established his practice in Maryville. He is married to the former Mary Nell Lee, '40, and they have two children.

Another "Young Man of the Year"

Another Duke alumnus honored this spring by being chosen "Young Man of the Year" by his local Junior Chamber of Commerce Association is W. D. Boddie, B.D. '41, of Springhill, La.

Mr. Boddie is minister of the Springhill Methodist Church. During his three-year pastorate, 304 persons have been received into his church. At present the church has a membership of some 600 resident members and 225 non-resident members.

A new son, Wyatt David, III, was born to the Boddies on February 28 of this year. They also have two daughters, Linda, 6, and Susan, 3. Mrs. Boddie is the former Margaret Smith, '35. Their address is Box 545, Springhill, La.

First Woman on Board

The recent appointment of Ruth Forlines Dailey (Mrs. J. C., Jr.), '33, of Durham, to the City Board of Education marks the first time a woman has been chosen to serve in this capacity in the city's history.

Her appointment was unanimously recommended to the City Council by a special committee of that body, and the recommendation was approved by the Council.

John Calvin Dailey, her husband, is an alumnus of the Class of '31. He is the owner of Dailey's, Inc., hardware store. They have three children, Jack, Nancy, and Rebecca. The Daileys live at 2216 Club Boulevard in Durham.

A similar distinction is enjoyed by Elizabeth Williams Lanning (Mrs. John T.), '31, who was elected last year to membership on the Durham County Board of Education, the first woman to fill this office. Both Mrs. Dailey and Mrs. Lanning are now serving.

New Mayor of High Point

Amos R. Kearns, '27, secretary-treasurer of the Crown Hosiery Mills of High Point, N. C., was elected mayor of High Point recently in a vigorously contested election. As Democratic standard bearer he led his party to a clean sweep of all the top electoral posts of the city government. A new eight-member city council was voted into office for a two-year term with Mayor-elect Kearns.

High Point's new mayor has been prominent in Duke University affairs as well as in community activities. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees and of the Duke Athletic Council, and has served as president of the Alumni Association. He is a past president of the High Point Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and Country Club, and a member of the Union League Club of New York City. He is an active member of the Wesley Memorial M. E. Church of High Point and serves on its board of stewards. In 1933 he married Miss Louise Copeland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sanford Copeland, of Kinston. They have two children, Amos Jr., 16, and Jane Edgerton Kearns, 14.

Oldest Alumnus

Columbus Bernard Franklin, '77, is now the oldest living alumnus of Duke University. He was born December 26, 1857. He also represents the oldest class which has a member living.

Mr. Franklin makes his home on a fruit ranch in Carpenteria, Santa Barbara County, Calif. He moved to California in 1876 after having grown up in Elkin, N. C. In 1890 he married Theresa Elizabeth Bailard. They had three children, two of whom are now living—Bernice Franklin Horton (Mrs. Archie W.), of Carpenteria, and Betty Franklin.

Mr. Franklin became the oldest living alumnus with the passing recently of Edward Stanley Abell, '78.

Lions District Governor

O. E. Dowd, '27, M.Ed. '40, has been serving as district governor of District 31-F, Lions International, for the past year. This district includes 53 clubs in the northeastern part of North Carolina.

Mr. Dowd, who is principal of the Greenville, N. C., High School, has been a Lion for 12 years. Before moving to Greenville, he was a member of the Durham and Washington Lions Clubs. He has served his present club as president and director, and has served the district as zone chairman and deputy district governor.

Mr. and Mrs. Dowd have one son, Edwards Dowd.

Boyd Biography Written

The Princeton University Alumni Weekly is offering a book entitled Julian P. Boyd: A Bibliographical Record to interested persons.

Dr. Boyd is an alumnus of Duke University, having received the A.B. degree in 1925, the A.M. in 1926, and the Litt.D. at commencement, 1951. He is the librarian of Princeton University, and has recently undertaken the task of editing a 52-volume set of books on the papers of Thomas Jefferson. For the year 1951-52, Dr. Boyd has been granted a leave of absence for work on this project.

A Princeton alumnus who received the book has written a letter to the Weekly thanking them for the "lovely little volume" which is a "perfect thing for the friends of Princeton's librarian to do. To be one of those to pay Julian P. Boyd honor is a high privilege."

Book Prize Established

A book prize has been established by Darrell S. Jones, '50, in appreciation of the course in history of art and culture in the western world offered by Dr. Sidney B. Markham, of the Duke Department of Aesthetics, Art, and Music. The prize is to be given to the student benefiting most from the course each year.

Winner of this year's prize was Willard B. Gatewood, Jr., of Pelham, N. Y., a Duke sophomore. Dr. Markham presented the award, which was a book on the painting of El Greco with color reproductions.

ECONOMIC RESOURCES AND POLICIES OF THE SOUTH

by Dr. Calvin B. Hoover and Dr. B. U. Ratchford. The Macmillan Co.

Two Duke University professors of economics have written a report based on a three-year study, made for the Committee of the South of the National Planning Association, of "alternative economic policies for the South." Calvin B. Hoover and B. U. Ratchford, the former serving as research director of the Committee, have presented in their Economic Resources and Policies of the South (The Macmillan Co., New York, 464 pp., $5.50) an exhaustive inventory of the region's economic resources and they point to continued industrialization as the logical policy for the section to follow.

The study acknowledges that the industrialization policy pursued during the past 20 years has been fruitful in narrowing the gap between the Southern income level and that of other sections, but it points out how much more progress is required before the Southern economy is raised to the National average as expressed in income, education and other fields usually accepted as indices. For example, though the South has greatly increased its expenditures for education and now spends a greater percentage of its income on this item than other sections, it amounts to only about half as much expenditure per pupil.

The book is a significant contribution to Southern progress, with a wealth of statistical data and many tradition-free interpretations of basic Southern economic-political policy. No student or observer of Southern economy will fail to be factually fortified and intellectually stimulated by a thoughtful reading of it.

Faculty and Alumni Writings

YOU CAN PREACH

by the Reverend G. Ray Jordan, '17, D.D. '35. Fleming H. Revell Co.

The philosophy and theology of preaching and the technique of building a sermon is the subject of a new book by Dr. G. Ray Jordan, which has recently been issued under the imprimatur of Fleming H. Revell Co. Dr. Jordan is now professor of preaching at Emory University.

Dr. Jordan's volume is the distillation of the experience and insight gained in a quarter century of service in the pastoral ministry, during which the author held some of the most prominent pulpits in the Methodist Church and represented his denomination at the ecumenical gatherings of Edinburgh and Oxford. The book is described by his Emory colleague, William R. Cannon, professor of Church History and Theology, as "perhaps the most significant contribution in this field in our generation and (one which) will unquestionably be used as a text in Divinity Schools throughout America."

The text is designed for students of homiletics and also to serve as an aid to the experienced minister who is striving to improve the force and quality of his sermons.

THE NAVY AND THE INDUSTRIAL MOBILIZATION IN WORLD WAR II

by Robert H. Connery. Princeton University Press.

According to the New York Times, "the lack of mobilization information becomes a real hazard when we must arm ourselves to meet a challenge."

A recently published book by Robert H. Connery, professor of political science at Duke, entitled The Navy and the Industrial Mobilization in World War II, a case history which combines the most mature qualities of academic and practical history, has been described in a Times review as an outstanding contribution toward overcoming America's lack of practical literature on war mobilization.

The book traces the revolution of mobilization procedures which took place during the last war. A detailed account of the role played by the late James Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy, in solving mobilization problems which are being faced again today, is given in the book. Dr. Connery points out that experience is essential to preparedness, but preparedness which worships experience instead of exploiting it is self-defeating.

Dr. Connery, who has been a member of the Duke faculty since 1949, is a widely recognized consultant on public administration. Last summer he was named by the Brookings Institution to study ways of speeding up the U. S. Military Assistance Program. During World War II he served with the Navy's historical unit and in 1948 was a consultant to the Hoover Commission. He has also been a consultant to the National Resources Board and the President's Committee on Administrative Management.

Other books by Dr. Connery are Government Problems in Wild Life Conservation and Administration of an N.R.A. Code. His articles have appeared in leading professional journals.

Virginia Records Returned

A number of county and local records of Virginia which have been preserved in the Duke Library for more than 20 years are being transferred to the Virginia State Library, President Hollis Edens has announced. The records have been a subject of a mild controversy in the perpetual rivalry between the Old Dominion and the Old North State.

Duke University's interest in acquiring the manuscripts originally, President Edens said, was to preserve them and make them available to researchers. Negotiations between Duke and the Virginia State Library resulted in the decision to transfer the documents to the Virginia institution and place them with other material of the same nature.

The Duke Library's collection of more than 1,500,000 manuscripts, built around the great Flowers collection of Southern Americana, are now a leading source of information to scholars investigating Southern culture. The manuscripts range from plantation account books to the secret archives of the Confederacy, and from letters of poets to those of presidents of the United States.

Commenting on the intellectual exchange and friendly relationships between Duke and Virginia institutions, President Edens assured a cordial welcome to Virginia researchers who visit the Duke University Library.

Commander Leaves Duke

Commander Clyde J. Van Arsdall, former executive officer of the Duke University Naval R.O.T.C., left Duke this spring to assume command of a squadron of destroyer escorts on the West Coast. His family, however, remained in Durham until the end of the school year.

A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Comdr. Van Arsdall had been at Duke since 1948. In addition to his executive duties he was an assistant professor of naval science.

During World War II, he served in both the Atlantic and Pacific Theaters. His military decorations include the Navy Cross, Silver Star and a Navy unit citation.

Before leaving Duke, Comdr. Van Arsdall was honored by initiation into Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity. Because the date of his departure fell before the regular initiation date, a special ceremony was held.

Sea Duty Assignments

Five officers of the N.R.O.T.C. unit will leave Duke for permanent sea duty assignments and three others have been transferred to temporary summer posts. Those leaving permanently will be replaced.

Capt. Ralph Earle, Jr., commanding officer of the Duke unit, Lt. Comdr. Robert B. Harrell, associate professor of Naval science, and Maj. James C. Fetters, assistant professor of Naval science, will take up temporary assignments. They will return in the fall.

Lieut. Ralph A. Brackett will become executive officer of a destroyer escort. Lieut. Robert B. Gustafson has been assigned submarine duty. Lieut. Robert P. Brewer will join an aircraft squadron. All three have served at Duke as assistant professors of Naval science. Master Sgt. R. W. Taylor will join the fleet Marine force, and Chief Quartermaster H. G. Malcolm will leave for sea duty in September.

Summer Duty for Students

Sixty-nine Duke midshipmen sailed from Norfolk, Va., on June 4 for the first eight-week cruise, and 30 sailed with the second cruise on June 22. One Duke student will sail on the third cruise to

New York, Panama and Cuba on August 3.

Three weeks of aviation indoctrination at Pensacola, Fla., and three weeks of amphibious training at Little Creek, Va. are being given 28 Duke midshipmen over the summer.

John Kail Award

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Kail, parents of John Frederick Kail, '46, who was fatally injured in a crash over enemy territory in Korea August 5, have received the Air Medal and citation which was awarded posthumously to their son.

The presentation, made in a brief private ceremony at the Kail home in Upper Sandusky, Ohio, by Lieutenant Commander J. A. Smith, inspector of Naval Reserves, Mansfield, Ohio, read in part:

"Carrying out a daring glide-bombing attack against an important enemy road bridge across the Kum River, east of Kunsan, Ensign Kail scored a direct hit on the structure despite hostile anti-aircraft fire, rendering this vital highway link inoperable to the enemy. During subsequent strafing against enemy coastal shipping off the coast of Kunsan, he lost his life as the result of a mid-air collision. His courage, aggressive fighting spirit and unswerving devotion to duty reflect the highest credit upon Ensign Kail and were in keeping with the finest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave his life for his country."

quate, but just recently was it possible to do something about it.

Contract for this last gothic structure on the campus has not yet been let. Mr. A. S. Brower, business manager and comptroller, will probably announce the contract within the next few weeks. Meanwhile, the University is proceeding with the preparation of the ground.

More than Buildings

The vigorous building program now underway, demanded by Duke's past growth in size and by its presently expanding activities, can be traced directly to those who, in the past two years, have come to the University's support through the Development Campaign. Funds for some of the building projects came from other sources, but mostly the Development Campaign that alumni ran and participated in made possible this activity.

And while the buildings are apparent to anyone who can see, only those close to the operation of the University are fully aware of the full effect of the recent gifts of alumni and friends. With the Development Campaign $1,000,000 and six months away from its goal, the University is nevertheless able to begin planning greatly needed additions to its scholarship and fellowship programs, to teaching and research activities, and to other functions essential to a university that is doing its job in the best possible manner for the greatest possible benefit to those whom it serves.

While this summer seems not too unlike others that have gone before, another generation will look back and regard it as a new forward move for Duke rivaling in significance the events of 1924.

Opportunities Are Ample

April 1951, and unemployment dropped sharply. More people are at work this spring than in any previous spring in the nation's history."

The Appointments Office, operating under the direction of Miss Fanny Y. Mitchell, offers its services to all students and alumni, as well as to outgoing seniors. The only restriction is that the applicant must be a graduate of this university or working toward a degree here. During the past year 15 teaching positions have been obtained through this office by persons who were at some time, and for varying periods, matriculated students at Duke. These are in addition to the teacher placements described above. A score of graduates have successfully used the aid of the Appointments Office this year in securing positions in the fields of chemistry, physics, engineering and accounting. The office is open all year, and aids students in obtaining summer jobs as well as permanent ones. It is obviously a vital and successful branch of the administration's activity.

Letter

Claire Naylor Morgenthaler (Mrs. Walter N.), '49

30, Route de Medionna
Casablanca, Morocco
27 July, 1951

Chiefly I wanted to thank you for your kind letter which I received shortly after my arrival here, and also to tell you how much we "all" enjoy getting the ALUMNI REGISTER. "All" includes Pat Waller, '48, and Bob Williams, B.S.E.E. '49, who are also over here. I have heard through the grape-vine that there is another Duke alumnus out at one of the field sites, but I haven't as yet had a chance to contact him, and I don't know what his name is.

At present, and in fact since a week after I arrived here, I have been "on loan" to the U. S. Corps of Engineers as Secretary-Interpreter to the Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel who are in charge of this construction. It is, in my opinion, the best job a girl could have over here.

We work on an 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. day, except Saturdays when we get off at 11:00 a.m.—supposedly! It usually turns out longer, but I think I have the most interesting job in the world, so I don't mind.

I arrived here on 28 January with the "second wave" of personnel as the first working girl over here. Since then my life has been truly exciting, both from a business and pleasure point of view. Morocco is an intensely interesting country—a sort of cross between a movie travelogue and scenes from the New Testament. The Arab population in the cities has been to a large extent Europeanized—not in matters of dress and custom alone, but even more in their mentality and "business methods." One of the most interesting parts of any town is the "Medina," or native quarter. There the people live in an incredible state of poverty and filth for the most part, although there are outstanding exceptions, of course. There one finds innumerable little open-front shops selling leather and metal goods at unbelievably low prices—if one has super-sharp bargaining talent! After looking around a bit, carefully showing a complete lack of interest, one nonchalantly asks the price of an article. Upon hearing the response, one laughs heartily and starts to walk out, quoting an offer of approximately one-third over one's shoulder. This goes on for from five minutes to half an

News of the death of Chancellor Robert Lee Flowers was sorrowfully received by the University just as the August issue of the REGISTER was going to press. The portrait on the cover is a recent and popular photo of Duke's great builder. On the next page is the information of his passing and some of the tributes paid him by men high in the world of education, business, and government.

Chancellor Robert Lee Flowers Passes

Duke University has lost one of its great leaders.

Chancellor Robert Lee Flowers died at his home early Friday evening, August 24, after a lingering illness. He was 80 years old.

Funeral services were held in Duke Chapel on Sunday, August 26, with Dean James Cannon III of the Divinity School officiating. Dr. Cannon was assisted by Dr. Hersey E. Spence, professor of Biblical literature and religious education. Both men were old friends of the Chancellor. Burial took place in Maplewood Cemetery in the Flowers family plot.

A host of friends, among them many alumni of Duke who came from a distance, gathered to pay final homage to the great educator.

It will be hard for many to imagine Duke without beloved "Professor Bobby." For 60 fruitful years his name has been almost synonymous with the institution he was so instrumental in developing. They were 60 years of loyal devotion to a College, a University, and an ideal. They were years in which countless lives were benevolently influenced by his personality and his work.

The death of Dr. Flowers brought forth many high and sincere tributes to his life and his accomplishments.

President Hollis Edens, who succeeded him in office, said: "The contributions of Chancellor Flowers to Duke University are plainly written in the record, but beyond that, the admiration and affection of his many friends indicate the personality of the man who performed the deeds. Even those of us who had the privilege of knowing him . . . a short time only can see his strength of character written indelibly upon the life of the University."

Governor Kerr Scott of North Carolina said in Raleigh: "The greatness of a man is measured by his continuing influence upon human events . . . judged by this standard the greatness of Dr. Robert Lee Flowers will increase for years to come, because the institution with which he identified himself will perpetuate his influence. For more than half a century Dr. Flowers has been an integral part of Duke University and the institution from which it grew. In all of the positions he held he was faithful and loyal. His contribution to the Duke University of today and tomorrow has been large. It has been even greater to the State and the Nation."

The Honorable Willis Smith, chairman of the University Board of Trustees and a United States Senator, stated: "Robert Lee Flowers has passed, and the State and Nation have lost a loyal citizen who made his life count in the furtherance of education, religion, charity, civic, and social welfare. Truly a great and forceful leader has left us and we are the loser."

Dr. Flowers, the late William Preston Few, and Vice-Chancellor William H. Wannamaker are regarded as the trio which led Duke University to the eminent position it now holds in the ranks of education. Dr. Wannamaker, an intimate colleague of the Chancellor, said: "Knowing him for many years and intimately, I can truthfully say that I have known no other person who, through so many years, wholeheartedly and unselfishly gave his life to an educational institution."

Other expressions of grief and tribute came from a multitude of civic and educational leaders who had known him, loved him, and respected him as a friend and as an educator.

Robert Lee Flowers was born in Alexander County, N. C., on November 6, 1870, the eldest son of George Washington and Sarah Haynes Flowers. In 1905 he married the former Lily Virginia Parrish, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Edward J. Parrish of Durham. Mrs. Flowers died in 1948.

He came to Trinity College as an instructor in electrical engineering in 1891, just after being graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. This was while Trinity was still located in Randolph County.

He soon became a professor of mathematics and chairman of the department, positions he actively held until 1934. In 1910 he became secretary of the College and in 1924, shortly after the Duke Endowment was established, he was named secretary and treasurer of Duke University. A year later he was elected vice-president and a trustee. In 1926 he succeeded the University's founder, James B. Duke, as a trustee of the Duke Endowment.

Dr. Flowers became president in 1941, after the death of Dr. Few. He held the presidency during the difficult years of World War II and the period of readjustment that followed. In 1948 he became Chancellor.

His record of service to Duke is nearly equalled by his service to many other religious, civic, educational, and charitable institutions. Among them are orphanages, churches, hospitals, youth organizations, and colleges. During his lifetime he also served on numerous public education commissions and advisory groups.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Lenox D. Baker, Durham, and Mrs. George A. Robinson, South Miami, Fla.; a sister, Mrs. Marshall T. Spears, '14, Durham; three brothers, Fred Flowers, '08, Wilson, N. C., G. Horace Flowers, '02, Richmond, Va., and Claude M. Flowers, '09, Durham; and five grandchildren, Robert Flowers Baker and Lenox D. Baker, Jr., of Durham, Marian Virginia Huey and Sybil Flowers Huey of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Robert Lee Robinson of South Miami, Fla.

The passing of Dr. Flowers is mourned by thousands who loved him and who held him in the highest esteem; but few men have lived who could, in their waning years, look back over a life as productive in service to humanity. The results of his labor are the greatest consolation for those who sorrow. It can be said that his was a life indeed well spent.

DUKE UNIVERSITY ALUMNI REGISTER

Volume XXXVII

August, 1951

This issue of the ALUMNI REGISTER closes another period in the history of the magazine. The September issue will begin a new era. Roger Marshall, of the class of 1942, will take over as Editor of the publication. For several years he has served as Managing Editor and in this capacity has made an outstanding contribution to the University and his fellow alumni.

This page has been used by the Director of Alumni Affairs as the editorial page, through which he has tried to call to the attention of the alumni various ways in which they might effectively serve Duke University. Beginning next month there will be a Director of Alumni Affairs' page, which will serve to retain a close relationship between the Director and the alumni. It will express the opinion of the Director and not necessarily that of the publication or the University.

Now a personal word from the retiring editor. I should like to thank those alumni and friends of the University who have cooperated so generously in making constructive suggestions which have molded my thinking in preparing this page each month for the past several years. I hope that I may, in the months to come, continue to receive their assistance, for it is only through the continued interest and support of the alumni that an effective program of alumni activities may be continued. If you like what is being done at the University, please continue to say so. If you don't like what is being done, feel free to express this also.

The Development Campaign will be continued during the Fall months. In September you will hear a great deal about this part of the University's program. Already an outstanding job has been done in raising over $7,500,000. The combined efforts of every interested person will be needed, however, to assure the successful reaching and passing of the goal of $8,650,000, which has been set. Let's go!

The local alumni groups are already making plans for one of their most active periods this Fall. Fred Whitener, of the class of 1947, has joined the staff of the Department of Alumni Affairs. As he will coordinate the activities of these groups, he would be happy to have those needing assistance write to him.

Have you ordered your football tickets? If not, a word to the wise should be sufficient. Since tickets are going faster than ever for this year's games, those desiring to see the Duke Blue Devils in action this Fall should place orders now! That applies both to home games and to the games away from home. The early bird gets the worm.

The Class Agents have gotten out their pencils, sharpened them, and poised them ready to write you about the affairs of the University. These interested supporters of Duke University are giving generously of their time and energy to make Duke a better, not bigger, institution. When you get your letter, answer it right away. You will save your agent time, and the interest will mean much to Duke University.

Do you know of some outstanding young man or woman who should be planning to attend Duke University. If so, write for materials. We have a brand new pictorial folder that will be off the press within the near future. If you would like a copy for yourself or someone else, drop us a line.

For the Alumni Office, the opening of school in September is one of the most interesting times of the entire year, for during this period many of the alumni return to enroll their sons and daughters. While they are on the campus they drop by the Alumni Office to visit and frequently to pass on information about other alumni and alumni thinking in general. If you are coming to Duke this September to enroll your son or daughter, plan to drop by the Alumni Office for a visit, no matter how brief it must be. We, of course, are looking forward to meeting and knowing alumni sons and daughters who are entering Duke for the first time. The increasing number of such students every year gives us a great deal of personal satisfaction, for it means the alumni approve of the kind of training offered at Duke and are anxious for future generations to take advantage of it.

The age old problem is ever with us: What's happened to Mr. John Doe of 1467 W. Market Street? Or is Mary Smith married? If so, where is she living? If you were to go into the Records Office any hour of the day, these are the kind of questions you would hear the young ladies asking one another. You don't mean to make it difficult, but you, the alumni, are the source of these questions. The reason you are the source of these questions is that you failed to notify the Alumni Office when you moved two blocks from your present address; or when you went across town for a new place of residence; or perhaps when you just changed apartments in the same building. We are uninformed because, when you moved, you said, "I will write the Alumni Office in a day or two," and then you forgot. If you are getting mail from the Alumni Office directed to an old address, please send us your new one. The fact that most of the 24,000 Duke alumni have changed addresses at least once in the past twelve months is fantastic but true. How about giving us a helping hand. Remember, more people move in the month of September than in any other. If you are one of these, send us your new address.

Introducing Foreign Students to Uncle Sam

One of the 40 or so foreign students who are making Duke their temporary home this month became enmeshed in passport red tape in New York. His take-off for Raleigh was delayed six hours. His flight, therefore, would terminate at 1:00 a.m., and he was concerned over the problem he anticipated in landing in an unfamiliar city at such an hour and finding a place to stay. He was infinitely relieved, on leaving the plane, to find a friend waiting to bring him to Durham.

The friend was Dr. Earl T. Hanson, of the Political Science Department, director of the Duke orientation center for foreign students coming to the United States for academic training under auspices of the Departments of State and Army. The students arrived August 1 for a six-week stay before going to other universities for the school year 1951-52.

The impression created upon the student by the appearance of this sympathetic one-man reception committee was one which, to use his own words, he will not forget as long as he lives. From this simple situation may be inferred something of the nature of the task being undertaken by the score of orientation centers now on American university campuses under the Institute of International Education's foreign student program. It is "the setting of the hesitating foot on the untried path, the helping hand over the ditch of despair, the boost over the first barrier of bewilderment which the foreign students find on arrival in this overwhelming country of ours."

Cushions the Shock

The orientation center represents a new approach to a problem which has prevented this nation's exchange student activities from yielding the best possible results. The general purpose of the exchange student program is to give selected students from other countries a first-hand knowledge of the general aspects of American culture, in addition to providing an opportunity for specialized study. But the shock and confusion of plunging into a strange social milieu at the very time of beginning a frequently strenuous academic year have been found to have unfortunate results, both for the absorption of culture and for the assimilation of learning. It was decided that an orientation period of six weeks might well be spent in cushioning the shock before the school year began.

Hence, on August 1 there arrived at Duke from all over the world a group of students who are living on the campus, eating in the cafeterias, having cokes and shopping for incidentals in the "Dope Shop," going on field trips around Durham and vicinity, hearing lectures on American culture, improving their command of English, having discussions with American students, and, in general, acustoming themselves to our college life. Under the Summer Session program headed by Dr. Paul Clyde the orientation center is administered by Dr. Hanson, who has as his assistants Dr. Joel Colton, Duke historian, and a staff of eight or nine picked teachers from the English and Social Science departments.

The newcomers are brilliant, interesting and extremely likeable. About half of them are Japanese, under the sponsorship of the U. S. Department of the Army. Others, under a State Department-sponsored program, are from India, Italy, Pakistan, Switzerland, Germany, France, Brazil and points east and west.

They were selected, through exhaustive competitive examinations, for their probable ability to interpret America to their countrymen when they return, for the value to their native lands which their U. S. acquired training will yield, for their open-mindedness, for their proficiency in English. Ages average 28, and range from 21 to 39. Among them are college professors, undergraduates, government officials, journalists.

Food Is a Problem

Two of the three primary physical needs of the men are being taken care of without difficulty. Clothes present no problem, and they are being sheltered in GG Dormitory on West Campus. Food is a slightly different matter. Cultural differences introduce complications for some. One Pakistani has said good-naturedly, and probably with a slight exaggeration, that he has been on a diet of huttered toast ever since he came to America. Religious orthodoxy discourages for some Easterners the eating of pork, beef, eggs or, unless with special preparation, chicken. The culinary indoctrination of some of the Japanese, however, was accomplished on a Navy transport, and in at least one instance resulted in an affinity for hot roast beef sandwiches and cheeseburgers.

Harvey Grundy and his dietitians a special effort is being made to accommodate the preferences of the several nationalities and at the same time to educate the students in American—and particularly Southern—cuisine.

The students are impressed with the quantity of food served, and with its sometimes mystifying variety. A table of labelled condiments has occasioned some experimentation, such as lathering black-eyed peas with mayonnaise and applying horseradish sauce to macaroni and cheese. Leftovers are carefully scrutinized as an index to likes and dislikes. American students are encouraged to join the guests from abroad at meal times, and the best-natured fraternization seems to be the order of the day. There is confident expectation that the social give and take will be healthy and valuable for both sides.

The orientation program has been devised with great care. The Institute of International Education has been requested by the Departments of State and Army to administer such a program for 1,000 students who were to enter the United States under their auspices for the academic year of 1951-52. Twenty colleges and universities were asked to provide orientation centers for from 40 to 80 students each, with a curriculum "designed to prepare them for good adjustment to the university or college in which they will spend the balance of the academic year." (Those now at Duke will leave in September for other schools and foreign students who have had orientation at other institutions will come to Duke for study. The switch has been found advisable for a number of reasons, most of which add up to the fact that this procedure will widen their experience, which is what they came for.)

Goals Described

Early this year in Chicago a conference of center directors was held by the Institute. For three days the directors exchanged experiences of previous years, formulated plans and shaped programs. The objectives of the orientation courses offered at each center, and of the programs built around the courses, are: to enable the student to increase his English language proficiency in order to be able to undertake academic work without serious handicap; to increase his knowledge of the ideas and events which have contributed to the growth of modern American civilization, and enable him to observe at first hand the practical application of democracy to American life and institutions; to accustom him to American

American and foreign students eagerly seek each other's viewpoints on all conceivable subjects, the only bar being language difficulty. Here, in "D" cafeteria, Dr. Earl T. Hanson, director of the orientation program and a Woman's College junior engage in discussion with the guest students. Left to right: Dr. Hanson; Hans Lindhorst, Germany; Hassan Gamgoun, Egypt; Jeorg Herkommer, Germany; Motei Tetsuji, Japan; A. W. K. Malik, Pakistan; J. D. Hassan, Pakistan; Ann Gore, U. S. classroom techniques and acquaint him with the general workings of the American educational system; and to give him an opportunity to become acclimated and adjusted to a new social environment. That's a large order for all concerned, considering the time limitations.

The presence of the students has given West Campus an unusually metropolitan air, especially for a summer session. Among them is represented a wide variety of personalities and interests. One Japanese, who teaches school in Tokyo, wrote his master's dissertation on Walt Whitman, and was extremely pleased to find in the Duke Library an exceptional collection of the works of that poet. A Turkish student aiming at a master's degree in civil engineering asked to be shown through the cafeteria kitchen, where he exhibited great interest in the steam cookers, dishwashing machine and other equipment.

One of the Egyptians is a journalist. He represented his Cairo paper at the United Nations last year, and is now serving as an American correspondent for that paper and another in Karachi. Several students are physicians and several are lawyers. It is probable that all are extremely serious about their responsibilities and opportunities.

Well-Rounded Program

The daily routine consists of lectures, discussions and classes in the mornings, with social and recreational activities and field trips in the afternoons and evenings, separated by generous allotments of free time. Dr. Hanson and Dr. Colton make themselves available to the students for consultation. Most classes and lectures are held in the Engineering Building. The faculty includes Messrs. Stone, Delhomme, Cook, Williams, Richards and Emma.

The Student Y.M.C.A. is assuming much responsibility for arranging social events and for bringing American students into social relationships with the visitors. The first week ended (on Saturday) with a picnic at Gate One, an arrangement which neatly avoided a transportation problem, Gate One being within walking distance. During the second week the women students of Duke entertained the foreign students at a reception, and a session of square and ballroom dancing was held in the Old Gymnasium.

Dr. Paul N. Gross (second from right), vice-president of Duke University and president of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, and Dr. Charles K. Bradsher (right), professor of chemistry, discuss the atomic energy exhibit with Dr. Louis Anderson, chairman of the Botany Department of the Conference, and Dr. Ralph T. Overman, Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

Laboratory for Science Teachers

Resourcefulness Improves Teaching Techniques

It is said that a resourceful woman can fix almost anything with a hairpin and a piece of chewing gum. Not quite so simple is the conducting of classroom experiments in physics, chemistry and biology with homemade apparatus; Boyle's Law could hardly be demonstrated with a few old mason jars, some odd pieces of pipe and a front-porch thermometer. But the 45 men and women—most of them high school science teachers from North Carolina and nearby—who spent the week of July 23 at the Science Teachers Laboratory Conference saw basic physical science principles demonstrated by devices whose parts were resurrected from junk piles and attics.

The teachers, who came "to learn how practical and useful experiments can be performed in their classrooms with a minimum of equipment," saw a galvanometer made from an old razor blade, a coil of wire, some bits of thread, two dry cells and a wooden stand. An arrangement consisting of a spark plug set in a Rumford baking powder can, a Model "T" Ford coil, a single pole switch and a 7-volt source of current, with benzene judiciously administered by eye-dropper, illustrated effectively the principles of the internal combustion engine. The reason a baseball curves was shown by a contraption made out of a rubber band, the cardboard core of a paper towel roll, two feet of gauze bandage, a square foot of flat board and a couple of thumb tacks. Most of the "equipment" was constructed by high school science students as class projects. It ran practically the gamut of secondary school physics and general science.

The Conference, believed to be the first of its kind, was a carefully planned program of laboratory demonstrations, discussion groups, inspections, guided tours and formal dinner meetings. The famed Oak Ridge Traveling Museum exhibit on atomic energy arrived from Salt Lake City for its North Carolina premiere after an almost fatal delay in transit. On one afternoon the conferees were received at the Morehead Planetarium in Chapel Hill.

A nominal $6 registration included admission to all sessions of the Conference, which covered the fields of the physical and biological sciences. At the opening session, presided over by Lewis E. Anderson, chairman of the Botany Department, welcoming remarks were made by Paul M. Gross, vice-president of Duke, and John H. Highsmith, of the North Carolina State Department of Education, representing the two organizations sponsoring the Conference. The four-day event closed with a panel discussion on "The Meanings of Science," and an hour-long formal critique of the Conference. The panel discussants were Professor R. N. Wilson, professor emeritus of chemistry; Mr. Richard L. Weaver, director of Resource Use Education, Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, N. C.; Mr. Henry A. Shannon, advisor in science in the same department; and Dr. George W. Haupt, Glassboro State Teachers College, Glassboro, N. J.

Other Conference highlights were addresses by Dr. Ralph T. Overman, Special Training Division, Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, on "Where Goes the Atom?" and by Duke Vice-President Gross, who is president of the Institute of Nuclear Studies, on "The Role of Science in a Changing World."

The faculty consisted principally of Duke professors, with the addition of several specialists from industrial organizations and a member of the teaching staff of Albemarle High School, Mr. R. C. Hatley, whose students made much of the laboratory equipment displayed. The supervisory committee of the Conference consisted of Professors Anderson; David W. Carpenter, physics; Henry S. Roberts, zoology; and John H. Saylor, chemistry; Dr. Paul H. Clyde, director of the Duke Summer Session; and Henry A. Shannon, of the Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, N. C.

Math Teachers Meet for 11th Conference

The Mathematics Teachers Institute has become a hardy perennial on the Duke campus. During the past ten years more than 1,000 teachers from 37 states and many from Canada have used the institute for catching up on the previous year's developments in this vast field. The 11th session was held August 7-17 under the direction of W. W. Rankin, professor of mathematics, with the general theme "Mathematics at Work."

A $12 registration fee admitted the registrants to an extensive and highly elaborated program of lecture-discussions, study groups, symposia and dinner meetings. More than a score of specialists from industry and the educational world gave talks on which the daily meetings were based, or addressed the formal evening sessions.

Four Duke Men Meet In Japan

Far East Reunion Occurs on Shipboard

Recently four Duke alumni stood together for a brief leave-taking on a dock in Yokosuka, Japan, near the end of a gangway leading to the main deck of the USS Mt. McKinley, of which they were all officers. One of them, Lt. (j.g.) B. C. Allen, Jr., '45; was about to begin his return trip to the States, carrying orders to report to the Pacific Fleet Amphibious Force at Coronado, Calif., for duty. Seeing him off were Lts. (j.g.) Robert E. Cook, '45, of Chicago, Ill.; Walter L. Thompson, III, '46, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; and Clarence J. Brown, Jr., '47, of Blanchester, Ohio. The latter arrived aboard the USS Mt. McKinley the day before as Lt. Allen's replacement.

Lt. Allen has been in the Far East since September of last year, when he was ordered to return to active duty in the Naval Reserve. As an officer of the Mt. McKinley he participated in the assault landings at Pohang, Inehon and Wonsan and the redeployment of U.N. forces from Hungnam, highlights of the Navy's role in the Korean campaign.

During these actions he was assistant legal officer and division officer on the staff of Rear Admiral James H. Doyle, Commander Amphibious Group One, and Vice Admiral Ingolf N. Kiland, Commander Amphibious Force, Pacific Fleet.

Lt. Allen received his NROTC training and B.S. degree at Duke and his LL.B. degree from Washington and Lee University. At Duke he was a member of Sigma Nu.

During World War II he was legal assistance officer at the Naval Operating Base at Samar, P. I., and assistant watch and division officer on the destroyer USS Dane.

Before returning to active duty in the Navy he was practicing law in Wilson, N. C.

His replacement, Lt. Brown, is a graduate in economics. He received his reserve commission at Duke and attended Harvard Business School for an M.B.A. degree. At Duke he was president of Phi Kappa Sigma, president of the Interfraternity Council, a member of the Men's Student Government and Omicron Delta Kappa.

Before volunteering for active duty shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea he was editor of the Blanchester Star-Republican. He was assigned to the staff of Commander Amphibious Force, Pacific Fleet, as assistant division officer and assistant public information officer, and recently was sent to the Far East as Lt. Allen's relief.

Lt. Thompson, after receiving NROTC training and taking several semesters of academic work at Duke, entered the Navy and served with an amphibious beachmaster group. At the end of World War II he resumed his studies at the University of Pittsburgh, then worked for a

Dean McClain Will Serve As Defense Consultant

Dr. Joseph L. McClain, who next month will complete his first year of service as dean of the Duke Law School, has been named a legal consultant in the U. S. Department of Defense, and will be attached to the office of Dan Edwards, '35, ex-mayor of Durham, who is now assistant secretary of defense.

Dr. McClain expects to find it possible to integrate his new duties in the Defense Department with his work at the Law School, so that his deanship will continue uninterrupted. His work will involve solving special legal problems that arise in connection with Defense Department activities.

From 1942 to 1945 Dr. McClain was vice-president and general counsel to the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis and in 1945 was named general counsel to the Wabash Railroad Company.

On the gangway leading to the main deck of the U.S.S. Mt. McKinley from a dock in Yokosuka, Japan, three Duke alumni say goodbye to a fourth who is homeward-bound. They are, left to right: Lts. (j.g.) Robert E. Cook, '45, Walter L. Thompson, III, '46, Clarence J. Brown, Jr., '47, and B. C. Allen, Jr., '45.

Pittsburgh advertising agency. He volunteered to return to active duty a year ago and is now first division officer of the Mt. McKinley.

Lt. Cook is a combat information officer with the Pacific Fleet. After naval officer training at Duke he served aboard the aircraft carrier USS Princeton during World War II.

WAF Lieutenant

The varied interests and talents of WAF Lt. Virginia L. Sweet, '41, photographed as she attended a recent training course for reserve officers at Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., can be inferred from her membership in several aeronautical associations, both civilian and military, and such organizations as the Schenectady (N. Y.) Light Opera and the Duke Symphony Orchestra. A pioneer member of the Women's Army Service Pilots during World War II, she is now a flight instructor, commercial pilot and a ground school instructor, being "checked out" on 26 types of military aircraft and holding a pilot's rating on the more common types of civilian ships. In 1949 she won the Amelia Earhart Memorial Scholarship for women flyers. At present she is adjutant of the 9073rd Voluntary Air Reserve Training Unit in Schenectady, her home town, in which capacity she attended the training course.

Alumni Activities

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Duke University Alumni Association of Greater Pittsburgh is planning an open house at the University Club, 123 University Place, the day of the Duke-Pittsburgh football game to be played in that city on September 29. The open house will last from 11:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

A block of 200 seats at $3.50 each has been reserved on the 45- and 50-yard line for Duke alumni, so that there will be an organized cheering section. These tickets are available at the Pittsburgh Duke Alumni Office (office of Don Anderson, '41), 436 Diamond Street, Pittsburgh 19, Pa., telephone ATLantic 18456. Alumni from Eastern Ohio and West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania may be able to procure tickets there.

Mecklenburg County

Duke alumni from Charlotte and Mecklenburg County have been holding monthly meetings on the first Thursday of every month at one o'clock at Thackers. Attendance is constantly growing. At the September 6 meeting, Charlton C. Jernigan, '25, A.M. '26, Ph.D. '35, recently elected president of Queens College in Charlotte, will speak on the contributions in the field of education made by Duke alumni.

Lake Junaluska

Duke University alumni and friends from throughout North Carolina assembled at Lake Junaluska on August 11 for the annual observance of "Duke Night" at the Methodist Assembly grounds.

Principal speaker for the occasion was Dr. James Cannon, III, dean of the Duke Divinity School and Ivey Professor of history of religion and missions. Dr. Mason Crum, a member of the Duke Divinity School faculty and a Junaluska summer resident, presided. Greetings from the University were brought by Charles A. Dukes, director of Alumni Affairs.

Dr. W. D. Davies, professor of Biblical Theology at Duke, spoke to the gathering during the morning, and delivered the afternoon sermon on Sunday, August 12. A native of Wales, Dr. Davies previously taught at Cambridge University and other English schools.

Coronation of the 1951 "Queen of Junaluska" was held the night of August 18, when Barbara Russell of Greenville, N. C., a rising sophomore at Duke University, was crowned. She was elected by summer residents and visitors.

Ed Fike, '41, On Leave To Defense Department

Edward L. Fike, '41, Director of the University's Bureau of Public Information since 1948, has been given a leave of absence to accept an appointment as administrative assistant to Assistant Secretary of Defense Dan K. Edwards, '35.

EDWARD L. FIKE, '41

In announcing Mr. Fike's appointment, Vice-President Charles E. Jordan commented: "Under the direction of Mr. Fike, the Bureau of Public Information has made remarkable progress. We shall feel the loss of his services to the University but are glad we can make him available for the important assignment to which he has been called."

A native of Ahoskie, N. C., Mr. Fike enlisted in the Navy in 1941 and was separated in 1946 as a lieutenant. With John M. Dozier, '41, who is now assistant secretary of the University, he was co-publisher of the Nelsonville (Ohio) Tribune for two years prior to returning to Duke.

Earl W. Porter has been appointed Acting Director of the Bureau. A graduate of the University of Missouri and holder of a degree in journalism, Mr. Porter has been assistant director since 1949. He is thoroughly familiar with the workings of the news service and, as Dr. Jordan stated, Duke is fortunate to have him available to fill the position.

On Active Duty

Lanier W. Pratt, A.M. '38, an instructor in Romance Languages at Duke, this month assumed his new duties as a lieutenant commander in the United States Naval Reserve. He is executive officer of the U.S.S. Healy, a destroyer-mine sweeper reactivated from the "mothball" fleet at the Naval Base in Charleston, S. C.

Prior to his recent recall, Lt. Comdr. Pratt was commanding officer of Organized Reserve Division 6-22 in Durham.

Lt. Comdr. Pratt, whose home has been at 2007 Ruffin Street, Durham, has been a member of the language faculty at Duke since 1938. His undergraduate de-

Fred W. Whitener, '51, new assistant to the Director of Alumni Affairs (left), will also be the advertising manager of the REGISTER. Roger L. Marshall, '42 (right), is the publication's new editor.

New Register Editor Is Named

New Addition to Alumni Department Staff Also Announced

Roger L. Marshall, '42, alumni editor and assistant to the Director of Alumni Affairs, has been named editor of the ALUMNI REGISTER.

Mr. Marshall joined the staff of the alumni department in October 1947, and since that time he has served as the REGISTER's managing editor. He will continue as assistant to the director, in addition to his new duties with the magazine.

A native of Winston-Salem, N. C., he enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps upon being graduated from Duke. In 1946 he was separated as a first lieutenant and currently holds the rank of captain in the Marine Corps Reserve. Before coming to Duke Mr. Marshall was on the news staffs of the Elkin (N. C.) Tribune and the Winston-Salem Journal.

He is married to the former Betty Brietz of Winston-Salem and has twin daughters age six.

Fred W. Whitener, '51, has been named assistant to the Director of Alumni Affairs and will assume the duties formerly performed by Thomas D. Donegan, A.M. '51, who has been recalled to active duty in the U. S. Army.

Mr. Whitener is a native of Shelby, N. C. He entered Duke in 1942 but left school after one year to enlist in the U. S. Navy. After four years in service, during which he served aboard an LST in the Pacific as a pharmacist's mate first class, he re-entered Duke to major in zoology and economics.

From 1947 to 1951 he led the Duke Ambassadors, the University dance band, and played with the University concert band. An accomplished musician, he is listed in "Who Is Who in Music."

Mr. Whitener, who will coordinate the activities of local associations, is married to the former Miss Brooks Dennis of Shelby.

gree was earned at Davidson College. In 1942 his teaching was interrupted by his first tour of active duty in the Naval Reserve. Trained in communications, he served in that capacity on the destroyer escort U.S.S. Hubbard, and later became her executive officer. His ship, with three others, formed the first hunter-killer group to operate in the Atlantic alone without air support.

Math Models Bring Alumna Recognition

Dr. Ruth Stokes, of the Syracuse University faculty, who received a Ph.D. degree in Mathematics at Duke in 1931 and was a member of the Duke Mathematics Department during her years of graduate work and for two years thereafter, is described as a "Model Mathematician" in a feature article of a recent issue of the Syracuse University Alumni News. The title is a gentle play on words; Dr. Stokes has an outstanding collection of mathematical models.

The models are not the flesh and blood kind. They are contrivances of wood, paper, string and assorted materials worked into designs which illustrate mathematics principles. A large structure of small sticks demonstrates the binomial theorem; one model shows how a curved surface can be generated from straight lines; a box with buckshot which slips down through nails in a board into a number of boxes bears out the theory of the normal variation curve. Cones, parabolas and models of indescribable complication stand on her shelves. She does not make them; she just collects them.

The veteran mathematician is working on two forthcoming books, "The History and Construction of Mathematical Models and Their Use in Teaching" and a work on spherical trigonometry. She also edits the Phi Mu Epsilon Journal, official publications of the mathematics honorary, and recently was elected a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Nurse Receives Award

Mary Ann Menefee, R.N. '51, of Luray, Va., is the recipient of this year's Moseley Award, which is presented each year to the senior nurse who has done the most outstanding work in nursing arts during her entire college career.

The award, which is twenty-five dollars, is given by Matilda Holleman Moseley (Mrs. Vince), '31, R.N. '31, B.S.N. '36, of Charleston, S. C.

Rear Admiral Ralph Earle, commandant of the Duke N.R.O.T.C. unit, has left Duke for reassignment to the Naval War College, Newport, R. I. The departure of the popular officer caused deep regret on the campus, where he has been stationed since 1949. Recent promotion to his present rank, however, profoundly pleased his many friends at the University. Admiral Earle, who commanded a destroyer at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and who engaged in many Pacific battles during World War II, graduated from Annapolis in 1922. Both his father and his grandfather were admirals and his daughter Audrey, a rising sophomore at Duke, is a seaman in the WAVE.

Distant Campaigner

An outstanding campaigner for the University's Development Program is Frank A. Thacker, '49. Working thousands of miles from the campus, he has reported pledges totaling several hundred dollars and is still at work on other prospects, one of whom he is trailing through Europe via the mails.

Frank, whose address is Apartado 889, Creole Petroleum Corporation, Caracas, Venezuela, South America, is an accountant. He has been living in Venezuela about a year. Immediately upon his graduation he started work as an accountant for the Carter Oil Company, in Tulsa, Okla., an affiliate of the Creole Petroleum Corporation.

During his years at Duke, Frank received scholastic recognition by being awarded a National Methodist Scholarship for three years. As a freshman he received the scholarship awarded by Duke alumni of High Point, N. C., his home. He became publicity director, and vice-president of Alpha Kappa Psi, professional commerce fraternity, and was also a dormitory steward for the Methodist Student Fellowship on the Duke campus.

Blue Devils Will Depend on Speedy Backs

With the September 1 Fall training start around the corner, football talk is on the uprise around Duke University.

A new head coach, a new formation, new assistant coaches, new opponents and general curiosity give rise to most of the talk.

Approximately 75 husky candidates are expected to report to new head Coach William D. Murray on September 1 and begin workouts for a tough Fall campaign. New teams on the 10-game schedule of the Duke team include the University of Virginia and William and Mary.

The Duke team this year is expected to look much different from the one that cracked a respectable 7-3 record last season. Gone is the passing combination of Billy Cox to Mike Souchak, Ceep Youmans and Tom Powers. In its place is expected to be a lightning T formation attack with speedy halfbacks Piney Field, Charlie Smith and Gerald Mazingo and block-busting fullbacks Jack Kistler and Conrad Moon leading the way. The line will be built around outstanding ends Blaine Earon and Jim Gibson and tackle James "Tank" Lawrence. Gibson will captain the 1951 aggregation.

Murray, a Duke graduate, class of '31, recently announced the signing of two new coaches to help him with the tutoring. They were Marty Pierson, freshman coach at the University of Delaware, and Tom O'Boyle, former Tulane All-America guard who had been line coach at Kansas State.

Majority of the early work by the Blue Devils was expected to be directed to bolstering the team's defensive attack. Not much attention was given this phase in Spring training and as a result, the team looked green in this department in the Spring practice games.

HOME COMING

Homecoming Day, 1951, will be Saturday, October 27, when Duke's Blue Devils collide with Virginia's strong Cavaliers in Duke Stadium. While the program for the week end has not yet been announced, it will probably begin Friday night and continue through Sunday afternoon. The annual barbecue luncheon on Saturday will be a highlight. Homecoming will provide a good occasion for alumni to gather to see Coach Murray's Model T in action and to observe the progress of recent months on the campus.

Besides the work with the defense, much time must be devoted to the polishing of the new T formation introduced to the Devils this Spring. The biggest offensive problem will be that of developing a first line quarterback. Joe Self, a senior from Greensboro, N. C., led the candidates this Spring, but Jerry Barger, an All-State and All-Southern freshman from Salisbury, N. C., shows much promise. Another top-notch candidate is Glenn Wild, a short senior from Pittsburgh, Pa. Wild is probably the best passer of the three, but his lack of height (he's five feet, eight) hinders his chances.

At other offensive positions, here's the way the Duke team stacks up:

END—Blaine Earon and Jim Gibson, two capable defensive veterans, may be given a chance to play offensive ball. Walter Smith, Gene Brooks, Bill Keziah and A. B. Pearson are others who will play a great deal. Mike Souchak and Ceep Youmans, the regular offensive ends of last year, are gone.

TACKLE—Jim Logan, regular offensive tackle of last year, is back, but Jim Young, Bob Anderson and Dan Adams, all offensive lettermen, are gone. "Tank" Lawrence, defensive bulwark of last year, may be used on offense. Capable newcomers are Ed "Country" Meadows and Lewis Berry. Both are up from the freshman squad.

GUARD—This is one of the weakest spots on the team. Bob Deyton, regular offensive guard last year, graduated. Carl James and Don Knotts, both experienced, return. Top candidates include Carson Leach and Truett Grant, both members of last year's team. Two backs, John Carey and Bob Berger, have been shifted to guard. Outstanding newcomers include sophs Bobby Burrows and Fred Fuller.

CENTER—Although last year's starter is gone, this position appears to be well-manned. Jim Ed Gibson was the starter last year, but it's said his understudy, Lou Tepe, is as good. A promising freshman at this position is Johnny Palmer, All-Stater from Lynchburg, Va. Other promising players include husky Ray Green and Gene Million.

BACKS—The competition is keen at all backfield posts. The quarterback post is up for grabs between Self, Wild and Barger, with Charlie Smith, Piney Field and Gerald Mazingo leading the halfbacks. Other promising halfbacks are Red Smith, a lefthander all the way, and George Grune, the regular safetyman last season. Field is probably the fastest back in the nation, having been timed in the 100-yard dash at 9.6 seconds as a member of the Duke cinder crew this Spring. The Blue Devils' fullback this season will be a hard-runner whether Jack Kistler or Conrad Moon wins the berth. Both are huskies and sophomores. Kistler shone in the Spring games and Moon showed his stuff in drills before going out in favor of a bad leg.

Defensively, the Duke outfit appears a little more experienced, although like the offensive crew, it appears weak in the center of the line.

Sports

Back from last year's defensive outfit are ends Earon and Gibson, as good as can be found in Southern football; tackle "Tank" Lawrence; guard Carson Leach; linebackers John Carey, Ray Green and Bill Keziab; halfbacks Bob Bickel, Billy Lea and Dick Sommers; and safetyman George Grune.

Freshman will be able to play varsity football in the Southern Conference this Autumn, but few are expected to help the Blue Devils. The big handicap in this respect is the time element. With the T formation being installed, the Blue Devils must devote the majority of their time polishing up the attack since the first game will be played three weeks after the start of Fall training. That opener brings the Blue Devils against tough South Carolina at Columbia, S. C., September 22.

The only freshmen definitely counted on are center Johnny Palmer and quarterback Jerry Barger, both of whom entered school in February and worked with the team in Spring training.

Letter

hour, the price going a little up on one side and down on the other, until a fair price (?) is reached. A sure-fire way to get what you want at almost any price, however, is to be the first customer of the day. Arab superstition rules that a day of bad luck will follow if the first customer does not make a purchase.

The country Arabs are quite different, and it is there that one gets the impression of living in Biblical times. The people are more religious, and, I believe, more honest. They still live in straw huts which look like hay-stacks and fence in their little villages with large cactus plants. They ride donkeys and camels, the women do all the heavy work, and they dip water from wells exactly as did the Samaritan women whom Christ met. They plow often with an ox and a camel hitched together, and threshing is performed by having blindfolded horses gallop round and round on a pile of wheat! On any summer day, one can see "the chaff which the wind driveth away."

We arrived in Rabat, the capital city, in the midst of the rainy season, when every day was chilly and damp. This, however, did not detract from the attraction of that little city. We loved it, and I think almost everyone wishes we had stayed there instead of moving to Casablanca in April. There was no real spring, just a short period during which everything was wonderfully green and when great fields of vari-colored wild flowers could be seen everywhere in the country. Now summer is here, meaning no rain at all until rather late in the fall, and all the land is turning reddish-brown. It has not been unbearably hot yet, which the residents of long-standing say is rather unusual, except for three days when the sirocco winds blew in from the desert.

In the brief space of a letter such as this I cannot possibly describe all the wonders of Morocco and how much my husband and I enjoy our life and work here. Nevertheless, I wanted you to know that on the edge of the "Dark Continent," there are at least three of us who occasionally raise a toast to the memory of our Alma Mater, although we don't really have time to get too homesick!

WILLIAM M. GIBSON, A.M. '30, Ph.D. '36

William M. Gibson, A.M. '30, Ph.D. '36, a political scientist with the Central Intelligence Agency and former Duke University professor, died July 6 of a heart attack. A full military funeral was held in Arlington National Cemetery. Duke faculty members who attended the funeral were Associate Professor Louise Hall, Associate Professor William M. Blackburn, and Associate Professor and Mrs. Lewis Patton.

A graduate of the University of Richmond, Dr. Gibson also did graduate work at Harvard University. He taught political science at Duke from 1934 to 1942, when he entered the Navy as a lieutenant commander. He did intelligence work for the Navy at San Diego, and later returned to teaching at Duke. He had been with the Central Intelligence Agency in Washington, D. C., since 1947, when he was called there to perform special services. Although he moved his home to Washington, Dr. Gibson always remained devoted to Duke.

Surviving are his widow, Orene, of Sumner, Md., and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar M. Gibson of Baltimore, Md.

EMORY H. HONEYCUTT, '44

Dr. Emory H. Honeycutt, '44, died at the home of his parents in Clinton, N. C., on July 13, following several months of illness.

Funeral services were held from the Clinton Methodist Church and burial was in the Clinton Cemetery.

At Duke, Emory was president of the senior class and a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. He was graduated from the Medical College of Virginia in 1950 and served his internship in the Jackson Memorial Hospital, Miami, Fla. During World War II, Emory saw two years' service in the Pacific Theater as a Naval Lieutenant Junior Grade.

Surviving are the wife, Peggy Rea Honeycutt; a son, Stephen Rea Honeycutt; the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Furman J. Honeycutt; and a brother, James Furman Honeycutt, '43, all of Clinton.

Duke University officially begins its academic year when the Stars and Stripes are raised skyward amid traditional ceremony. This year the flag-raising took place on September 19 on West Campus and a day earlier on East. President Edens, back to camera, welcomes students.

Department of Alumni Affairs

THE DIRECTOR'S SCRATCH PAD

By the time this issue of the REGISTER reaches you, the leaves will have already begun to turn on the trees and there will be a feeling of fall in the air.

The Development Campaign is underway and the reports from the areas are coming in fast. Each one shows the results of hard work and ingenuity on the part of many alumni. New areas, such as Newark, N. J.; Baltimore, Md.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Jacksonville, Miami, Tampa, and St. Petersburg, Fla.; and Asheville, N. C., are being organized. Many of the old areas are being recanvassed with every indication that we should reach our goal of $8,650,000 by December 31.

The Alumni Office appreciates the many visits from alumni who came to Durham in the fall to enter sons and daughters in Duke.

The Homecoming game is between Duke and the University of Virginia on October 27. The alumni in New York, Newark, and the Philadelphia areas are discussing the possibility of chartering a railway car so that they may attend the Homecoming game in a group. This seems like a very good idea. We hope alumni in other areas will do the same.

There are many changes taking place on the campus. We suggest, when you return for your next visit, that you take time to see some of these changes; namely, the Ordnance Division which has taken quarters in the Hanes home; the foundation hole that is being dug for a new building next to the old Physics Building, now Social Science Building; the Graduate Dormitory beyond the Medical School on Hospital Drive; and the Nurses Home being made possible through the generosity of the late Dr. Fred M. Hanes and Mrs. Hanes.

A new pictorial folder has just come off the press. Drop us a line if you would like a copy. We have already received a number of requests and we should be glad to have others.

Remember if you have constructive criticisms, send them to us. We are anxious to improve our program in every way possible.

Do You Remember

10 years ago

For the first time since 1918, servicemen returned to the campus in the form of 110 freshmen USNROTC students.

Duke started its football season by heating Wake Forest 43-13!

An innovation of the football season was the addition of two girls, Toni Salley and Vivien Driver, as cheerleaders. The unanimous decision to accept girl cheerleaders made the second time they had appeared at Duke. In 1935 two girls had helped lead cheers during one game, and were henceforth barred from such "unlady-like" activities. Oh, yes Word Clark was head cheerleader.

A Chronicle reporter made a survey, finding women's skirts shorter than ever (even as high as 18 inches!)

25 years ago

The largest freshman class up to that time entered the University. They came 650 strong.

Duke Blue Devils slaughtered Guilford College in the first game of the season, 30-0.

Three students entered Duke from Illinois, having learned of the University from a student working in Chicago during the summer. Students from the midwestern states seemed to be a rarity in that day.

The U.W.C.A. children's party to welcome the freshmen was a huge success. Everyone came dressed like a kindergartner, and ring-around-the-rosy and other games made a hilarious evening.

50 years ago

Trinity College consisted of 20 buildings; 10 were residences and 10 were class buildings.

A brand new library, the largest college library in the state, was under construction.

The teaching staff consisted of 11 professors, three adjunct professors, one instructor, one lecturer, three assistants and a director of the gymnasium, making 23 in all. Some of the more popular ones were Professor Flowers, Dr. Mimms, and Dr. Bassett.

Enrollment at that time was less than 200 students, only 32 of whom were women.

Valdez, Alaska

After having arrived at this mission parish just about a week ago, I thought I might sit down and let you all know that you have more alumni in Alaska—or are we the first ones? I use "we" because the Mrs. audited a semester's worth of courses in the Divinity School while I was struggling through my B.D. aside from working a year in the library—so it's "our" school.

The enclosed postals will give you an idea of the physical facilities here but they do not speak to the spiritual needs at all. Valdez, a town of about 600 souls, is much the same as any boom town during the westward movement of our own U.S. beyond the Mississippi River. All the virtues and vices are to be found that one found in those days—and then some. Most of the settlers are content to live outside the Church and also without God—or at least so they try until some catastrophic experience rocks them to their very hones, at which time some "get religion" in a very emotional way. There is so very much to be done here that the task itself tires one when thinking about it.

Our family is replacing a priest who has been here (The Church of the Epiphany) in Alaska for 24 years and is loved by everyone. He is a celibate and a very consecrated Christian. Filling his hoots will be a job in itself. We also serve St. Georges, Cordova, some ninety miles as the crow flies—and this mission is served via air. We find that all of Alaska is air-minded.

All our friends at Duke have a standing invitation to pay us a visit—we'll house and feed you once you get here!

It is most interesting to learn of the inspiring developments which have been planned for Duke University.

I understand that sterling is not readily convertible into U.S. dollars but I do send my best wishes for your plans, and also my new address.

(An alumnus recently brought a B.O.S. key, which he had found, to the Alumni Office. The only identification was the initials of J.R.T. and the class of 1937 engraved on it. By checking initials of all alumni of the class of '37, the office was able to locate the owner.)

Thank you very much for contacting me regarding the found B.O.S. key. I know that mine was lost some years ago and probably the one you have belonged to me. I was in the class of 1937 and my initials are J.R.T. I don't know whether there were any other J.R.T.'s in the class or not.

You are to be congratulated on your detective work in locating the loser in this case. This is a piece of public relations work which is a credit to the Duke Alumni Office.

HIGH POINT, N. C.

A New Class

September fever, a recurrent malady that strikes at university and college campuses when autumn mists arise, has Duke firmly in its grip.

Throughout the middle weeks of the month, struggling lines of freshmen, their skulls adorned by gleaming new "dinks," wound through the corridors of the University's buildings in search of the direction essential to a new career. Deans labored heroically to keep their heads above the inundation and at the same time handle each of the new arrivals as a distinct individual whose problems were unique.

The vanguard of upperclassmen, on hand to welcome and orient their greener colleagues, was more recently followed by sophomores, juniors, and seniors returning to settle into another year of lectures, labs, and examinations.

This September fever, while an epidemic in the truest sense, is nonetheless a pleasantly invigorating disease, and one from which victims recover in short order with refreshed perspectives and strengthened purposes. Its cause is its cure—an injection of new youth.

The 1951-52 academic year begins with an anticipated small decline in enrollment—a realized fact. Preliminary estimates have placed the number of students at Duke at 4,800, including 3,510 men and 1,390 women on both graduate and undergraduate levels. This is a drop of about four per cent over September of last year—a percentage considerably less than the national average. Undergraduate students total approximately 3,200.

Chief cause for the decline is the unsettled situation on the international front and the draft, reflected by the fact that there has been no drop at all among women, only among men. These factors have affected upperclassmen more than entering freshmen. The approximately 900 entering students represent only a small drop over last year.

For the past few years Duke has strained its facilities to the utmost to accommodate unprecedented numbers of young men and women seeking higher education. Eventual stabilization of enrollment will probably leave the University with a student body totalling around 5,000. Stabilization, however, is expected to be a tardy arrival as long as 38th parallel nationalized oil industries, and kidnapped correspondents continue to affect the picture.

New students being sworn in to the United States Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps unit on the Duke campus by commanding officer Captain John M. Ocker and Lieutenant Commander Robert B. Harrell in the indoor stadium.

Arrives—A New Year Begins

The small decrease in the student body has had practically no effect on one of Duke's most serious problems, that of dormitory space. The average age of college students is now younger, with war veterans passing from the scene. Many G.I.'s were married and lived off-campus with their families. Their replacements are single and require dormitory living quarters.

The new Graduate Living Center, being pushed to completion, will solve the problem, however, by releasing Few Quadrangle to undergraduate men.

The Faculty Intact

Duke begins the new year with a faculty totalling 614 members. There has been no move to decrease the faculty because: (1) The University has adopted a policy of avoiding dispersal of faculties during the present emergency, and (2) the fall enrollment does not warrant it. All regular faculty members are being retained and replacements made as needed.

The ratio of students to teachers is slightly less than eight to one, one of the lowest ratios in the United States and one that amply protects the University's tradition of giving every student a maximum of personal attention, both in and out of classrooms.

The course offerings of the University remain the same as last year, unaffected by enrollment figures.

A possible sign of the times, however, is the high increase in military training program enrollment. Last year, in the Navy R.O.T.C. and Air Force R.O.T.C. programs there was a total of 659 students. This year begins with 1,055 midshipmen and cadets on the campus.

Welcome, Class of 1955

Orientation Week for freshmen began Thursday, Sept. 13. Special assemblies, open houses, and recreational events enabled new students to become acquainted with the University and its men and women. Serious business was undertaken, as well, and almost immediately. A stiff round of placement tests and physical examinations kept freshmen busy and helped fit them into suitable niches, from which they can begin, in stable surroundings, to absorb the offerings of the faculty.

The freshmen are an impressive crop. Youngsters who have measured up to Duke's high entrance standards, members of the class of 1955 come from virtually every one of the 48 states and from a number of foreign countries.

Their entrance into the University community, and their assimilation into campus life, is being greatly facilitated by the splendid work of the Y.M.C.A., which for years has made a practice of greeting new students each September and making them feel at home.

The familiar signs, "Ask a Y man," are posted on trees and in corridors throughout the campus. The "Y's" Handbook has been distributed to the new class, and friendly upperclassmen of the organization are constantly on hand to answer questions that range from "Where do we buy hooks?" to "Can I keep my airedale in the dorm?"

Duke and Durham boast of one of the finest town-and-gown relationships anywhere in the U. S. Evidence of this came early to the class of '55.

Mayor E. J. Evans extended the city's official welcome in letters to freshmen early in September. On Monday, Sept. 17, the third annual Duke Freshman Day was observed under the auspices of Durham merchants. Information booths downtown and favors distributed by some stores characterized the city's hospitable efforts to familiarize freshmen with their new home.

Everyone cooperated in this welcoming endeavor but the perpetually stubborn weather man. After a summer in which rain was as scarce as live crossopterygies, the clouds accumulated overhead to emit a dull gray light and a fine drizzle.

It was not, however, a drizzle penetrative enough to dampen spirits nor subdue activity, and the new school year has been launched in a manner to delight the most cynical professor and the most bewildered freshman.

HOMECOMING

Duke's annual Homecoming Day will take place October 27 when the Blue Devils meet Virginia in Duke Stadium. Traditional and special events have been planned for the week end. The College of Engineering alumni will hold their Homecoming on the same day with a meeting in the Engineering Building for alumni and a coffee hour for the wives at 10:30 a.m.

Lincoln David Kraeuter, West Orange, N. J., senior engineer and NROTC midshipman, raises the flag which symbolizes the official opening of school on East Campus. Watching the ceremony are Alice Youmans, Miami, Fla., president of the women's senior class, and President Hollis Edens.

Development Campaign Is in Homestretch

The most triumphant chapter in the history of Duke's alumni organizations—that is the story of the Duke University Development Campaign as it enters its final phase this month.

Through the energetic and devoted activity of the University's former students in all parts of the country, and even in foreign lands, the Campaign's immediate goal of $8,650,000 has been whittled down to where a comparatively few more dollars will mean complete and unqualified success.

The final months of the program begin with less than $1,000,000 remaining to be raised. More than $7,680,000 is now a matter of record, and Duke's program of "Brains, Books, and Bricks" is well underway. The dollars that have been contributed have been put to work. The needs that President Edens called "urgent and necessary" are being met as funds become available, and a greater Duke equipped to give greater service is becoming a reality.

But a Job Remains

Although the campaign is nearing its goal, there is still a great deal to be done. This was clearly brought out on September 9 when Campaign leaders from throughout North Carolina and neighboring states met on the campus to formally launch the drive's final phase.

The meeting, held in the ballroom of the West Campus Union, was presided over by Kenneth M. Brim, '20, of Greensboro, N. C., immediate past chairman of the National Council and chairman of the Guilford County campaign. President Edens spoke on the Development Program's progress, what it was doing for the University, and how essential it is that the drive be pushed forward to a successful conclusion.

The President pointed out that of the $3,000,000 the University has been offered on a contingent basis, approximately $1,000,000 must still be raised to complete the matching fund. This $3,000,000, half of which was tendered by the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation and half by an anonymous donor, is included in the announced total of the Campaign's progress.

The remaining months of the drive, President Edens reminded campaign leaders, are doubly important. The amount that must be raised to reach the goal is also the amount that must be raised to match the contingent gifts.

"This means," he added, "that for every dollar that Duke receives from alumni and friends between now and December 31, another dollar will be made available through this matching arrangement. In other words, every pledge that an alumnus makes automatically doubles itself when the University receives it."

Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, of Hookerton, N. C., chairman of the National Council this year, called for every alumnus and alumna who has not yet participated in the Campaign to respond to calls within the next few weeks, as they are made in personal canvasses and through mailings from headquarters.

"This is the way," he said, "to put this drive over the top—to get every one of us to give—and to give as much as possible—before the final day arrives."

Signs of Progress

Signs of the Development Campaign's progress are evident all over the campus this fall. Striking the observer's eye most forcefully are the new buildings that are moving along toward completion.

The Graduate Living Center, which will relieve the critical shortage of dormitory space, has assumed a shell of brick and stone, and work on finishing the interior will soon begin.

The Classroom and Administration Building, right now represented by a deep hole and mountains of dirt, is expected to move skyward in the near future. Other buildings—the new nurses' home and the wing for the atomic reactor on the Physics Building—add to the general air of progress, although not a direct part of the Development Campaign.

The President has called attention to other results, while not so apparent, that reach into the heart of the University. New funds are becoming available for scholarships, fellowships, professorships, and research and teaching.

Dr. Edens, at the September 9 meeting, said that while the "Bricks" of the program were listed last in the order of things to be done, current conditions regarding building and prospective shortages dictated that work be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible on these essential projects. He added that this is being done in confidence that funds for the "Brains and Books" part of the program will be forthcoming. To date, this confidence has been admirably justified.

Campaign Plans

The fall campaign, officially launched by the campus meeting, is getting underway with a mailing to all alumni. The bulletin, already mailed, contains messages from President Edens and from the National Chairman, Benjamin F. Few, '14, A.M. '16. Also included is a list of contributors between May 10 and August 15 and a summary of plans for the remaining weeks of the Campaign.

Local campaigns will be conducted in all areas of the country where Duke alumni live in comparatively large numbers and where campaigns were not started last year. These include about 30 major North Carolina counties and a number of large cities in other states most of which are on the Eastern Seaboard.

City campaigns now moving ahead include Philadelphia, Pa.; Baltimore, Md.; Tampa, St. Petersburg, Miami, and Jacksonville, Fla. Northern New Jersey, with Newark as the center, is another campaign region, as is Western North Carolina, with Asheville as its center.

Campaign leaders in these regions are

In Philadelphia: General chairman Wayne Ambler, '38; initial gifts chairman Bruce H. Greenfield, '38; general canvass chairman, Joseph L. Loughran, '47. Kick-off meeting is scheduled for October 16.

In Baltimore: General chairman Thomas A. Aldridge, '26; vice chairman William B. Sommerville, '36; initial gifts chairman, C. Bertram Hoffberger, '43; general canvass chairman, H. Carl Garthe, '47, with Thomas C. Wolff, '47, as co-chairman. Kick-off is scheduled for October 3 in the Belvedere Hotel.

In Tampa: General chairman, Wray D. Storey, M.D. '39; initial gifts chairman, Wesley W. Wilson, M.D. '37; and general canvass chairman, Winston H. Palmer, '48.

In St. Petersburg: General Chairman Robert L. Allen, Jr., '47; initial gifts chairman, Charles K. Donegan, '41, M.D. '44; and general canvass chairman, Mrs. John P. Wallace, '48.

A joint kick-off meeting for Tampa and St. Petersburg took place on September 29.

In Miami: General chairman, Dr. Harold K. Terry, '36; initial gifts chairman, Henry H. Russell, Jr., '40; and general canvass chairman, James L. Davis, '45. Kick-off is scheduled for October 17.

In Jacksonville: General chairman, William M. Courtney, '38; initial gifts chairman, Laurence F. Lee, Jr., '49; and general canvass chairman, Dr. Joe A. J. Farrington, '34. Kick-off is scheduled for November 15.

In Northern New Jersey: General chairman is Edward A. Sargent, '42; vice chairman is G. Fred Hockenjos, '43; initial gifts chairman is Lyman H. Bishop, '28; and general canvass chairman is George E. Griscom II, '36. The Northern New Jersey kick-off took place on September 17.

Kick-off meeting for Western North Carolina, where Don S. Elias, '08, is chairman, is scheduled for October 8 at the George Vanderbilt Hotel in Asheville.

Some recently enlisted North Carolina county campaign leaders include: In Alamance County, Dr. L. Everett Spikes, '24, M.Ed. '34, is chairman and Marvin Yount, Jr., '41, is general canvass chairman. In Granville County, Major T. G. Stem, '06, is chairman, Mrs. Oscar D. McFarland, '32, is general canvass chairman, and John A. Myers, '33, is initial gifts chairman.

Goal by Founders Day?

In these and other regions campaigns are rapidly getting underway and early results are good. In a number of other regions, where campaigns were not completed last year, they are being reactivated for clean-up drives.

Campaign leaders everywhere are making an effort to reach their goals by Founders Day, December 11, so that it can then be reported that Duke University's Development Campaign is over the top.

Meanwhile, special mailings are planned for alumni and alumnae in areas where

Among those attending the campus Development Campaign meeting on September 9 were, left to right, N. E. Edgerton, '21, University trustee and chairman of the Wake County campaign; Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, of Hookerton, N. C., chairman of the National Council; President Edens; Kenneth M. Brim, '20, Law '21, chairman of the Guilford County campaign; and Blanche Barringer Brian (Mrs. Earl W.), '22, A.M. '31, general canvass chairman in Wake County.

local campaigns are not practicable by reason of distance or lack of concentrated numbers. Class agents, who served the Loyalty Fund with such splendid results, are assuming the responsibility for classmates in such areas. Their first pleas for gifts will go out in October.

The picture is bright. Success, which rests with the spirit, energy, and generosity of the University's former students, seems virtually assured.

When a new year arrives, the alumni of Duke University will be able to point, with a justifiable boast, to a tremendously important job that has been magnificently accomplished.

Local Meetings of Duke Alumni

Norfolk, Va.

All visiting alumni attending the Duke-V.P.I. game at Norfolk, Va., on October 20 are invited to a buffet dinner at 5:00 p.m. at the Commissioned Officers Club, Norfolk Naval Base. The club is approximately three miles from the stadium at the North end of Hampton Boulevard. Tickets are $3.00 per person, which includes dinner and dancing. Reservations should be made by check, payable to the Norfolk-Portsmouth Chapter of the Duke Alumni Association and mailed to C. W. Perdue, 1053 North Shore Road, Norfolk 5, Va., or A. T. Joyner, Jr., 1416 Hampton Boulevard, Norfolk 7, Va.

Get your order for an evening of entertainment in before October 15.

Memphis, Tenn.

The home of the new president, Dr. Jack Greenfield, '36, was the scene of the fourth annual Duke Club of Memphis picnic recently. Broiled steaks ruled the day and helped to keep interest in the Club's projects fever high.

Several members of the recently graduated class were welcomed and reminded that the club meets monthly at the homes of its various members. Much interest is fostered by having speakers of local and world-wide importance, movies, card parties, and, of course, the annual winter dance.

Other new officers for the coming year are W. H. Heddeshimer, '40, vice-president; Janice Greenfield (Mrs. Jack), secretary-treasurer, and Morton Gubin, '45, corresponding secretary.

Mecklenburg County

Professor W. J. Seeley, of the Department of Electrical Engineering, and David H. Henderson, '35, LL.B. '37, representative of Mecklenburg County in the State Legislature and a Charlotte, N. C., attorney, spoke to the Mecklenburg County Duke Alumni Association on August 2 at the monthly meeting at Thacker's restaurant. Mr. Henderson's subject was "Governmental Dollar Day," the inner workings of the State Legislature at Raleigh. Dr. Seeley explained the new group-donation blood program, which is jointly sponsored by alumni groups and the American Red Cross.

Duke alumni and students were the first in a series of college donors to the Red Cross Blood Center in Charlotte on August 21. Stuart W. Elliott, '50, was chairman of the alumni committee that organized the donations. Ruth Nance, '51, was in charge of contacting students now enrolled at the University, and was assisted by Mabel Ruth Nease, Duke sophomore.

Officers of the association are S. R. Brookshire, '27, president; Walter Canipe, '34, vice-president; Webb Bost, '40, secretary; Guy S. Chesick, '48, treasurer; Mattie Spence Simpson (Mrs. James R.), '26, representative to the Alumnae Council; and Elizabeth Blair, '50, corresponding secretary.

Steel for Leather

Billy Cox, '51, who holds the Blue Devil record for gridiron yardage in a single season, examines the steel helmet that temporarily replaces the more familiar leather one. At the Navy Reserve Officer Candidate School at Treasure Island, San Francisco, Calif., he recently completed a six-week course before scheduled to join the Washington Redskins for a "fling" with pro-football. And "fling" it will be, if he continues to pass in Washington as he did at Duke.

Luncheon in Atlanta

Duke alumni and parents of Duke students are invited to a special pre-game luncheon before the Blue Devils meet the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets in Atlanta on November 3. It will be held from 12 to 1:30 o'clock at the Georgian Terrace (across the street from the Fox Theater.) Honor guests will be President Edens; Charles A. Dukes, director of alumni affairs; Bill Hobbs, president of Coca Cola; and a quartet.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by contacting Kenneth W. McLennan, 4100 Peachtree Road, N.E., Apartment 12 G, Atlanta, Ga., or calling Atlanta, Ch. 1852.

A special section of tickets for the game is being held for alumni and parents of students by H. M. Lewis, business manager, Duke University Athletic Association, Durham, N. C. Persons desiring tickets should get them immediately.

The parking problem for the game will be solved by parking near the Fox Theater. The stadium is within walking distance of the Theater and the Georgian Terrace.

Vilbrandt, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; Dr. J. J. Gergen, Duke; Lt. Col. D. S. Murphy and H. Markus, Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. H. W. Lewis, Duke; G. R. Rugger, Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J.; Dr. Marcus Hobbs (standing), Duke, acting chief scientist, O.O.R.; Col. W. W. Holler, commanding officer, O.O.R., and conference director; Dr. J. W. Roe, University of North Carolina; Dr. L. D. Jaffe, Watertown Arsenal; Dr. W. C. Vosburgh, Duke; Dr. H. I. Fufeld, Frankford; Dr. J. H. Saylor, Duke; C. R. Cornthwaite and E. L. Hollady, Office, Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D. C. Not shown is Col. I. O. Drewry, senior representative from Washington, who had not yet arrived.

Ordnance Research Center Comes to Duke

Duke University has been named the site of a newly organized, permanent Office of Ordnance Research, which will direct a nation-wide research program and will serve as a scientific clearing house for all basic research of potential interest to the U.S. Army Ordnance Corps.

The Ordnance Corps designs and produces artillery, small arms, rocket launchers and their respective forms of ammunition. It has chosen Duke as the seat of its research office because of "local scientific activities, technical information available here through scientific consultants, laboratories and libraries, and because of the regional density of available scientists and other facilities." The University, therefore, receives another and highly significant commendation for its scientific programs.

Dr. Marcus E. Hobbs, professor of chemistry, is now serving as acting chief scientist for the office. His staff includes 12 other scientists who, with outside specialists and ordnance personnel, are evaluating basic research programs and awarding research contracts.

The staff will eventually consist of about 15 scientists and 25 technical and administrative personnel. Educational and industrial research institutions over the nation have been invited to submit proposals for research projects, which will be integrated into the institutions' existing research programs and used in training graduate research students.

Commanding officer of the unit is Col. Walker W. Holler, a native of Cornwell, S. C. Col. Holler attended Wofford College in Spartanburg, S. C., and received the B.S. degree from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1924, after which he took ordnance post-graduate work at M.I.T. During World War II he occupied a key position in the office of the Chief of Ordnance and was a consultant during the Potsdam Conference in 1945. He is the son of the Rev. A. E. Holler, now a resident of Lake Junaluska, N. C.

Research projects will be evaluated and contracts awarded in accordance with their relation not only to specific ordnance problems, but also to "frontier areas of science where results are likely to affect strongly all human affairs, including warfare."

During September, 15 top scientists from Ordnance Corps arsenals over the United States met at Duke for a policy conference at which a balanced materials research program for 1951-52 was worked out.

The office is located at 2127 Myrtle Drive, the former Haues House, near the main entrance to West Campus.

New Scholarships Are Announced

This month the University announced that three new regional scholarships, two for men and one for women, have been established, and that the first awards will be made this year to become effective next September.

The new prizes will be for students residing in Virginia, the District of Columbia, and parts of Maryland. Each will be worth $750 a year to the recipient, and, as long as the awardee remains qualified, it will provide financial assistance over the four-year undergraduate period. The maximum value, therefore, is $3,000.

The regions in which annual awards will be made are as follows:

Region I for men: The District of Columbia, the Virginia counties of Albemarle, Augusta, Clarke, Culpeper, Fairfax, Farquar, Frederick, Greene, Highland, King George, Loudoun, Madison, Orange, Page, Prince William, Rappahannock, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Warren, and Westmoreland; and the Maryland counties of Montgomery and Prince Georges.

Region II for men: The State of Virginia excluding those counties comprising a part of Region I.

Region I for women: The State of Virginia, District of Columbia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties of Maryland.

Objective and Basis of Award

These new regional scholarships were founded as part of the University's program to attract students of exceptional ability from throughout the United States, with emphasis on the Southeastern section.

To quote the official announcement: "The scholarships are intended to encourage as students young men and women who give promise of becoming leaders in their chosen fields of endeavor. As potential leaders, they should possess character, personality, intellectual integrity, vitality, and imagination. As students they should possess scholastic ability of a creative sort and minds that can digest and use the knowledge they acquire. The scholarships are designed to stimulate young men and women who possess these traits to become citizens with a genuine interest in society and with ability to influence and direct the course of affairs."

Specific requirements of eligibility are also set forth in the announcement.

The recipient must have graduated from a secondary school with a record that placed him in the upper 25 per cent of the class in scholastic standing. He must have college aptitude as shown by tests. The breadth of the student's interests and his native ability will be indicated by extra-curricular activities, their nature, quantity, and degree of success attained in each one.

Particular reference will be made to the display of leadership ability through church and other organizational activities. Personality, poise, stability, and vitality will be determined in personal interviews with University personnel.

Alumni Will Help

The University's former students, who reside in the regions of the awards, will be able to give valuable assistance in selecting awardees for these new prizes.

They will be asked to recommend candidates of whom they are aware in local high and preparatory schools, and, in general, to encourage promising young men and women to apply for the scholarships. It is believed that competition for the awards will arouse a greater interest in Duke in the regions involved, and that students who are eliminated when awards are made may still be attracted to the University.

Those applicants who are eliminated by virtue of competing with other students of superior qualifications, it is believed, will for the most part be the sort of students the University is particularly desirous of enrolling. Those who do possess high qualifications, and who need financial assistance, will be encouraged to apply for other scholarships or to seek financial aid through loan funds and other sources.

Alumni will be asked to help in another connection, too.

It is planned to interview each candidate in his or her home area before campus interviews are conducted. These interviews are to be held with a representative of Duke and with a former student of the University who is familiar with the candidate's background and accomplishments.

These new regional scholarships are similar, in value and in the qualifications of applicants, to the Angier B. Duke Regional Prizes for men and women in North Carolina.

DR. JAMES H. PHILLIPS, '33

Dr. J. H. Phillips Becomes Chaplain to the University

A new office has been created on the Duke campus, and a popular preacher has been chosen to fill it. Dr. James H. Phillips, '33, director of religious activities, has been appointed Chaplain to the University.

As Chaplain, Dr. Phillips will be the chief administrative officer of student religious activities and will supervise the work of two associates in charge of religious activities on East and West Campuses, and the work of the University's five denominational chaplains.

Other duties of the Chaplain will be to serve as chairman of the administrative committee of the Chapel and be responsible for all regular services in the Chapel. Dr. Phillips will also preach periodically during the year and will serve as pastor to the students. He will continue on the faculty as assistant professor of Biblical literature.

President Edens said, "Dr. Phillips will share the responsibility, with the preachers to the University and the dean of the Divinity School, of representing the University in an official capacity from time to time."

A native of Charlotte, N. C., Dr. Phillips joined the Duke staff in 1946. Having completed his undergraduate work at Duke, he later attended the Duke Divinity School. He received the B.D. and Ph.D. degrees from Yale University in 1936 and 1942. Before returning to Duke, he taught at the American University in Washington, D. C., and was associate pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church in Washington in 1942-43. From 1938-42 he was associate pastor of the First Congregational Church in Waterbury, Conn. During World War II, Dr. Phillips served as chaplain in the Second Air Force.

Dr. Phillips holds membership in the Western North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church, Biblical Literature, and Omicron Delta Kappa, National leadership fraternity.

He is married to the former Miss Alice Searight of Washington, D. C.

High Blood Pressure Cause

The discovery of a hitherto unknown compound that may be the basic cause for high blood pressure has been reported by Dr. Philip Handler, professor of biochemistry, and Dr. Frederick Bernheim, professor of pharmacology.

The co-discoverers reported the results of their four-year search to the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology. Experiments with rats led to the finding that the compound, called a "pressor" substance, is linked with the action of the kidneys. Normally it is excreted from the body in the urine, but when kidneys are damaged it stays in the body and causes high blood pressure.

Through a series of operations on rat kidneys, and by the administering of special diets to these rats, they found that rats with damaged kidneys were developing high blood pressure apparently because their kidneys could not excrete some damaging substance. By some tricky detective work they identified the substance as a new compound. They can now measure it and can concentrate it in solution. Further studies are under way.

It is thought that the discovery may settle the long standing issue of whether or not all high blood pressure is caused by kidney trouble.

William N. Reynolds, '86, Trustee Since 1927, Dies in Winston-Salem

William Neal Reynolds, '86, a University Trustee since 1927, and retired chairman of the executive committee of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, died September 10 in a Winston-Salem hospital. He was 88 years old. The funeral was held at the First Presbyterian Church in Winston-Salem, and burial was in Salem Cemetery.

"Mr. Will," as his friends always called him, was a great harness racing enthusiast, and was, in fact, stricken by his last illness a month before his death at the Hambletonian race meeting in Goshen, N. Y.

With Mr. Reynolds passed an era of advancement for Southern economy, for he was a member of the original group of men who helped industrialize North Carolina by laying the groundwork of a vast tobacco industry in the late 19th century. A native of Patrick County, Va., Mr. Reynolds entered the tobacco business in partnership with his older brother, Richard Joshua Reynolds, and Henry Roan in 1888. The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company is now famous for its manufacture of Camel cigarettes. Mr. Reynolds became head of the leaf purchasing department and a member of the board of directors, and rose to the vice-presidency in 1889. In 1918 he became president, and in 1924, chairman of the board of directors. From 1931 until his retirement in 1942, he was chairman of the executive committee. In addition he was a director of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company.

Mr. Reynolds attended Trinity College from 1882 until 1884 when the College was located in Randolph County. As a Trustee, he was also a member of the executive committee of the board.

On March 6, 1889, Mr. Reynolds was married to the former Kate G. Bitting. The couple had no children. Mrs. Reynolds died in 1946. Before her death, they gave the Kate Bitting Reynolds Memorial Hospital for Negroes in Winston-Salem.

A great philanthropist, Mr. Reynolds preferred to have his beneficence go unpublicized. Some of his gifts included a $340,000 supplement to the salaries of department heads at North Carolina State College; $100,000 toward a new library in Winston-Salem; $75,000 for the high school at Critz, Patrick County, Va.; and $100,000 to the Glade Valley School, a Presbyterian school for mountain children at Roaring Gap, N. C. He also made generous gifts to other North Carolina educational institutions including Duke University, Wake Forest and Davidson College. He left an 1100-acre estate to Winston-Salem and Forsyth County, and funds for its upkeep, for a public park in his will.

The William Neal Reynolds Coliseum at State College in Raleigh, which is named in honor of him, was built in part by funds donated by Mr. Reynolds' niece, Mrs. Charles Babcock, the former Mary Reynolds, for whom he named one of his great harness horses.

Mr. Reynolds made his home at Tanglewood Farms, just outside of Winston-Salem, where he kept a large stable. In 1922, following an operation, his doctor prescribed plenty of fresh air and exercise for swift recovery, and Mr. Reynolds became interested in harness racing. He would work behind his horses at least 25 miles a day, and became one of the keenest trainers in the country. Several of his horses won the Hambletonian. During the winters, he maintained a stable in Orlando, Fla.

THE FINER THINGS OF LIFE

by Frances Gray Patton, '26. Dodd, Mead and Company.

Frances Gray Patton, '26, wife of Professor Lewis Patton of the English Department, has written a collection of short stories which will be published next month by Dodd, Mead and Company under the title The Finer Things of Life.

Mrs. Patton is a frequent contributor to The New Yorker and other national magazines. In 1944 she won second place among 1,140 entries in a short story contest conducted by The Kenyon Review and Doubleday, Doran and Company. In 1945 one of her stories was published in the O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories Collection, and last year another included in a ten-year anthology The Best New Yorker Stories, 1940-1950.

The Finer Things of Life, Mrs. Patton's first book, will contain a number of sketches about her own Southern childhood and her life in a Southern university town.

THE RAGGED ONES

by Burke Davis, '35. Rinehart and Company.

The Ragged Ones, by Burke Davis, '35, is the first major work of fiction to deal with the neglected campaign from Cowpens to Guilford Court House which did so much to break British military power in America during the Revolutionary War.

The book tells the story of the breathless retreat of General Greene before Cornwallis in the 1781 Revolutionary campaign in North Carolina, and the grim daily lives of the men, women and slaves with the two armies. Some of its scenes are laid in the Durham area, notably the account of the British occupation of Hillsboro, and the massacre of several hundred Tories under Colonel Pyle in Alamance County.

Burke Davis, a native of Durham, attended both Duke and the University of North Carolina. For 10 years he was a newspaperman in Charlotte. He began research on the novel about 10 years ago.

the American People, and published by Appleton-Century-Crofts, Inc., presents a comprehensive discussion of American writing since Colonial times. It emphasizes the relation of writing to painting, sculpture, architecture, politics and social movements, and includes the first treatment of drama as a vital part of American literature.

Co-authors with Dr. Gohdes are Dr. George F. Whicher, director of American studies at Amherst; Dr. Kenneth B. Murdock, senior professor of American literature at Harvard; and Dr. Arthur H. Quinn, professor emeritus of American literature at the University of Pennsylvania.

A member of the Duke University faculty since 1930, Dr. Gohdes is managing editor of American Literature, a research publication.

DISCOVERING CHILDREN'S INTERESTS

Co-author, Dr. G. Frederick Kuder. Science Research Associates, Chicago.

Dr. G. Frederick Kuder, Duke psychologist, and Miss Blance E. Paulson, Chicago public school guidance supervisor, have collaborated in writing a book entitled "Discovering Children's Interests." Of principal interest to parents, the authors point out that elders must understand the interests of their offspring in order to do an intelligent job of guidance.

They develop the point that the interests of children, besides their importance in shaping careers, can play a big part in satisfying the basic need of youngsters for security, adventure and creative self-expression.

Dr. Kuder has been a member of the Duke psychology faculty since 1948. He is the author of the famed Kuder Preference Record for vocation and career guidance.

LEGAL DRAFTING

by Robert N. Cook, LL.B. '36. Foundation Press Company.

Robert N. Cook, LL.B. '36, professor of law at Western Reserve University School of Law, has completed the first text covering the subject of Legal Draft- ing, which has been published by the Foundation Press Company.

The book, highlighting such subjects as legal composition, simple agreements, organization of corporations, and others, has been selected for use in law school courses as well as for reference use by practicing attorneys.

A graduate of Bucknell University and the Duke School of Law, Mr. Cook has been teaching at Western Reserve University since 1946. He is married and has three children.

COMPULSORY LABOR ARBITRATION IN FRANCE, 1936-1939

by Dr. Joel Colton. King's Crown Press, Columbia University.

At a time when public attention is focused on the wage-price spiral, on government's relation to strikes, and on labor-management relations in general, a Duke professor, Dr. Joel Colton, of the History Department, has just completed a book on a compulsory arbitration system that was tried in France in the years just before World War II. The volume, entitled Compulsory Labor Arbitration in France, 1936-1939, is published by King's Crown Press of Columbia University.

Dr. Colton's book explains the French system, which prescribed that all labor disputes that could not be settled by the parties or by government conciliation boards had to be submitted to the decision of an arbitrator, chosen by the parties if possible, but otherwise by the government from panels drawn up previously. The decision of the arbitrator was to be final. As might be expected, a variety of problems arose in the application of the law, and Dr. Colton describes them and their solutions in his critical examination of the system.

The conclusion at which Dr. Colton arrives is that, with all of its faults, the arbitration system served a very useful purpose by providing a means of adjusting wages to prices in a time of rapidly rising prices, by cutting down appreciably on the number of strikes and lockouts, and by providing conciliation and arbitration machinery that was sorely needed in France.

When, last year, the French legislature was called upon to decide the fate of the prewar system, the result was a compromise in which much of the prewar mediation machinery was restored and a provision adopted that, as before, all disputes have to be submitted to government conciliation bodies. But the submission of disputes to arbitration, Dr. Colton points out, is now on a voluntary basis.

As a supplement to the volume now being published, Dr. Colton has summarized the system recently adopted in France in an article appearing in the Winter, 1951, issue of The Arbitration Journal.

Concert Series

The 1951-52 season of the popular Duke University All-Star Concert Series will open Thursday, October 11, with an off-the-series attraction, Ballet Theatre. Appearing on the campus for the third consecutive year, Ballet Theatre continues to draw and delight capacity audiences with its excellence in artistry and colorfully executed program.

Later in the season the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company will present an off-the-series attraction of Verdi's immortal La Traviata, on November 27, with John Alexander, '45, now a member of the Cincinnati Zoo Opera Company, singing the tenor role of Alfredo. On December 6, the very popular First Piano Quartet will make an off-the-series performance.

Tickets for all three off-the-series attractions are still available. For information and reservations, write J. Foster Barnes, Box 4822, Duke Station, Durham, N. C., or phone 9-011, extension 6225. Tickets are priced at $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

The regular All-Star Concert Series, which this year presents the most expensive and probably most popular list of attractions ever offered, has already been sold out. Such audience enthusiasm is understandable when one reads the impressive list of artists scheduled to appear: Patrice Munsel, soprano, October 16; Friedrich Gulda, pianist, November 13; Singing Boys of Norway, January 31; Sadler's Wells Theatre Ballet, February 21; and Jerome Hines, basso, March 10.

BOOKS

and the city, has been written by J. Ray Shute and published by the Nocalore Press of Monroe, N. C. Most of the chapters were originally given as addresses before the North Carolina League of Municipalities, over which Mr. Shute, who is Mayor of Monroe, presided as president in 1950.

One of these provocative addresses was read into the Congressional Record. The Happy Mayor is challenging and timely, and should be of interest to every municipal officer and loyal citizen. Mr. Shute, who writes with ample experience and clear insight into democracy at the local level of government, feels that the city is the repository and the last bulwark of democracy in America. This book is limited to but 500 copies. Mr. Shute has also written several other books on various subjects.

PROTESTANT THOUGHT IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

Dr. H. Shelton Smith and Dr. Waldo Beach, contributors. Macmillan Company.

Two Duke professors contributed essays to Protestant Thought in the Twentieth Century, a book of essays by leading theologians which was selected as the Religious Book Club choice for June.

Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor of American Religious Thought, entitled his essay "Does Progressive Religious Education Have a Theology?" Dr. Waldo Beach, associate professor of Christian Ethics, collaborated with Professor John Bennett of the Union Theological Seminary in New York in a study of the development of Christian Ethics, entitled "From the Ethics of Hope to the Ethics of Faith."

THE NEGRO AND THE METHODIST CHURCH

by Dr. Mason Crum.

A new attack has been made on the problem of interracial cooperation in a new book, The Negro and the Methodist Church, by Dr. Mason Crum, professor of religion. The volume has been released for use in Methodist churches, and film strips keyed to the text are being prepared for Methodist training schools and study groups.

Relating from its pre-Revolutionary beginnings the story which the title describes, Dr. Crum portrays the carrying of the Gospel to Negroes and the response of the Negroes, not to theology but to Christian love expressed in sickbed visits, in hands clasped in genuine and uncondescending friendship. He discusses the complications arising out of the institution of slavery, and gives added evidence to support the statement that the cultural advance of the Negro in America during the past 250 years has been unparalleled in history by any people.

The thesis of Dr. Crum's work is that interracial cooperation is seriously hampered by a "widespread ignorance of the Negro's ability to achieve when given a chance." With this in mind he presents much material about talented Negroes in business, the professions, educational institutions and the church. Oddly enough, he points out, the separation of races in the churches is more complete than in the area of public education. But "this situation is not altogether the fault of the whites," according to Dr. Crum. Most Negroes prefer not to associate themselves with white churches because in a white congregation they are handicapped in their opportunity to achieve official status and informal fellowship.

"Certainly such a situation cannot be viewed lightly by Christians," Dr. Crum emphasizes, "nor can it be pushed aside as final and inevitable." His book expands on this idea.

Dr. Crum's writings include "Gullah: A Story of Negro Life in the Carolina Sea Islands," "A Guide to Religious Pageantry," "The Project Method in Religious Education" and "The Story of Lake Junaluska."

ARTICLE BY CUSHMAN

An article discussing "Faith and Reason in the Thought of St. Augustine" by Dr. Robert E. Cushman, professor of systematic theology in the Duke Divinity School, appears in the religious periodical "Church History."

The article deals with the teaching of the fourth century bishop who "laid a new and definitive foundation for Christian philosophy."

Dr. Cushman is well known for his contributions to leading religious publications. Before joining the Duke faculty in 1945, he taught at Yale University and the University of Oregon.

New Coach—New Plays—Impressive Win

A host of Duke University alumni followed the Blue Devils to Columbia, S. C., on September 22 and to a man (and woman) they were completely satisfied with the performance turned in by the first team coached by Bill Murray, '31, first alumnus coach in the institution's history.

The Blue Devils, and a total of 50 played against South Carolina, rolled up the amazing total of 454 yards in rolling to a 34-6 triumph. Not in many years has a Blue Devil outfit made that much yardage against a major foe.

In winning the game, Murray presented a lad who is certainly destined to go down into the records with other Duke football greats.

He is Jerry Barger, a cool and clever little freshman from Salisbury, N. C. It is unusual enough for a freshman to make a Duke team but when this freshman not only makes the starting eleven but is the field general and directs all the plays, it is really something unbelievable.

Barger won the major share of the raves from the sports writers and radio commentators, and they were really raves because this lad caught the attention of them all. As the game went along they were all pulling for him.

Barger was not the only Duke star, however. Blaine Earon, the All-America end, was a standout on both defense and offense (he is playing both this year), and Captain Jim Gibson was terrific on defense as was Bob Bickel, senior halfback.

In such a one-sided game practically everyone plays well but along with Barger in the backfield were junior halfbacks Charlie Smith and Piney Field and sophomore fullback Jack Kistler.

Here's how the scoring went for those who missed full reports of the game:

Midway the first period Captain Gibson recovered a Gamecock fumble on the South Carolina 43. Barger got a yard and Kistler two to the 40, and then on a beautifully executed play, Barger headed to his left and at the proper time pitched the ball out to Field who simply outran the Gamecocks and went 40 yards without being touched. Green added the extra point (he missed only one all day).

CHARLIE SMITH

On the first play of the second quarter Charlie Smith took a pitch out to the right and then, on an exhibition of beautiful running, went 45 yards for a touchdown, but Duke was penalized 15 yards for clipping and the fine run was nullified.

A few minutes later Duke drove to the one-foot line but couldn't get it over. But after 12 minutes of the period Duke scored again after driving all the way from the Duke 36. This drive was started when senior defensive halfback Bob Bickel made a beautiful one-hand interception of a South Carolina pass. Field carried it over from the two for his second straight touchdown.

South Carolina scored its only touchdown minutes later. Steve Wadiak, the splendid Gamecock halfback, returned Duke's kickoff 51 yards to the Blue Devil 42. After two plays failed to gain, fullback Drawdy of the Gamecocks blasted through the line and went all the way.

Thus Duke retired at intermission with only a one-touchdown lead, but after a thrilling first half.

Duke put the ball game away with three touchdowns in 12 minutes in the third period.

Billy Lea recovered a Gamecock fumble on the Gamecock 37. Kistler got five, then Field added 14. Charlie Smith added 13 and a few minutes later Smith drove over from the two. This marker came after 4:20 of the period.

A perfect pass and a perfect catch from Barger to Blaine Earon gave Duke another touchdown after 10 minutes. Duke was on its own 36 and Barger lofted the ball to Earon who slipped by the South Carolina safety man on the 10, took it over his shoulder and went the rest of the way.

Duke's final touchdown came as a result of another South Carolina fumble on its own 21. A pass from Barger to Gene Brooks (who caught five for 63 yards) took it to the eight and on the next play Charlie Smith took a pitch out and rambed over.

The first home game under Murray will be the game with N. C. State on October 13; Virginia will be met in the Homecoming Day Special on October 27; Wake Forest on November 10; and Carolina on November 24. There are tickets remaining for ALL of the games.

Get Tickets Now

The Athletic Department has announced that tickets are still available for all home games, including Carolina, but that orders should be placed right now if seats are to be assured. The South Carolina game, with its spectacular Blue Devil win, has spurred ticket requests to the point where shortages will soon develop.

Southeastern Personnel Conference Is on Campus

Duke University was host to this year's Southeastern Personnel Conference when personnel executives from business and industry met on the campus from September 10 through 12. Dr. Frank T. de Vyver, Duke economics professor, is secretary of the conference.

Delegates heard addresses by eminent Southern industrial leaders and attended the traditional conference barbecue on September 11.

The opening address of the conference was delivered by Joseph E. Moody, of Washington, D. C., president of the Southern Coal Producers' Association. J. O. Wells, conference chairman and an official of the Ecusta Paper Company, presided. The closing address was given by William H. Ruffin, president of Erwin Mills and also of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Three Duke alumni, Charles B. Wade, Jr., '34, assistant to the superintendent of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.; J. O. Thomas, '21, Fieldcrest Mills, Leaksville, N. C.; and Howard M. Winterson, '39, personnel administration manager, Lukens Steel, Coatesville, Pa., were among the speakers and discussion leaders.

Experts from business and industrial firms led discussions during the conference on "Measuring Personnel Results," "Problems of Wage Administration Under Wage Stabilization," and related topics.

G. H. Kearns, '97, Creates Grants for Religious Study

A $100,000 foundation for graduate study in religion, "The Gurney Harriss Kearns Foundation," has been established at Duke by Gurney Harriss Kearns, '97, High Point, N. C., industrialist.

The aim of the foundation, which is non-sectarian in scope, is "to prepare outstanding teachers of religion for colleges, universities and theological seminaries," President Hollis Edens said in announcing the gift.

The new foundation developed as a result of additions made by Mr. Kearns to a trust fund he established for a similar purpose in 1935. Some 20 outstanding students of six different denominations have held annual Kearns fellowships.

"Duke continues to be grateful to Mr. Kearns," President Edens declared. "His conviction that the spiritual phase of higher education needs support has been implemented with badly needed material aid. Duke University and this region are the better for his generosity."

Five Kearns Fellows hold teaching positions in North Carolina. Three are at Duke, one is at the University of North Carolina and one is on the faculty of Greensboro College.

Mr. Kearns is president of the Crown

Hosiery Mills of High Point. He has been prominent in civic and religious activities as well as being active in the affairs and devoted to the interests of Duke University. He has a daughter, Katherine W. Kearns, and two sons, Charles L., '32, and Amos R. Kearns, '27. The latter is a Duke trustee.

Captain J. M. Ocker Heads Navy Unit

Rear Admiral Ralph T. Earle, Jr. who last month left his post as commanding officer of the Duke University Naval R.O.T.C. to take up a new assignment at the Naval War College at Newport, R.I., has been succeeded by Captain John M. Ocker.

Captain Ocker comes to Duke direct from the Office of Naval Intelligence in Washington. A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in 1923, he has had an active and distinguished Navy career. Among his outstanding tours of sea duty was a period as operations officer on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet.

The new Naval R.O.T.C. commander is a native of Empire, Mich. He has one son, John M. Ocker, Jr., '51, a medical student at Duke.

Admiral Earle had recently been promoted to rear admiral, being one of 36 Navy captains elevated in rank during the summer. At Newport he will receive special training in strategy and tactics. A native of Annapolis, Md., and a graduate of the Naval Academy in 1922, Admiral Earle was warmly praised and commended by President Edens for his outstanding service to the University and for the manner in which he and his family "fitted into the university community."

We have all 3 Types of Composition

WHEN setting type we give due consideration to the ultimate purpose . . . In deciding whether to use linotype, monotype or hand composition, we first ascertain the function of the particular piece of work. Each method was designed for a specific service, therefore initial cost is beside the question. We shall be glad to assist you in deciding which of the three will do the best job for your particular problem. Our composing room service is planned for today's demands.

DR. RUTH MARGERY ADDOMS PROFESSOR OF BOTANY

Dr. Ruth Margery Addoms, professor of botany at Duke since 1930, died at the home of her mother in Brooklyn, N. Y., on August 30, at the result of a heart condition. She was 55 years old.

A native of Haworth, N. J., Dr. Addoms was one of the Nation's outstanding botanists. She made her home at 1413 North Duke Street in Durham.

President Edens, on learning of her death, said, "During her many years on the staff, Dr. Addoms had earned the strong personal friendship and high regard of her colleagues. Her passing is a very real loss to Duke University."

Dr. Addoms had traveled widely in Europe, and had helped with the writing of two books. She received her A.B. and M.A. from Wellesley College in 1918 and 1921, and the University of Wisconsin awarded her the Ph.D. degree in 1926. Dr. Addoms taught at both institutions before coming to Duke. She specialized in the study of plant anatomy and plant physiology, having done distinguished work in both fields.

Active in Durham civic life, Dr. Addoms was chairman of the Durham Chapter of British War Relief and a member of the Drivers' Corps of the City's Civil Defense organization during World War II. In July, 1946, she received "The King's Medal for Service in the Cause of Freedom" from England. She was a member of the Durham Girl Scout Council since its formation, and held membership in a large number of scientific and professional organizations.

Survivors include the mother, Mrs. William H. Addoms; a sister, Miss Elizabeth Addoms, both of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and a brother, John Addoms, of California.

JULIUS CLARENCE GREGSON, '92

Julius Clarence Gregson, '92, pioneer cotton mill owner and industrialist of Siler City, N. C., died at his home on August 4 after an illness of several months.

Funeral services were conducted at the First Methodist Church, Siler City, and interment was in Oakwood Cemetery.

As a young man, Mr. Gregson went to Siler City and was instrumental in organizing the Hadley-Peoples Manufacturing Company, a cotton mill of which he became general manager. He was also one of the co-founders of Gregson and Dorsett Wholesale Grocery Company and the Oval Oak Manufacturing Company, the world's largest washboard factory. In 1902 he helped organize the Chatham Bank and served as director for many years and as president from 1919 until 1928. In addition he operated the first Ford dealership in Siler City.

Widely known in national textile circles, he was noted for his ability as a cotton buyer for his mill, a job which he kept when he sold his interest in the mill in 1944. He retired from active work a year ago.

Survivors include the wife, Mrs. Mabel Hadley Gregson, of Siler City, three daughters, one brother, Walter J. Gregson, '92, Randleman, N. C., one sister, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

NO. 10...THE WOODPECKER

"What kind of a square do they take me for?"

Woodrow almost bit off more than he could chew when he tackled the cigarette tests! But he pecked away 'til he smoked out the truth: Such an important item as mildness can't be tossed off in a fleeting second! A "swift sniff" or a "perfunctory puff" proves practically nothing! He, like millions of smokers, found one test that doesn't leave you up a tree.

It's the sensible test... the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke—on a day-after-day basis. No snap judgments! Once you've enjoyed Camels for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), you'll see why...

After all the Mildness tests...

THE DIRECTOR'S SCRATCH PAD

RECENTLY the class agents held their annual meeting on the Duke campus, kicking off the final phase of the development campaign. For the first time in the history of such meetings, more class agents were present than had indicated they would attend. This is the kind of spirit that prevails among the class and school agents.

Although the class agents are beginning their work, the area chairmen will not stop. If you haven't already done so, make your contribution immediately either through your class agent or area chairman.

The alumni in Northern New Jersey had planned to come for Homecoming in a chartered railway car. Arrangements could not be worked out because the railway does not have facilities for putting cars on a side track in Durham. A number of the alumni are coming for the week-end in station wagons. This seems like a good idea for alumni in other areas.

The Senior Classes are sponsoring a Homecoming dance Saturday night following the game. This is something the younger alumni have requested, and we hope they and other alumni will enter wholeheartedly into these plans.

The Homecoming decorations on campus will be lighted Friday night. Make your plans to be here and visit the campus at that time, as the decorations will be at their best. The entire community is working to make this an outstanding Homecoming. Your presence will make the week-end complete.

Preliminary applications for Angier Duke Scholarships must be made by December 15. If you know of a young man, or woman, in your community who should apply, urge him to do so immediately. These are $3,000 scholarships, over a four-year period, for North Carolina students. New Regional Scholarships have been set up by the Duke Endowment. High school seniors in the state of Virginia, the District of Columbia, and Prince George and Montgomery Counties in Maryland are eligible to apply.

MANY of the local alumni associations are holding annual meetings. If your community has not had such a meeting, how about getting in touch with your officers and suggesting they make plans for one this fall. If you do not know the officer, write the Alumni Office, and we will be glad to send you their names.

The new parking regulations on campus make parking for visitors more convenient.

The Envelope

WE were sitting around after lunch the other day—Bill Howell, Frank Parsons and I—having our coffee and talking about this and that, and the subject got around to how we all got started in the work we were doing.

I'd told them how winning an essay contest in school had put me on the road to being a writer of sorts instead of the engineer I thought I was going to be, and then Bill Howell explained how, as a young lad, he had become interested in architecture through watching them remodel his father's grocery store.

I turned to Frank Parsons and said, "Looks as if you're the only one here who followed his father's footsteps, Frank. Was that by accident, or by choice, or what?"

Frank tamped some tobacco in his pipe and grinned. "Well, it's quite a story, but if you're really interested, I'll tell you..."

He held a match to his pipe and puffed thoughtfully for a moment and then went on. "My dad always wanted me to go into the same business he was in, but he never tried to talk me into it. He wanted me to do whatever I thought I could do best, and let me have my own way about choosing a career.

"One day after I got out of college back in 1920, I stopped at Dad's office to tell him I was going across town to see about a job I'd heard was open at the mill. Dad said that was fine and wished me luck. Then he picked up a couple of envelopes from his desk and said, 'As long as you're going over that way, Frank, would you mind dropping this off for me?' He handed me one of the envelopes, shoved the other in his coat pocket and said, 'I want to deliver this one myself because it's pretty important—and it will save me some time if you take the other.'"

Frank Parsons put down his pipe and said, "I never did get to the mill that day—or any other. After I delivered the envelope I went back to Dad's office and asked him how soon I could start working for him."

Bill Howell leaned across the table and said, "What happened that made you change your mind?"

Frank Parsons smiled and said, "It was that envelope. It was addressed to a woman who lived on the way to the mill, and she opened it while I was standing there. Inside it was a check from New York Life. Her husband had died just a short while before and left her with four small children, and—well, I guess you just never know what life insurance is all about until you see what it means to people..."

Bill Howell nodded. "That was a pretty smart stunt of your father's—sending you on an errand like that, knowing that it might be the one thing that would swing you over to being a New York Life agent like himself."

We pushed back our chairs, and as we were leaving the table Frank Parsons said, "That's the funny part of the whole thing. Dad was in such a hurry and the envelopes looked so much alike that he gave me the wrong one! He thought he'd sent me over to pay the gas bill!"

FEW OCCUPATIONS offer a man so much in the way of personal reward as life underwriting. Claude G. Pepper, '92
Hamlet, N. C.

At the age of 81, a letter of the magnitude of the 23rd of June from you, is touching a tender spot. There's only one Duke, and was only one Trinity College. Dr. Craven, Dr. Crowell and Dr. Pegram, gave me something none could take from me in life. Prof. English gave me a voice that has been lifted all of these years, and I think I can tell a speaker who was trained at Duke, or old Trinity. My life has been freely given to my fellows. Now at 81, I associate with young men and love them, and they love me to the extent that I was told that I was the only man in Hamlet that could be elected an honorary member of the Lions Club of Hamlet. Seventy-five men stood and voted unanimously for the old man. Humbly, I serve them all the time. Thank you sir, and I assure you that I will only thank God and keep my feet on the ground.

Yours, and hoping when another year comes, the old man may still do better for dear old Duke

Even at this long distance I feel very close to Duke and a bit nostalgic for the wonderful experiences I had there. I am hoping that in the next few years Spokane may be represented again on the campus, for it is well worth travelling a few thousand miles a year for the privilege of attending Duke! There are a couple of good prospects, and I am certainly "beating the drums."

Excerpt from a letter of Pfc. Alex B. McFadden, '50:

"I am enclosing a small contribution to the D.U.D.C. I hope that it will help in the drive to make Duke a bigger and better University. I realize that every little bit adds up. I wish that I could give more; but at present our pay records are not quite straightened out. I hope, and will plan, to make another contribution soon. I hope that all of the alumni feel as I do. Every little bit that we can do will be of great value to the future students at Duke. Many of those future students will be our own children. We know how much we profited from our experiences and classes at Duke. Surely we want our children to do as well and even better. Every time that we add one more brick or book or make it possible for the educational standards to be raised, we are paving a better road for our children. These contributions, no matter how small, also help us to feel more proud that we are alumni of Duke University. May Duke continue to grow in size and standards!"

Do You Remember

OCTOBER, 1941

The biggest Duke-Durham Homecoming parade ever held was witnessed by 100,000 people. There were 15 bands and 44 floats. Classes were suspended, and the Blue Devils made the day complete by beating the Tennessee Vols 19-0.

From 5,000 to 6,000 soldiers are on maneuvers in the area.

Duke Players present The Male Animal.

The style of that proverbial freshman annoyance, the "dink," has been changed from an abbreviated baseball cap to "crew" style. Most students favored the change since it presented innumerable ways of wearing the usually disliked head covering.

OCTOBER, 1926

In a heated contest, Furman McLarty was victoriously elected senior class president. Other officers are W. A. Mahry, vice-president; Elizabeth Ramsey, treasurer; and Rebecca Land, secretary.

Lillian Gish and John L. Gilbert are starring at the Paris Theatre in the movie La Boheme. Another "must see" of the month is One Minute to Play, starring Red Grange.

Over 1500 students are attending Duke University this year.

D. E. Kirkpatrick, Men's Association president, and his fellow officers are trying to impress Duke traditions upon the freshmen.

OCTOBER, 1901

The Reverend John Carlisle Kilgo, president of the College, returned this month from a trip to Europe during the summer.

Trinity College has at the present eight scientific laboratories supplied with the latest equipment: three chemistry, one biology, and four physics laboratories. A reliable survey shows that almost all other college science laboratories in the south are at least 30 years out of date.

The total endowment of Trinity College is $333,750.

Big '51 Homecoming Set for October 27

Duke's 1951 Homecoming celebration, on October 27, will offer some special attractions.

The Blue Devils will challenge the University of Virginia Cavaliers, in what will be the second appearance of the Murray-coached team on Duke ground this year. (Their Durham debut—October 13 against the N. C. State Wolf-pack.) The Homecoming crowd will also take the opportunity to make it a fine Welcome Back Bill Murray Day.

This gridiron battle will renew one of the oldest rivalries in the South. In 1890 Duke (Trinity) and Virginia met in Richmond on Thanksgiving day for the first interstate intercollegiate football game ever played in the South.

Registration will begin in the West Campus Union Lobby at 2:00 p.m. on Friday, October 26, which is a good day for alumni to get settled, find out just what the week end has in store, and visit their friends and fellow-alumni before the busy Homecoming schedule gets under way. Everyone is especially urged to register so others will know who has arrived, and how friends can be located.

Student Homecoming decorations on West Campus are to be completed by Friday night, when they will be spotlighted and ready for inspection. They will also be judged at that time by a downtown committee. The night displays met with such success last year that a repetition seems to be in order, and visitors will particularly like the carnival atmosphere the decorations create.

All fraternities, hiding behind their Homecoming decorations, will open doors to greet alumni brothers, their wives and dates in a new Friday evening feature. The Duke Players will present a comedy, "Room Service," beginning at 8:15 p.m., both Thursday and Friday, in Page Auditorium.

On Saturday, the big day, things will start rolling with a Pep Meeting in front of the Old Gym at 9:30. The traditional Homecoming Barbecue will take place in the Old Gymnasium on West Campus from 11:30 to 1:00 o'clock. This will be regardless of weather, since it has been found that the gym is pleasant and more convenient—no ants, no leaves, no c.c.d., no threat of rain. There is ample seating room, plenty of visiting room, and everyone will be within a short walk to the stadium.

At 1:45 p.m., just before game time, the University of Virginia marching band will perform.

At gametime, alumni will get a sample of just what this Murray-coached squad can do. During the half, the 1951 Duke Homecoming Queen will be crowned by William M. Werber, '30, president of the General Alumni Association. She will be chosen, as will her court, by popular student vote, and beauty will be a high criterion. The Duke University marching band will perform, and prizes for the best homecoming decorations will be awarded.

Durham Participates

A special committee from the Durham Chamber of Commerce has been appointed to work with the Duke committee on Homecoming. Durham stores will feature special window displays, and the entire city will welcome alumni and friends. Richard J. Crowder, president of the Trinity College senior class and member of the National Council Committee on Special Occasions, is chairman of the student Homecoming committee composed of 19 student leaders. Heading the Durham Chamber of Commerce committee is Dante Germino, Sr. Other members of his group are Wesley McAfee, '41, William F. Swain, J. A. Woodall, R. P. Garrison, Jr., Fred N. Lloyd, '34, and LeRoy Graham, '18.

Following the game, all fraternities on campus will hold open house, and the registration desk in the Union Lobby will again be open for the alumni. Worthy of note is the fact that the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity celebrates its 50th anniversary during Homecoming Week End. A highlight of the occasion will be a banquet on Saturday night.

All former students are invited to a

Homecoming dance Saturday evening in the Old Gymnasium, West Campus, from 9:00 to 12:00 o'clock. The dance, sponsored by a student organization, will be informal, and tickets ($1.25) will be available in the Alumni Office. The Duke Ambassadors, the only band in the South to be named All-Collegiate Band by Metronome Magazine, and the only collegiate band in the Nation to be mentioned in Who's Who in Music, will play. The Homecoming queen will be guest of honor and members of the football team will be recognized. A special dance hon-

Welcome, Bill Murray

The 1951 Homecoming will be an official "Welcome back, Bill Murray Day," as Bill's friends, classmates, teammates, admirers, and well-wishers converge on the campus to cheer his first Duke team.

Bill Murray is the first alumnus coach that the University has ever had. Following in the giant footsteps of the venerable Wallace Wade, he has molded a team, in a new pattern, that offers its rooters more than a fair share of downright excitement.

The spirited Blue Devils, meeting an old rival before a special audience of former students, can confidently be expected to make the game a climax to other festivities that welcome back their new and popular mentor.

Engineers' Homecoming

Annual Homecoming of College of Engineering alumni, also on October 27, will begin with a meeting at 10:30 a.m. in the College of Engineering Auditorium. The session will be devoted to an explanation of the College's research and develop program. During the meeting, wives of alumni will be entertained at a "Coffee Hour" in the Engineering Library by the Engineers' Wives Club. Russell Ranson, '31, is Engineer Alumni Association president.

oring alumni will take place during the evening.

Regularly scheduled Homecoming activities will close Sunday morning with a Chapel service at 11:00 a.m., at which Dr. James T. Cleland will speak. Many alumni will want to remain the rest of the day to finish seeing the campus and visiting friends who were previously engrossed with football and barbecue.

That First Virginia Game

At that first Virginia game 61 years ago, Trinity College had no coach at all. President Crowell had brought some of the new rules of the game from Yale University. The change from a round ball to an elliptical one had just been made, and the game itself was still pretty much of a free-for-all.

The score of the 1890 game was Virginia 10—Duke 4, but it was a battle all the way. (A touchdown counted four points, and a field goal five. A safety was two points.) If people worry about N.C.A.A. rules to protect players and teams now, they should have seen that first Virginia game. Dr. M. T. Plyler, left tackle on the team, has said that the squad of '90 will never forget the terrors of the Virginia onslaught. "It was Virginia to the right of us, Virginia to the left of us, and Virginia in front of us. In the end, it was bruises to the right of us, bruises to the left of us, and bruises behind us. Never did Carthaginian swear eternal vengeance on Rome more certainly than did Trinity on Virginia following that first meeting on the James. Next year to their astonishment, we licked them, 20 to 0."

The late R. L. Durham, '91, captain of the team, wrote an interesting account of the game some years ago. The only practice the team got off their own campus; he said, was the game played by the Trinity students at the laying of the corner-stone of the main building of the new college at Durham. There was also quite a contest for place on the "First Eleven," which meant much more in those days than it does now in the two squad system. At that time there was no such thing as taking a man out of the game unless he was injured because once out, he could not be put in again.

The last time Duke played Virginia, in 1943, the score was 49 to 0 in favor of Duke. The two teams have had a long and stormy record of contest, and the 1951 Homecoming game will undoubtedly be in keeping with that historic tradition. Of late, Virginia has fielded strong elevens, and this year Duke will have its hands full.

Contracts Let for West Campus Building

Contracts for the construction of the new Administration and Classroom Building, one of the major objectives of the Development Campaign, were let this month. Total cost of the new structure, for which ground has already been broken, is to be $1,758,000.

Contract for the general construction of the building went to the J. A. Jones Construction Company of Charlotte, N. C., on a bid of $907,000. Other contracts let were: for heating and ventilation, $79,313, Durham Plumbing and Heating Company, Durham; for plumbing, $41,225, Copeland Plumbing Company, Durham; and for electrical work, $47,280, Star Electric Company of Greensboro, N. C.

Equipment for the building, not included in contract let, is to cost $680,000.

The new Classroom and Administration Building is to be erected on the long empty corner of the intersecting main quadrangles of West Campus, directly across from the General Library on one side and Few Dormitory Quadrangle on the other. It will, therefore, be of the traditional Gothic design, the only building erected in this pattern since before World War II, with the exception of the library annex.

Duke's students, in particular, are looking forward to the completion of the structure. It will not only alleviate a shortage of classroom space on the campus, but it will free the present Administration Building, originally designated as temporary quarters for administrative offices, for remodeling as a long-desired Student Activities Center. Money for this remodeling project has been provided by Duke's friends, individuals and business firms, in the City of Durham in a phase of the national Development Campaign headed by George Watts Hill.

Another favorable aspect of the building, scheduled for completion in about 18 months, is the additional space it will provide for offices for the teaching staff. Not only will it facilitate the work and study of the faculty, but it will allow greater accommodations for private and personal interviews with students in a manner that will contribute to the educational advantages of which Duke boasts

Class Agents Join in Campaign Push

Class agents, departing from the campus after the October 14 meeting, pledged their efforts to reaching every one of the University's 25,000 alumni and alumnae within the next few weeks in the final great push to boost the Development Campaign over the top by December 31.

At a luncheon session presided over by Alonzo Edwards, '25, 1951-52 chairman of the National Council, Class Agents heard President Edens assert that there was no question that the goal of eight and one-half million dollars would be reached before the end of the campaign.

After briefly reviewing the progress of the Development Program since it began, on the present scale, in July of 1950, the President stated: "I think this campaign is one of the best things that could have happened to Duke University. It has drawn us closer together and has made us stronger."

Dr. Edens strongly re-emphasized that the purpose of the campaign was not to contribute in any way to "a bigger Duke, but to make Duke better."

The University, he said, now has an enrollment of about 5,000 students and that is the maximum number that should be accepted. But, he added, the funds being sought are to provide better for those students already here by filling those essential needs with which alumni are now familiar.

December 31 Is Last Day

It was also emphasized by the President that there will be no "period of grace" after December 31.

"The eight and a half million dollars is for undergirding the entire University," he explained, "and that is the amount that the alumni body set out to raise as its share of this program. While the eventual goal is $12,000,000, the remaining $3,500,000 will be sought from special sources—foundation, corporation, and individuals interested in some particular phase of the University's work."

Mr. Edwards pointed out that: "There is now more need for the privately endowed universities like Duke than there has ever been before. Our course has been charted and it is our job to follow it. The service we render through keeping Duke University strong is a service to ourselves, to our children, and to our State and the nation as a whole."

Dr. Henry C. Sprinkle, Jr., '23, who attended the meeting from New York City, remarked: "Our investment in Duke University has been the most profitable of our lives. Duke has grown great through the years, and we have seen it happen.

We are going to be proud that we helped it grow even greater."

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Charles P. Bowles, '28, A.M. '31, B.D. '32, Charlotte, N. C., who is the School Agent of the Divinity School.

Two Mailings Planned

Class Agents plan to make at least two appeals to their classmates, who have not yet participated in the campaign, between the middle of October and Founders Day, Dec. 11. Most Class Agents will mail their first letters out around October 25 and plan to follow with a second appeal about a month later.

While letters will go to all members of all classes who have not yet contributed, this will not interfere with local campaigns now in progress in many cities and towns. Campaigners working in these local campaigns, which have without exception established enviable records of success, will continue with their plans to visit each alumnus and alumna individually in a direct effort to secure new contributors and additional pledges.

Most recent local campaigns to be launched were in Philadelphia, Pa., where Wayne Ambler, '38, is chairman, Bruce H. Greenfield, '38, is general canvass chairman, and Joseph L. Loughran, '47, is general canvass chairman, on October 15; and in Miami, Fla., where Dr. Harold K. Terry, '36, is chairman, Henry H. Russell, Jr., '40, is initial gifts chairman, and James L. Davis, '45, is general canvass chairman, on October 17.

Meanwhile, word from Asheville, N. C., the last major North Carolina area to begin campaign activities, indicates that an early report of progress can be expected and that this report will be an unusually good one.

Spanning 60 years of Trinity College and Duke University are Class Agents James E. Briggs, '51, of Raleigh, N. C., and Dr. A. W. Plyler, '92, of Greensboro, N. C.

Like Father Like Son? Let's See . . .

A little sly snooping in the offices of the freshman dean and the director of admissions, on West and East Campuses, has uncovered the fact that there are at least 56 members of the 1951 freshman class whose mothers or fathers, or mothers and fathers, were once students at Duke themselves.

These may not be all of the freshmen who are sons and daughters of alumni, but these, at least, are the ones who would admit it. And there are enough of them present to make an interesting game for those "old timers" ancient enough to have boys and girls in college.

The idea is to try to identify the parent of the freshman by detecting a family resemblance in the freshman's face. Can you do it?

Under each photo is indicated whether the freshman's mother or father is the alumna or alumnus (or both) and the parent's class. This immediately limits the problem to a manageable range and the rest should be easy. For each classmate's son or daughter that you identify, give yourself a score of 100. It is possible to be super-perfect in this test. Remember, however, identifying your own off-spring doesn't count.

A number of the youngsters pictured

The answers to this graduate-level examination may be found on the next page (246). They are printed upside down to remove any temptation to peek before guessing. Under each photo is the information as to which parent attended Duke and to which class he or she belonged.

on these pages are third generation Dukesters, having had grandparents as well as parents who attended Duke and Trinity. There are a number of freshmen, the investigation disclosed, whose grandparents attended the University but whose parents went astray and wandered into other camps. There are many others who have had uncles, aunts, brothers, and sisters at Duke in past years.

For the purpose of this quiz, however, photos are confined to the direct descendants of a single generation. Sometime in the future, maybe it will be possible to ferret out that freshman who has had the most relatives at Duke. When we find him, be confident that we shall let you know.

Each year the number of alumni sons and daughters entering the freshman class grows larger. This trend can be expected to continue, since the comparatively large graduating classes of more recent years have now been out in the world long enough to make a name for themselves and provide progeny for its perpetuation. That mothers and fathers direct the footsteps of their offspring back to their own Alma Mater is a profound compliment to the University. Parents always want "things to be better for Junior" and this particular tendency would, therefore, indicate that there is no place better than Duke.

Another observation might be made (impartially, of course). These 56 boys and girls of the class of 1951 are a handsome group, aren't they? There is a lot of leadership ability represented among them. There are some exceptional scholars, some good athletes, and some all-around good citizens.

The University expects a lot of these second generation Duke freshmen, and the next four years will undoubtedly prove that these expectations are well founded. Not only this, but somewhere on these pages are pictured at least a few of the great leaders of the future. One of them may even be President some day. Who knows?

An Undergraduate's View

by Ronnie Nelson, '52

The 1951-52 Men's Student Government Association gave early promise of its up-and-comingness by bringing to Page Auditorium George V. Denny's "Town Meeting of the Air" radio program on Tuesday night, October 2. With President A. Hollis Edens as president of the meeting and Congressmen Charles J. Kersten and Richard Bolling as speakers, the pros and cons of "McCarthyism" were hotly debated both by the Representatives and by the large audience of faculty members, students, and townspeople. During a half-hour pre-broadcast session, members of the audience took to a portable microphone to present their views on the subject, and some highly enlightened opinions proved that many students had done some intelligent thinking on the situation.

The program followed its usual pattern. Each speaker gave his side of the case, and then the two fired questions and answers hack and forth. The closing fifteen minutes were given over to audience participation.

Although no decision was reached, for such is not the purpose of the meeting, the audience was given facts to digest on both sides of the issue, and came away better prepared to make up its mind one way or the other.

Once more the routine has set in. Initial greetings have all been shouted across slowly filling quadrangles. The fits and starts of first-week activity have settled down to their normal hum. Upperclassmen are back in harness again, happy to buckle down after the three-month vacation. Freshmen are rapidly hitting their stride, glad to be a part of life within the ivy-covered walls. Everything falls into place; the familiar pattern is evident.

And with this return to normalcy, the old student begins to look around, noting the things that have changed, the things that have remained the same, the things that will never change. The gaping hole opposite the library makes the new administration building appear not long from reality. And the summer progress of the grad dorm gives further proof of the advancement of the building program, although, to the old student, it more likely indicates an early end to the three-man room, so long one of his chief gripes. Enlargement and improvement of parking lots to accommodate more cars than ever on a campus that, this year, has more ears than ever, is looked upon as a fine achievement, badly needed and greatly appreciated. The establishment of parking regulations, on the other hand, with fines for violators, has been received with somewhat cooler welcome. This, however, is merely a case of educating the car owner, who eventually must resign himself to the price of progress.

High on the list of things "never to be changed" is the venerable practice of fertilizing the grass each fall with molding tobacco stems. At this, the old student might turn up his nose, but he is nostalgically reminded of other years. The beautiful flagstone walks still dip toward the center, the water still gathers in the same old places (when it rains—this has been a dry year), and the student still utters the same old expressions whenever he goes wading unawares. The bells of the Chapel continue to sing out with precise regularity the songs that are so much a part of the Duke scene. Some things are new, but most are familiar, and the old student wouldn't have it any other way.

It is a time of recruiting and re-recruiting among campus organizations. The elected and appointed leaders, untried but eager to succeed, are busy planning, organizing, and smoothing out. The old student is sought out by name, pushed higher on the ladder, and given his job to do. The freshman is contacted by high-pressure advertising, word of mouth, or campus-wide appeal. And when he shows up, he is sandwiched in at the bottom, from there to work up through the ranks, just as presidents have done before him. Gradually the chain is set up, and results begin to appear.

Duke Players announced the results of casting for its first production of the season, "Room Service," to be presented on Thursday and Friday evenings of this year's Homecoming Weekend.

Publications Row is the scene of frantic activity, which usually continues throughout the fall semester. The Chronicle has been busily putting out issues every week since it first appeared on Friday of Freshman Week. Its new blood has long since been injected in with the rejuvenated old, and the newspaper is thriving. A new Archive is expected to come forth before the month is out. And the Chanticleer plods its weary way, unknown to most, who as usual must wait until May for final results.

Shoe and Slipper Club's announcement that Ray McKinley is the "big name" for the fall dance weekend, and that the dates are November 2 and 3, sent men scurrying eastward. Where the "S and S" shindig is involved, nothing is left to chance, nor pushed off till the last minute.

It wasn't long after classes had begun that students were treated to the most exciting event to occur on the local Greek scene in several years. An honest-to-goodness IFC trial, complete with prosecution, defense, and jury, took two fraternities to task on illegal rushing charges. More important than the actual decisions was the proof that the Inter-Fraternity Council is a going concern, with the power to uphold its rules and the will to use this power.

With the football team under the new tutelage of Coach "Smilin' Bill Murray," this was not the season to have three away games lead off on the schedule, or so the disgruntled student thought. Advance notices being what they were and nothing being said, good or bad, for the team and its prospects, the student hardly knew what to expect when he turned his radio to the first game with South Carolina. Consequently he had to take the announcer's word for the prowess of Duke's star freshman quarterback and the rest of the "split-T" formation team, although the Blue Devils' five touchdowns, as opposed to one for the Gamecocks, helped convince him.

The Arts Council Comes of Age

One year is not much time for the process of growing up, but that, its members feel, is what the Duke University Arts Council has done. With a membership of more than four hundred, a capable staff of officers, and a notable record of achievement in its one year of existence, the new Arts Council is now an effective working organization.

There is, of course, room for more growth, for an expansion of activities and fulfillment of a program for fitting itself for the work it has set out to do. And that work, specifically, is to further artistic and musical activity at Duke University by encouraging talent and the appreciation of it in whatever ways it can and by financial assistance for special projects.

The program provides opportunities for both growing and established artists. It also provides members of the Council with enjoyment of the results of the artists' work.

During the past year, after it had struggled through usual throes of organization, the work of building up a membership of several hundred, the Council sponsored an exhibition of paintings and drawings by the well known Swiss artist, Paul Klee. Some of these paintings were lent by Duke's own Law Dean, J. A. McClain, Jr. Others came from the Yale University Art Gallery and the Phillips Gallery in Washington. The exhibition, open to the public, was in the East Campus Library Gallery. Members had the privilege of a preview accompanied by an interpretative lecture by John Canaday, an authority on Klee.

Later in the year the Council sponsored a concert by two nationally known vocalists, Norma Heyde, soprano, of the University of Michigan, and William Hess, tenor, of New York City. They appeared with the Duke University Chamber Orchestra.

Two of the most widely used and popular projects of the Council, and especially favored by the students at Duke University, are the record and art reproductions rental libraries which were established by the Council last year. The amount of $250 was allocated to each of these libraries. The recordings, of which there are at present 105, range from older classical composers such as Haydn and Beethoven to moderns such as Stravinsky and Bartok. The allotment for this year should just about double the size of the record collection, but requests for rentals will still exceed the supply.

Robert Stipe, '50, librarian of the Arts Council Record Library, and Mrs. Calvin B. Hoover, Arts Council president, examine a new acquisition.

In the library of art reproductions, there are only 24 framed and ready-to-loan pictures. The allotment for additions to the collection for this year is equal to that of last year, but the difficulties and costs of framing have not provided enough pictures to meet the requests for them.

One generous friend of the arts gave the Council $5,000 to improve conditions in the Library Gallery. Part of this was used to buy museum cases for the display of ceramics, textile arts, rare manuscripts, and similar art objects. Part is being used to install modern lighting in order to illuminate the various exhibits to better advantage.

This year, the opening event of the season was a concert in Asbury Hall on the East Campus by members of the music faculty. The attendance was so great that many had to be turned away at the door.

Among the scheduled events is a distinguished exhibition of Renaissance paintings, which will be lent to the Council by the Metropolitan Museum of Art for display from January 23 until February 15. They will be shown in the Library Gallery on the East Campus.

A problem of immediate concern is the improvement of the acoustics in the Women's College Auditorium. This auditorium is used frequently for musical and dramatic events, among which are the North Carolina Symphony and the Durham Choral Society.

The Council is interested also in providing space and facilities for work in sculpture. For this, plans are being considered for converting a small structure near Asbury Hall.

Officers of the Duke University Arts Council are: Mrs. C. B. Hoover, president; Philip Williams, vice-president; Mrs. Charles Dukes, treasurer; Mary Moss Wellborn, secretary; Miss Sarah Baldwin, corresponding secretary.

The Council has seven different types of memberships open to any person interested in promoting the interests of the fine arts at Duke University and in the community. They are: Student, $1.00; Regular, $2.00; Contributing, $5.00; Sustaining, $10.00; Sponsor, $25.00; Patron, $100.00; Memorial, any larger amount.

Memberships are received by the treasurer, Mrs. Charles A. Dukes, 1309 Oakland Avenue, Durham, North Carolina.

Ceremony Is Scheduled To Install R. A. Harvill

Dr. Richard Anderson Harvill, A.M. '27, will be inaugurated as president of the University of Arizona on November 16. Representing Duke University at the official ceremonies will be another Duke alumnus. Dr. Harvill assumed the duties of president in 1950 after having served at the University of Arizona as dean of the liberal arts college and dean of the graduate college. Mrs. Harvill is the former George Lee Garner, A.M. '30. They have two children.

Dr. David M. Harrison, A.M. '33, Ph.D. '41, represented Duke at the inauguration of Arthur Blair Knapp as president of Denison University, Granville, Ohio, on October 12. Dr. Harrison is an associate professor of economics at Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Harden F. Taylor, '10, scientific consultant and president of the New York Academy of Sciences, represented Duke at the inauguration of Jess Harrison Davis as president of Stevens Institute of Technology on October 12. Dr. Taylor lives at 1185 Park Avenue, New York City.

The inauguration of Edmund Harris Kase, Jr., as president of The Western College for Women, Oxford, Ohio, on October 13, was attended by C. M. Hutchings, '11, A.M. '14, special Duke representative. Mr. Hutchings is professor of romance languages at the University of Cincinnati.

Duke University was represented by Dr. Joseph A. McClain, Jr., dean of the Duke Law School, at the inauguration of Laurence A. Kimprou as chancellor of the University of Chicago on October 18.

N. C. P. A. President Shows Outstanding News Record

Thomas J. Lassiter, Jr., '32, co-editor and publisher of the Smithfield Herald, a semi-weekly newspaper in Johnston County, N. C., has been elected president of the North Carolina Press Association for the following year. The son of the late T. J. Lassiter, who served as president of the association in 1906 and 1907, he was escorted to the speakers' table by his mother, Mrs. Rena B. Lassiter, a former vice-president, when he was installed in office.

Mr. Lassiter, who came back to Duke for a year of graduate work after earning an A.B. degree in economics and history, is an active alumnus, serving now as chairman in the northeast central region of the state for the Duke Development Campaign.

The Smithfield Herald is a family project, being owned jointly by Mr. Lassiter, his mother and brother William C. Lassiter, '30, LL.B. '33, who is city attorney for Raleigh. When Mr. Lassiter, Sr., died in 1920, Mrs. Lassiter, though a novice in the field, took over the paper to "keep it for the boys," and two years later won the first Savory award for general excellence in weekly newspapers throughout the country. It was a going concern when, in the fall of 1933, Tom Lassiter forsook a musical career with Jelly Leftwich's dance band and made the paper his major occupation.

Today the Herald is the only rotary-printed non-daily in the state. The staff consists of 12 persons in addition to the owners. Tom's mother writes a folksy personal column and he writes the editorials. With an average circulation of 6,500, the paper is one of the 10 top semiweeklies.

In 1946 the paper took five first place awards in non-daily contests sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association. One award for the best editorial resulted from a piece Mr. Lassiter wrote taking a grand jury to task for exonerating an angry youth who admitted killing a Negro accused of stealing his hounds. Another first prize went to the Herald's harvest edition, which has become an annual monument to newspaper enterprise and hard work. The third was a citation for the Herald's community service in supporting a special 25-cent school supplement for the Smithfield school district.

In 1939 Mr. Lassiter married Elisabeth S. Johnson, a graduate of Meredith College and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Johnson of Raleigh and Fayetteville. They now have three children, Nancy Louise, 9, Thomas Wingate, 3, and Martha Ann, 1.

Mr. Lassiter played in the Duke University band as well as in dance bands during his undergraduate days, and still plays his trombone, but his second interest is football. As a Raleigh News and Observer article describes it, "Since the days when he voluntarily slopped through 'Kenan Lake' with the band for the Duke-Carolina game of 1930, he has been an incurable football fan. He remembers every Duke-Carolina football score since the turn of the century, and can describe the key plays that accounted for each score. When Duke wins, he is jubilant; when Duke loses, he takes it as hard as the most ardent freshman."

The article relates that once after a Duke defeat Lassiter vowed, in his eight-year-old daughter's hearing, that he'd never support another team. Nancy Louise, remembering many conversations at home in which her father had espoused the causes of liberals, protested, "But Daddy, there may be some LIBERALS on the team!"

ALAN K. MANCHESTER, PH.D. '30

Alan Manchester Leaves For Embassy in Brazil

Dr. Alan K. Manchester, Ph.D. '30, dean of undergraduate studies and professor of history at Duke, has been granted a year's leave of absence to serve as Cultural Affairs Officer at the United States Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. His appointment has recently been announced by the State Department.

A specialist in Latin-American affairs, and particularly in the field of the Portuguese Empire and history of Brazil, Dr. Manchester is one of the Nation's leading scholars in Brazilian affairs. He has taught at several South American colleges and lived in Brazil for five years where he was director of Moore Institute, Campinas, Sao Paulo, and president of Porto Alegre College, Porto Alegre, Rio Grande di Sue.

Numerous books and articles on Brazilian affairs have been written by Dr. Manchester, including "British Preeminence in Brazil" and a Descriptive Bibliography of the Duke Library's Brazilian Section. He recently collaborated on a new volume in the United Nations Series published by the University of California. Dr. Manchester's other writings cover the scope of international relations, politics, history and Brazilian literature.

Dr. Manchester received his A.B. degree from Vanderbilt, and his M.A. degree from Columbia. In addition he received academic training at Southwestern University. Before coming to Duke in 1929 he taught at Wallace University School in Nashville and the University of Oklahoma. He also taught for one year at Trinity Park School, the preparatory school for Trinity College before it became Duke. Prior to his present position as dean of undergraduate studies, he served as dean of freshmen at Duke.

Miller Is Named Dean

W. Starr Miller, a Duke graduate student in educational administration, has been named dean of Bessie Tift College in Forsyth, Ga. At 29 years of age, he is the youngest dean of a four-year college in Georgia. In addition to his duties as dean, he will be chairman of the Education Department.

Having completed residence study for the Doctor of Education degree at Duke, Mr. Miller will write his doctoral dissertation on problems of practice teachers and beginning teachers in public schools. While at Duke, he served as a supervisor of practice teaching.

A native of Plainville, Ga., Mr. Miller is also an alumnus of the University of Georgia, West Georgia College and De Paul University. A World War II veteran, he taught education courses at Young Harris College in Georgia, where he was also dean of men and assistant to the president, before coming to Duke.

Bierstein Is Commended

Joseph F. Bierstein, Jr., '38, is the subject of a highly commendatory letter to President Edens from the headquarters of the Armed Forces Information School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. The letter was occasioned by the outstanding work of Mr. Bierstein on the compilation of the first edition of "The Army Almanac," a pioneer effort of the Department of the Army in the field of public information.

Colonel D. M. King, U. S. Army officer in charge of the "Almanac," wrote that Mr. Bierstein "performed his duties as research editor for over four years in a highly satisfactory manner, and was, in fact, the only individual who survived the extreme pressure and exacting requirements throughout the life of the project." The Duke alumnus has finished the project and is now a civilian employee of the Army public information department, with offices in the Pentagon Building.

ROGER KIRCHOFER, '51

Missing In Action

First Lieutenant Roger B. Kirchofer, '51, has been reported missing in action in Korea since May 18. He was recalled to active duty early this year and has been in Korea since March. He was serving with the Second Division, Company B, 38th Infantry, and had been in continued action of the East Central Front.

During World War II, Lt. Kirchofer served in the Southwest Pacific, and was later stationed with the army of occupation in Japan and in Korea, where he was on loan from the Army to the military government to help train the military constabulary. When war broke out in Korea, this constabulary formed the nucleus of the South Korean Army.

Lt. Kirchofer's wife, the former Elizabeth Bryson, '52, and his parents live at 2207½ White Oak Road, Raleigh, N. C.

Local Association Meetings

Roanoke, Va.

Dr. Fred E. Hamlin, '13, presided over the dinner meeting of the Roanoke Duke Alumni Association October 11. Dean Robert Cox spoke on the theme, "Assembly Line Education Versus Real Education." After dinner the group was entertained by Mr. Lechie of the Standard Oil Company, who presented an interesting film on "Historic Virginia." The scheduled election of officers was postponed until a later date.

Knoxville, Tenn.

The Hotel Andrew Johnson, Knoxville, Tenn., was the scene of a very informal but entertaining get-together of some Duke alumni attending the Duke-Tennessee football game on October 6.

E. P. Bethune, '48, Ann Markin Bethune (Mrs. E. P.), '48, Clarence Smith, '48, Mickey Lundeborg Smith (Mrs. Clarence), '49, all of Louisville, Ky.; P. Frank Hanes, Jr., '50, and Mrs. Hanes, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; and B. Everett Jordan, Jr., '51, and Ellen McMasters Jordan (Mrs. B. Everett), a Duke junior, of Saxapahaw, N. C., were entertaining all Duke alumni visiting Knoxville for the game.

Duke spirit, even after the defeat suffered at the hands of Tennessee's squad, was undaunted. One unidentified, but distinguished looking gentleman paraded through the lobby of the Andrew Johnson with his fine bulldog. The animal made no bones about the fact that he and his master were avid Dukemen, for he wore a big "D" blanket around his middle.

Forsyth County

The Forsyth County Alumni Association honored the Children's Home and Bill Murray at a television party of the Duke-Pitt football game Saturday, September 29. They had as their guests, boys and girls from the Children's Home, coaches and their football squads from schools throughout the county, and all football fans. BOOKS

LIE DOWN IN DARKNESS

by William Styron, '47. Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Some of the most generous praise recently showered by literary critics on new writers has been given William Styron, '47, for his first novel, Lie Down in Darkness, published by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Maxwell Geismar, in the Saturday Review of Literature, calls the book "practically perfect" and the "best novel of the year." He thinks it is "one of the few completely human and mature novels published since the Second World War." John W. Aldridge of the New York Times feels one can say "he has produced a first novel containing some of the elements of greatness, one with which the work of no other young writer of 25 can be compared, and that he has done brilliant justice to the Southern tradition from which his talent derives." Still other critics compare him to such acclaimed authors as William Faulkner and Thomas Wolfe.

William Styron came to Duke as a member of the Navy V-12 program after studying at Christchurch School for Boys in Virginia and Davidson College. At Duke one of his elective courses was creative writing, taught by Dr. William Blackburn, and it was in this class that he discovered writing was to be both his goal and his unrelenting taskmaster. One of his short stories was included in One and Twenty, an anthology of Duke student writing edited by Dr. Blackburn and published by the Duke University Press. His stories have also appeared in the Archive. Mr. Styron readily admits that writing for him is the hardest thing in the world, but also something which, once a project is completed, is the most satisfying.

The highly recommended novel was begun in a novel workshop taught by Dr. Hiram Haydn, New York editor and former creative writing teacher at the Woman's College in Greensboro. Over a laborious three-year period, the book was written, polished and finally published. It is the story of an upper-middle-class family in the Tidewater society of Virginia, which is doomed because its members have lost the capacity to love. Peyton Loftis, the eldest daughter of the family, dies by her own hand at the beginning of the book, and through a series of cutbacks the story of her life and the reasons for its end are traced. Her father, a weakling, makes a desperate and futile attempt to salvage his family life, but fails, ending always in a drunken stupor. Her mother, a neurotic and unloved woman, tries to find herself through religion. The defective younger daughter, Maudie, is described as one of the most original elements in the story.

The book has no "thesis," no "frame of reference," but is first and foremost a domestic tragedy, and an absorbing story. The precise technique enables the reader to be with the characters at parties, football games, weddings, and to sympathize with their inevitable shortcomings. Mr. Styron did not intend his novel to be about the South, though the story is laid there. He has tried to portray family wreckage and defeat as it could happen anywhere under the circumstances.

His first attempt having met with such success, William Styron is destined to make an enviable place for himself in the literary world.

Blue Devil Runners Are Pacing Team To

Around Duke, they're calling the new-look football squad "the comeback kids." After soundly trouncing South Carolina 34-6 in the season's opener under Duke's first alumnus coach, William D. "Bill" Murray, the Blue Devils rolled back in the last minutes of games with Pitt and N. C. State for wins. They lost to Tennessee's powerful grid machine, 26-0.

The Blue Devils defeated the University of Pittsburgh 19-14 at Pittsburgh on September 29, then sank to their depths against Tennessee the following week, losing 26-0 while committing seven fumbles and having two of seven passes intercepted. As the REGISTER went to press, Duke had come from behind to defeat N. C. State 27-21 in Murray's home debut as Blue Devil mentor.

A quick summary of the Pitt, Tennessee and N. C. State games:

PITTSBURGH—Duke scored after five minutes, halfback Red Smith smashing over from the three. Green kicked the extra point. Pitt took the ensuing kick-off and drove 64 yards for a touchdown, Cimeroli going through center for 15 yards and the score. Blanda kicked the extra point. Early in the second period, Duke scored again, the drive being started by a blocked kick by soph tackle Ed Meadows and a return of the kick by Blaine Earon to the Pitt 15. The Blue

Blue Devil Geography

An examination of the geographical distribution of the hometowns of the 1951 Murray-coached Blue Devils reveals that Duke is fielding a team predominantly natives of North Carolina.

The squad roster lists 78 names, including 28 backs and 50 linemen. Of these 78 hoys, a total of 43 are native North Carolinians. Included are such standouts as Charlie Smith, Red Smith, Jim Gibson, Piney Field, "Country" Meadows, Carl James, and many others.

Other states represented on the Blue Devil squad are, in order of their predominance: Pennsylvania with 10 players; Virginia with five; Georgia, Kentucky, New York, and New Jersey, all with three each; the District of Columbia and Maryland with two each; and Indiana, Wyoming, and Minnesota with one each.

There are, in all, 13 states that have contributed to the '51 team.

Devils scored when Red Smith blasted off right tackle for three yards. Extra point try blocked. Duke led at halftime 13-7. Pitt drove 92 yards early in the second half to score and kicked the extra point to lead 14-13. Blanda booted the point after Bestwick passed to Warriner for 16 yards and the six-pointer. A 41-yard punt return to the Pitt 27 by safetyman George Grune set the Blue Devils up for their pay-off touchdown in the final quarter. With Charlie and Red Smith carrying the ball, the Dukes scored, Charlie tallying on a two-yard smash. Green's try for the extra point was wide.

TENNESSEE—Duke lost the services of senior end Gene Brooks of Durham for the season as result of his suffering a broken arm in this game. The Vols drove 48 yards for their first score in the first quarter, Hank Lauricella faking a hand-off and racing 28 yards for the marker. Reichiehar kicked the extra point. The tough Tennessee crew scored again on the third play of the second period, Ernsberger copping a 34-yard drive by going over from the one. The extra point try failed. With ten seconds left in the third period, Harold Payne bucked over for the Vols' third touchdown on a drive that started on Duke's 48. Kolenick kicked the extra point. Payne passed to end Frank Alexander for 17 yards for the final touchdown with only four minutes left in the game. The extra point try failed as Tennessee won, 26-0.

N. C. STATE—The Blue Devils led 13-0 early in this game, only to have the Wolfpack come back and go ahead 14-13, a lead they held at halftime. The Devils got their first score late in the first period, 218-pound fullback Jack Kistler, voted athlete of the week in North Carolina for his performance in the game, blasting over from the two for the score. Duke drove 64 yards for the touchdown. Extra point try failed. Charlie Smith circled right end for nine yards and the second touchdown on the third play of the second period. An intercepted pass by freshman Worth Lutz on State's 42 set up the score. Green kicked the extra point. State took the following kick-off, however, to drive from their 34 for a touchdown. Jim O'Rourke went over from the two. Barkouskie kicked the extra point. Duke fumbled in its own territory and State recovered to start the Wolfpack on their second scoring drive shortly afterwards. An interference penalty put the ball on the Duke one and after three scoring tries failed, Webster went over for the Pack from the one. The extra point try was good and

New Record

State led 14-13. State got another touchdown on the first play of the final period, Moyer passing 13 yards to Kosilla for the marker. A Duke fumble recovered by the Paek on the Duke 23 set up the score. Again the extra point try was good and State led by 21-13. The Blue Devils were down, but not out. They came back in five plays to score, Red Smith cross-bucking for 11 yards and the score. Green's extra point try was good, cutting the margin to 21-20. Then, after the kick-off was fumbled deep in State territory and the Duke defensive line held State's offensive thrusts to no gain, the Blue Devils were off to the races again. After George Grune returned a State punt to the Wolf-pack 37, the Devils scored in seven plays. Charlie Smith went off tackle for two yards and the six-pointer. Green kicked the extra point for a 27-21 win. Duke's seven fumbles in the State game gave them a total of 14 for the last two games. They recovered only four of these.

Jumping away to a four-touchdown lead in the first period, Duke's Blue Devils went on to crush Virginia Tech 55-6 in the Oyster Bowl game at Norfolk, Va., on October 20. Report on this game was received just as the REGISTER was going to press.

The Blue Devils scored the first time they got their hands on the ball, driving 79 yards for the score. Featuring the drive were a 23-yard run by Red Smith and a pass by Quarterback Jerry Barger. Fullback Jack Kistler raced over from 28 yards out. Ray Green added the first of seven extra points.

Barger scored the second one a few minutes later after a VPI fumble on the eight and a five-yard offside penalty. VPI then fumbled on the 28 and Charlie Smith, Jack Kistler and Piney Field alternated in carrying it across, Field making the final yard. That made it 21-0 Duke after 8:25.

Dud Hager, later in that period, intercepted a Gohbler pass on the Tech 32. Field, Barger, Kistler and Charlie Smith alternated in taking it to the one from where Charlie carried it across.

A new star appeared on the Duke horizon in the second period when Charlie Niven, the celebrated freshman back from Wilmington, entered the game and led Duke to its fifth touchdown. He started the Blue Devils on a 69-yard drive with a 30 yard oftackle jaunt and then made another nine yard run to the three to set up the touchdown which was scored by Lloyd Caudle.

Blue Devils Out of Uniform

Charlie Smith made the longest run of the day on the third play of the second half when he took a pitchout from Barger and raced 85 yards for a touchdown.

A few minutes later Duke had another one after VPI fumbled on the 16. Charlie Smith got nine and Field drove it over from the seven.

Duke's final marker was on a great run by Field. He went off tackle, broke into the open and then simply outran the Tech secondary. Field is a 9.6 man in track.

Faculty Items

Dean Wilson Is Named To Educational Group

Miss Florence K. Wilson, dean of the Duke University School of Nursing, has been named a member of a new Committee on Nursing Education by the Southern Regional Educational Program.

The 17 educators, nursing specialists, members of state boards and hospital administrators who make up the committee will study the critical need for nurses in 14 Southern states. It is the latest extension in a regional project through which Southern states have pooled efforts to improve educational programs. The committee met for the first time at Board headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., on October 9-10.

As president of the North Carolina State League of Nursing Education, Miss Wilson expressed her "wholehearted agreement" with the plans of the program to collect facts and recommend steps to improve the training of nurses in Southern states.

Professor Cites Need of Help for Schools

Dr. A. M. Proctor, professor in the Education Department, was leader of a five-day meeting of the National Council on Schoolhouse Construction in Minneapolis, Minn., during the first of October.

"It is high time to think of obtaining school-buildings and equipment on a State-wide rather than a local basis," said Dr. Proctor, who is president of the Council, at the opening session. His speech was entitled "A Possible Way to Procure More Schoolhouses for the Tax Dollar."

"In the past it has been common for school administrators and the public generally . . . to vigorously oppose any movement which looked in the direction of centralization," Dr. Proctor said. "But . . . the public school is a social institution and . . . must serve a social purpose."

For the sake of both economy and functionalism, Dr. Proctor suggests that State-financed school buildings would be much cheaper in the long run because a pay-as-you-go plan could be used, and properly designed buildings for each area could be obtained from expert and experienced school architects rather than local ones who have never before designed a school. He also believes contracting would be better and less expensive when done by regular school contractors.

Jack Persons Honored

The Durham Chapter of the American Red Cross has awarded Walter S. (Jack) Persons, '32, Duke swimming and lacrosse coach, a medal and certificate of appreciation for leadership in the Red Cross water safety program.

Coach Persons, who has been at Duke since 1930, is now in charge of all Duke water safety activities and has contributed over 6,000 hours to the program.

A special swimming examiner and water safety chairman in Reading, Pa., in 1927 and 1928, Coach Persons came to Durham in 1929 and taught water safety for the Durham Red Cross chapter. He was then made chairman of the water safety program for Durham County.

Durham Ministers Join Divinity Staff for 1941

Two well-known Durham ministers have also joined the Divinity School faculty as lecturers in practical theology during the coming academic year. They are Dr. Kelsey Regen, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Edgar L. Hillman, superintendent, Durham District of the Methodist Church.

Dr. Regen, a native of Tennessee, will lecture during the fall semester. He is an alumnus of Davidson College and the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary.

Dr. Hillman will be spring semester lecturer. An alumnus of Millsaps College, Emory University and Edinburgh University, Scotland, he is a native of Mississippi.

Religious Activities Director

Roland W. Rainwater, B.D. '44, former chaplain to Methodist students at Duke who has been associate minister in the First Methodist Church in Coral Gables, Fla., for the past few years, has been appointed director of student religious activities on West Campus. He will also be a member of the University Chaplain's staff.

A native of Roberdell, N. C., Mr. Rainwater is also an alumnus of Louisburg College and Wofford College. He served two years during World War II as chaplain with the United States Navy and later held Methodist pastorates at Kitty Hawk and Louishurg College.

Mrs. Rainwater is the former Zillah J. Merritt, '43.

Dr. Russell, Former Dean, Dies in Florida

Dr. Elbert Russell, dean emeritus of Duke University Divinity School, died September 21 in a hospital in St. Petersburg, Fla. The 80-year-old professor, lecturer and author, ill for several weeks, suffered a heart attack. Funeral services were conducted at Baynard's Chapel by the Society of Friends.

Dr. Russell came to Duke in 1926 as professor of Biblical Interpretation and was made dean of the Divinity School in 1929. He retired from the deanship in 1941 but continued to teach a few years before he and Mrs. Russell moved to St. Petersburg.

A native of Friendsville, Tenn., Dr. Russell was educated at Earlham College and the University of Chicago. Last spring he was honored by Haverford College with an L.D. degree. Following World War I, Dr. and Mrs. Russell traveled and lectured in Europe and South America. He served on the faculties of Earlham College, Johns Hopkins University, Woolman College, Haverford College, and Swarthmore College as well as Duke during his long career as teacher and theologian. Earlier this year he served a short term as professor of religion in the College of the Gulf States at Mobile, Ala., a project planned for retired educators still interested in teaching. Dr. Russell is the author of "A History of Quakerism," which won him the Mayflower literary award, and several other volumes on religious subjects.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lieuetta Cox, a childhood friend whom he married in 1895; a daughter, Marcia Russell Gobel (Mrs. Luther L.), A.M. '28, wife of the president of Greensboro College; a son, Dr. Joseph Cox Russell, head of the department of history at the University of New Mexico; a sister, Mrs. Carl Bowen, Fort Wayne, Ind.; and five grandchildren.

I made the right choice the first time!

I wanted to avoid a trial-and-error beginning. So in January, 1949, after I graduated from UCLA, I made a list of the four things I wanted most out of a career. (1) was a business of my own requiring no capital; (2) was an income not limited by slow, scheduled raises or a ceiling; (3) a sense of contributing something to society, and (4) the chance to live in the community of my choice.

The only career that fitted all these points, I was rather surprised to learn, was life insurance. I had liked the advertising of New England Mutual, so I stopped in at one of their Los Angeles offices. I was really sold by the caliber of the men I met there, and by their sincerity and helpful attitude. I signed up, and started in on the company's comprehensive training program.

During my second year in the business, I sold enough life insurance to bring me two or three times the income I could have expected from a salaried job, so soon out of college. And at the same time, I have the satisfaction of adding to the security and peace of mind of the families I have served.

No wonder I'm sure that, in choosing a career and a company, I made the right choice the first time!

William M. Shelton, Jr.

If you would like more information about a career in which your individual ability and industry—and nothing else — determine your income, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston St., Boston 17, Mass.

• • •

One reason New England Mutual agents do so well is that they have a truly fine product to sell. The New England Mutual life insurance policy is a liberal and flexible contract that can give you just the kind of financial help you require.

And you will be pleasantly surprised to find that the rates for many New England Mutual policies are lower today than they were 20 years ago!

If you are interested in having your life insurance program custom-tailored to fit your personal or business needs, get in touch with one of your own alumni listed below, or one of the other 700 college-trained men who represent New England Mutual from Maine to Hawaii.

These Duke University men are New England Mutual representatives:

Kenneth V. Robinson, '31, Hartford
George D. Davis, CLU, '37, Charlotte
Charles R. Williams, '42, Manchester

New England Mutual would like to add several qualified Duke University men to its sales organization which is located in the principal cities from coast to coast. If you are interested, write to Mr. Chaney as directed above.

What happens to all the college graduates General Electric hires?

About 55 per cent of the graduates of General Electric's Business Training Course are now making their careers in accounting and auditing work. About 17 per cent are in marketing; 15 per cent in administrative and management; 3 per cent in advertising; 3 per cent in manufacturing; with 7 per cent in fields ranging from purchasing to employee relations.

Of the more than ten thousand engineers and other specialists at General Electric, about 60 per cent are in some phase of engineering or research, with 20 per cent in marketing, and the other 20 per cent in manufacturing, purchasing, etc.

Figures like these help to prove that there are no fixed paths for college graduates at General Electric. The graduate who enters a G-E training program doesn't commit himself irrevocably to one type of work.

It's a G-E tradition to encourage the newcomer to look around, try several different assignments on for size, find the kind of job which he believes will be most satisfying and to which he can make the greatest contribution.

The next Saturday was a slight improvement in the eyes of the student, in that the Pitt meet came over the local television station. Something new for the Duke student, the televised game gave rise to a new fraternity sport—the TV open house. For three and a half hours, the brothers and dates sat in darkened chapter rooms, gulping punch and cookies, and wildly cheering the tiny figures cavorting on the screen. But with the first real live home game, the consensus of opinion was that TV was "awright" but there's no substitute for the real thing.

And so the year is well begun, the cycle well entered into. To the accustomed ear, the campus is quiet. Only the spirited cheers from nocturnal pep rallies and occasional outbursts of song rise above the ever-present murmur. To the accustomed mind, life moves at an even and gradual pace. Only the weekend parties and unexpected quizzes jar the pattern. Old students and new, men and women are going about the business of education, at times perhaps frivolously, but in general, with a directness of purpose that is always a surprise to their elders.

"OPERATION OPERATION"

Army-Navy parlance describes this medical undertaking which demands the utmost in skill and patience of physicians, nurses and technicians. We like to think that the services of another technician—the Blue Cross-Blue Shield Plan—contribute to the success of "Operation Operation" by providing priceless peace of mind to the patient in guaranteeing payment of hospital-surgical benefits.

The Homecoming Queen, Miss Ruth Ann Fisher, a junior from Raleigh, N. C., is escorted from the field by William M. Werber, '30, president of the Alumni Association, after the half-time crowning ceremony. The band serenades Queen Ruth Ann before some 35,000 Homecoming spectators.

THE DEPARTMENT OF ALUMNI AFFAIRS

The Directors

The attendance at Homecoming was the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of such events. More alumni came earlier and stayed longer than ever before. The addition of tables at the Homecoming Barbecue made it possible for the alumni to see each other and visit in comfort. In every way those present expressed their approval of the idea of having the luncheon in the old gym on the West Campus, rain or shine; so if you were not happy with the arrangements, now is the time to speak up or first thing you know the place will become established through habit. The student decorations on Friday night were viewed by several thousands of alumni, townspeople, and members of the University community. Homecoming seems to get bigger and better every year!

The Engineers had their business meeting on Saturday morning. The lawyers had planned to have an occasion on Saturday morning, but because their building wasn't ready—you see, they are doing Fall cleaning—they decided to put it off until the day of the Carolina-Duke game. The Law alumni who haven't seen the building since it has been painted and had the Fall cleaning would do well to come by and see it. It's mighty pretty.

Basketball season gets under way on December 1 at home. Our first opponent is Temple University. There is a complete schedule in this issue of the REGISTER. If you would like a card schedule for your desk or pocket, drop us a line.

December 15 is the deadline for applications for the Angier Duke awards. If there is a young man or woman in your neighborhood who should be a candidate for these awards, please have them ask their principal about the awards or write directly to the Alumni Office.

Founders Day is December 11. Put a ring around this date on your calendar and plan to be back on the campus.

More than 2,200 alumni and friends have made gifts to the Development Program since Commencement. This participation is wonderful, but it is not good enough for the Duke alumni family. The program will not be a success unless your name is listed as a donor. Remember, Duke University didn't begin as a university. It started as a cooperative movement in the little town of Trinity because a few people wanted better training for their sons and daughters and were willing to give in accordance with their means to establish Union Institute. If each of you will give according to your means, whatever the gift may be, Duke University will continue to be a great institution.

William Sprinkle steals the show with his part of the Duke in the Taurian's play "Wappin' Warf," which was directed by Mrs. Paul Gross.

A rumor around campus has it that the university will sponsor dances in the gym—something new in the social life of Duke students.

NOVEMBER, 1901

Five professors spent the past summer in Europe studying. In describing their industrious study, the Raleigh Christian Advocate refers to the whole Trinity faculty as a "Crowd of Workers."

President Kilgo is advocating scholarships for Trinity students. Fifty undergraduate scholarships were offered this year, ranging from $50 to $75. Twenty of these were awarded upon competitive examinations, and all were based on proficiency in scholarship.

Dear Friends:

I appreciate the REGISTER so much. I knew Plummer Stewart at Old Trinity. Glad to know he lived a very useful life. I was in the class of '94, but could not graduate for want of funds. Have just passed my eighty-first birthday.

I notice you have a new pictorial folder. I would like so much to have a copy.

One of your fellow alumni,

Very sincerely,

As a retired missionary, my income of $75.00 a month does not make it possible for me to help in any amount that counts. But this small pledge for your time of three years will help you to "ring up another record of success" for our class, perhaps. So here is my small token gift and pledge. I wish it might be fifty times that amount.

My short six months at Duke University in the '90's pay me well in friends and in a feeling of ownership of our great University.

Your letter of June 27th addressed to me in care of International General Electric (India), reminds me that I have been very lax in keeping the Department advised about my whereabouts and also I have followed my past practice for being generally negligent in correspondence. My only plea is that in building a new business in a new country, there does not seem to be time enough to maintain contacts with the past. Perhaps the Duke psychologists would have some comments to make on this, but actually it seems as though all of us are looking only into the future, and Duke and North Carolina seem many miles and many years away.

I particularly appreciate your writing to inform me of a Duke post-graduate from India who will be returning to this Continent. Unfortunately it is doubtful that we shall meet because I have been transferred from our Indian Company back to the staff of our New York office, and I am stationed in Karachi as a territorial representative of the New York Company, assigned to Pakistan and Afghanistan. As you have noted in recent newspapers, there is not the interchange

Did You Know President Few?

Your University Press is publishing in December a collection of his papers and addresses which you will want for your library. A biographical appraisal which constitutes over one-third of the book makes for fascinating reading. Since William P. Few was associated with your institution for over forty years—and as President led it through the important years of changing from Trinity College to Duke University—his life and writings are of interest not only to you who knew him, but to you who only know of his work.

Homecoming

Upper left, the Duke University Band formed a champagne glass to toast the Homecoming Queen at half time. Realism was achieved with soap bubbles emerging from the top of the glass. The queen and her court entered the field through the hollow stem of the glass.

Center, above, William M. Werber, '30, president of the General Alumni Association crowns pretty Ruth Ann Fisher, junior from Alspaugh, Homecoming Queen. Charles Slay, son of Dean and Mrs. James Slay, was crownbearer.

Top right, the largest barbecue crowd in history gathered in the West Campus old gym for heaping plates of barbecue and fried chicken.

Lower left, a huge pep meeting, complete with band and cheer leaders, climaxed an evening of gaiety and carnival spirit on Friday before Homecoming. After viewing the decorations and attending open houses on campus, Duke rooters were in the mood to do some cheering.

Center, below, House L took freshman honors for first place decoration. A cheerful Blue Devil plunged his trident into a broiling and grimacing Cavalier, who was emitting groans of anguish all evening.

Right center, the Lambda Chi Alpha Cowvalier, being milked dry, of course, by the Blue Devil, marched off with first prize for fraternity decorations.

Homecoming Crowd Is One of the Largest

Students and Alumni Join in Full Week End of Gay Events

More than 700 alumni, coming from 21 states, Washington, D. C., and Argentina, registered for the 1951 Duke Homecoming on October 27. It was one of the largest registrations in Duke Homecoming history. Many more, particularly from the immediate area, attended the game and other events of the week end, but did not get to the Union Lobby to register.

The class of 1950 had the largest registration, followed closely by 1951 and 1949. Outside of North Carolina, Virginia and South Carolina were the states with the most Duke alumni returning.

Mary Katherine (Kay) Jordan, '49, coming all the way from Buenos Aires, Argentina, made the longest trip to attend Homecoming. Other alumni who traveled many miles to take part in the festivities of the week end were: Howard "Rube" Churchill, '39, Portland, Me.; Ernest Cutler, Jr., '45, Newmarket, N. H.; Wylie Gardt, '39, Merrimac, Mass.; Rex Gresham, '47, Dallas, Tex.; R. M. Johnston, Jr., '45, Evanston, Ill.; George Bushnell, Jr., '51, Winnetka, Ill.; Charles W. Hill, '43, La Grange, Ill.; J. Robert Hotel, '43, Albany, N. Y.; John W. Patten, '43, and Jane Strohm Patten, '45, Indianapolis, Ind.; Henry C. Brown, '41, Gainesville, Fla.; C. C. Parker, '21, Tampa, Fla.; R. L. Allen, '47, St. Petersburg, Fla.; and R. H. Ricks, '33, Ft. Myers, Fla.

The Plyler twins, Drs. M. T. and A. W., '92, who celebrated their 84th birthdays in September, were the oldest alumni to register. Both famous football players in their college days, they played, in fact, in the first interstate, intercollegiate game in the South. That game just happened to be between Virginia and Duke, and it is of further coincidence that Virginia was victor on that memorable occasion also.

Homecoming Carnival

Campus decorations, complete and in working order, were floodlighted Friday night. According to popular opinion, the displays were "best ever." Crowds from town joined students and alumni as spectators on the carnival-like campus. BOS and Sandals members, stationed at the bus stop and between the dormitory quadrangles and gym, served as guides. Some of the crowd came early enough to see the decorations and to be at Page Auditorium in time to see the Duke Players' production of "Room Service." Fraternity open houses supplied students and their alumni brothers with cider, cokes and cookies. The open houses, a new thing for Friday night, provided a resting place for weary alumni, who had walked from one end of the campus to the other to see the sights. All the quadrangles were turned into miniature midways with puppet shows, charging Blue Devils, and harassed Cavaliers. The ATO House of Horrors completed the carnival atmosphere. A huge pep meeting climaxed the evening.

A committee made up of townspeople who judged the displays found their job was extremely difficult because all the decorations were so eye-catching. Winners were kept secret until halftime on Saturday when they were awarded prizes by Carl Sapp, '49, assistant manager of the Chamber of Commerce, assisted by Carrel Power, Sandals president, and Duane Wolf, BOS president. House L won first prize for freshmen; House P took second place, and honorable mention was given to House M.

Lambda Chi Alpha, with their startled-looking Cow-valier, won acclaim as winner of the first prize for fraternities, while Phi Kappa Sigma took second with their football team jury and Judge Murray sentencing a red nosed Cavalier for his crimes. Of course, a Blue Devil was serving as attorney. Honorable mention was given Pi Kappa Alpha, Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Town Boys.

Barbecue and Chicken

Registration reopened at 9:00 o'clock in the Union Lobby on Saturday morning. By the time the annual alumni barbecue began at 11:30, the campus was jammed. Down in the gym, heaping plates of barbecue, fried chicken and all the trimmings were served to more than 850 people, the largest barbecue crowd on record. The student Homecoming Committee served as special hosts. Decorations in keeping with the football atmosphere had already been put up for the dance to be held that evening, adding to the gaiety of the occasion.

The Virginia Band performed for the Homecoming crowd before the game. At the half the Duke Band went through several intricate formations. The stellar halftime event was the crowning of pretty Ruth Ann Fisher, Raleigh, N. C., as Homecoming Queen by William M. Werber, '30, Washington, D. C., president of the General Alumni Association. The queen entered the field through the stem of a hollow-stemmed champagne glass formed by the band to toast her highness. Maid of honor was Yvonne Schweistris, Greensboro, N. C., and the little crown bearer was Charlie Slay, son of Dean and Mrs. J. M. Slay. Other attendants were Molly Bixby, Detroit, Mich.; Joanne Cannon, Ankara, Turkey; Ann Goode, Lincolnton, N. C.; Nancy Hobbs, Rocky Mount, N. C.; Joyce Mouillesseaux, Nursing, Glen Rock, N. J.; Kay Richards, Marion, Pa.; Betsy Thompson, Durham; and Lois Waldrop, Greenville, N. C. Following the coronation, the band formed a football helmet under which the Homecoming decoration awards were presented.

Following the gridiron battle, many alumni attended traditional post-game fraternity open houses. Pi Kappa Alpha observed their Golden Anniversary with a banquet for student members and alumni at Harvey's cafeteria.

Senior-sponsored Dance

Though the score left much to be desired, spirits did not seem to be dampened in the least. After dinner, many alumni attended the Homecoming dance sponsored by the senior class. The Duke Ambassadors furnished music for dancing. At intermission, Dick Crowder, president of the Trinity College senior class, presented Queen Ruth Ann Fisher, her court, and their escorts. On behalf of the class, Dick presented a silver loving cup to the queen.

Although official Homecoming activities ended Sunday morning with a special Homecoming sermon by Dr. James T. Cleland entitled "A Colony of Heaven," a number of alumni were still on hand to attend the Sunday night sing. An extra-special production of "Ballad for Americans" was presented by Giles House and several West Campus students.

Alpha-Alpha Chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity observed its golden anniversary on the Duke Campus during Homecoming week end. Some 500 members of the fraternity were on the campus for the event. Highlight of the 50th year celebration was a banquet at Harvey's Cafeteria on Saturday evening. At the speakers' table were, left to right, Robert G. Moseley, junior from Bluefield, W. Va., program chairman; Colonel John D. Langston, '03, Goldsboro, N. C.; E. Wade Cranford, '03, Troy, N. C.; Dr. Hersey E. Spence, '07, Duke professor of Biblical Literature and religious education; L. A. McCall, Jr., Florence, S. C., national association vice-president; and Christie G. Harris, senior from Washington, D. C., president of the chapter this year. Mr. Cranford and Col. Langston are two of the three living charter members of the Duke chapter founded in 1901. Edward O. Smithdeal, '03, Roanoke, Va., the third living charter member, was unable to attend. All three were awarded charter member certificates. The chapter was also presented national fraternity awards for scholarship and proficiency, based on last year's achievements.

"Dads' Day" Draws 250 Fathers

Duke University "Dads' Day," held on November 10, brought approximately 250 fathers of Duke freshman and sophomore men to the campus. Dads' Day is sponsored annually by the Duke Y.M.C.A. Bob Younts, junior from High Point is president of the organization this year.

The fathers were guests of the Duke University Athletic Association at the Duke-Wake Forest football game in the afternoon. Robert B. Cox, dean of undergraduate men, was speaker at the annual father-son banquet held that evening in the Union dining hall.

A Saturday night variety show, depicting the "Inside View" of campus life furnished after dinner entertainment. Dick Hanner, junior from Asheville, was master-of-ceremonies. Presented in the East Campus Auditorium, "Inside View" contained acts from last year's Hoof 'n' Horn show "Belles and Ballots" and a special performance by Durham ventriloquist Leslie Hummel. Song stunts by a triple trio from the Men's Glee Club, a freshman orchestra, an adagio dance team, and a Duke Players reading completed the show.

Dr. William E. Parks, president of the Northfield School of Massachusetts delivered the special Dads' Day sermon on Sunday morning in the University Chapel. Chairman Bob Younts presided. The fathers were also invited to attend the various denominational Bible classes with their sons on Sunday morning.

Alumnae Week End

Dates: April 4, 5, 6

Featured speaker: Dr. Glora M. Wysner, consultant and secretary to the International Missionary Council in Association with the World Council of Churches. She is also the author of Near East Panorama.

Bertram Russell Speaks

A capacity crowd filled the East Campus Auditorium on the evening of November 6 to hear Lord Bertram Russell, winner of the 1950 Nobel Prize for Literature, speak on "How Can Civilized Man Be Happy." The 79-year-old writer, scientist and philosopher appeared under the auspices of the Woman's Student Forum Committee.

The author of more books and articles than even he is able to remember, Lord Russell believes that a happy world is possible and may be brought about by using the right methods in educating children.

Lord Bertram Russell is the third Lord Russell and is the grandson of Lord John Russell, who was a British prime minister under Queen Victoria. He lives a few miles from London with his son and daughter-in-law Susan Lindsay, daughter of American poet Vachel Lindsay.

Coach Coombs Honored

Duke University is not the only place which can boast of having a Coombs Field. Colby College, the alma mater of Duke baseball coach John W. Coombs, dedicated its new baseball park on the Saturday of their last commencement in June, 1951. It is named Coombs Field in honor of Coach Coombs, who played ball at Colby and began his major league baseball career after graduating from there in 1906.

John Coombs came to be known as Colby Jack and rose to pitching fame with the Philadelphia Athletics. During his first year in major league ball he had the distinction of pitching and winning a 24-inning game. He had a record of five wins and no losses in World Series pitching. Three of those wins were in 1910.

Almost all of the men who played baseball with Coach Coombs at Colby were on hand for the reunion and field dedication. He spoke at the dedication, and later was one of the speakers at the alumni dinner.

Coach Coombs, who has been head baseball coach at Duke since 1929 coached at Williams and Princeton and was manager of the Philadelphia Phillies for a year before coming to Duke.

The Founders Day Program

Gordon Dean, LL.M. '32, AEC Chairman, Will Speak

Speaker at the 1951 observance of Founders Day, on Tuesday, December 11, will be one of Duke's most distinguished alumni, Gordon E. Dean, LL.M. '32, now chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Mr. Dean will speak in Page Auditorium during exercises beginning at 10:20 a.m.

Recognized as a brilliant lawyer and an outstanding capable administrator, he was named AEC chairman in September, 1950. In this position he easily rates as one of the nation's most important men.

A native of Seattle, Wash., Mr. Dean received the A.B. degree from Redlands University in 1927, the J.D. from the University of Southern California in 1930, and the LL.M. from Duke in 1932. From 1930 to 1934 he was an instructor of law and assistant to the dean in Duke Law School.

From 1936 through 1939 he was with the Department of Justice, first as a special attorney in the Criminal Law Division and later as an executive assistant to the United States Attorney. The following five years he engaged in private practice of law in Washington, D. C., leaving this practice in 1945 to spend a year as assistant to Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson during the prosecution of Nazi war criminals at Nuremberg, Germany.

After the Nuremberg trials he returned to the University of Southern California as a professor of criminal law, until, in May, 1949, he was named a member of the five-man Atomic Energy Commission, succeeding to the chairmanship via presidential appointment in 1950.

Gordon Dean is the third in a series of distinguished alumni to return to the campus for Founders Day observances. Last year James Rhyne Killian, '25, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, spoke, and the year before it was George V. Allen, '24, ambassador to Yugoslavia and one of the nation's top-ranking career diplomats.

Students, faculty, and alumni alike are looking forward to hearing Gordon Dean speak at the Founders Day program. Although the subject of his speech has not yet been announced, it is expected that it will be particularly appropriate to the times and will carry a message few will want to miss.

The Program

The tentative program for the Founders Day exercises follows the traditional pattern.

Carillon music will begin shortly after 10 a.m. when classes are dismissed and the audience gathers in Page Auditorium. Instrumental selections will be offered by the Duke University Brass Ensemble, directed this year by Paul Bryan, Duke Marching Band director.

The program, presided over by President Edens, will include vocal selections by the Men's Glee Club prior to Gordon Dean's address. The address will be followed by the presentation of a tree by the presidents of the senior classes of Trinity College, the Woman's College, and the College of Engineering.

The traditional tree planting ceremony has been changed for this year, primarily in order to accommodate spectators. The actual planting no longer takes place in an easily reached locality, since the originally planned row between East and West Campuses has been completed. The tree, always an oak, will be presented to the University at the end of exercises in Page as part of the auditorium exercises and will be planted later in an appropriate spot on the campus. This will be the 22nd anniversary of the ceremony which began with the Class of 1930.

National Council to Receive Fund Report

The National Council will hold its regular semi-annual meeting on Founders Day with the principal item of business expected to be a report on the progress of the Development Campaign by Benjamin F. Few, '15, A.M. '16, the Campaign's national chairman.

Members of the National Council will meet for luncheon with members of the Board of Trustees in the Ballroom of West Campus Union at 12:15 p.m. Gordon Dean is expected to be a special guest at this luncheon.

The business session will follow immediately with the Council's chairman, Alonzo Edwards, '25, presiding. Reports on the activities of various committees will be submitted as one of the earlier items on the agenda.

Mr. Few's report is eagerly anticipated, since it is expected that, by that time, the campaign will be nearing its goal of eight and one-half million dollars. Only about three weeks will remain before the Campaign closes on December 31, so this report assumes a vital significance.

It was at the last meeting of the National Council, at Commencement in June, that it was voted to extend the Campaign until December 31, since it had been impossible to reach all alumni groups by the original deadline of June 30. In the report at that time it was stated that only about one million dollars remained to be raised to reach the goal that had been set after a detailed consideration of the University's needs and plans for the future.

Since that time nearly 2,500 donors have been added to the list and a substantial amount of money has been raised. The December issue of the REGISTER will carry a full report of the latest progress.

One thing that has assisted greatly in the fall campaign has been the work of class agents who have resumed their activities of writing to classmates urging participation. Two sets of letters have gone out to all alumni and returns are still coming in at a rapid rate. This phase of the program, added to the splendid work of area workers, has boosted the fund close to its goal.

College Presidents

There Are 18 Among Duke Alumni

From its very earliest beginnings one of the principal missions of Duke University was the education of preachers and teachers. In this way, the founding fathers felt, the ideas and ideals that motivated the institution's establishment could best be perpetuated.

Duke has grown since its first charter was granted by the North Carolina State Legislature more than a hundred years ago. Among its graduates now are lawyers, doctors, scientists, statesmen, business executives, and men and women in almost all of the productive walks of life. It is no longer a small college. It is one of the nation's major universities, and it engages in all of the educational activities that the name "university" implies.

But through the years it has retained many of the worthwhile characteristics of its smaller predecessors, and one of these is a continued emphasis on the training of men and women who, in turn, will assume the vital responsibility of administering to the educational needs of new generations.

As a rule educators do not win widespread public acclaim, as do members of other professions more in the public eye. They seem to operate within quiet spheres, content to let the deeds of their students and colleagues speak for their own accomplishments.

One way in which outstanding service to education may be recognized, however, is in the selection of men and women to fill the presidencies of the nation's institutions of higher learning.

Among its alumni, according to a recent count, Duke has 17 men and one woman currently occupying the position of chief administrator in as many colleges.

It is noteworthy that 16 of the 18 college presidents who call Duke Alma Mater were elected to office within the past 10 years. And most of them took office at a youthful age.

For example, DONALD C. AGNEW, A.M. '32, Ph.D. '36, became president of Coker College, Hartsville, S. C., in 1944 at the age of 37. JAMES R. BURGESS, JR., M.Ed. '36, became president of Reinhardt College, Waleska, Ga., in 1944 at the age of 35; GEORGE B. EHLHARDT, B.D. '46, of Brevard College, Brevard, N. C., in 1950 at the age of 35;

R. WRIGHT SPEARS, B.D. '36, of Columbia College, Columbia, S. C., in 1951 at the age of 38; and DR. JOHN T. CALDWELL, A.M. '36, of Alabama College, Montgomery, Ala., at the age of 35.

In 1937 HUBERT SEARCY, A.M. '33, Ph.D. '37, LL.D. '42, was elected president of Huntingdon College, Montgomery, Ala. At 29 he became the nation's youngest college president.

Five of Duke's college presidents are ministers. In addition to the Rev. George Ehlhardt and the Rev. R. Wright Spears, Dr. Charlton C. Jernigan, '25, A.M. '26, Ph.D. '35, assumed the presidency of Queens College, Charlotte, N. C., last August. He was formerly chairman of the Department of Classics at Florida State University.

A native of Dunn, N. C., Dr. Jernigan began his teaching career in 1926 at Rutherford College, where he headed the departments of English, Greek, and Latin. From 1928 to 1930 he taught English at the University of Chicago while working on a doctorate in English. He returned to Duke in 1930 to teach English, and the next year decided to obtain a doctorate in Greek rather than in English. His work at Duke was done under Dr. Charles W. Peppler, now professor emeritus.

Dr. Jernigan headed the Department of Classics at the Woman's College of North Carolina from 1935 until 1949, in which year he went to Florida State.

Mrs. Jernigan is the former Margaret Ledbetter, '25, A.M. '31. Dr. and Mrs. Jernigan and their two sons, ages 5 and 8, will make their home on the Queens College Campus.

others are FRANK BELL LEWIS, Ph.D. '46, president of Mary Baldwin College, Staunton, Va.; WILLIAM FLETCHER NELSON, B.D. '30, of Lees-McRae, Banner Elk, N. C.; and LUCIAN E. ROBERTS, Ph.D. '42, of Middle Georgia College, Cochran, Ga.

How many of these alumni set forth from the beginning with their eyes and careers focused on the eventual attainment of presidencies, and how many attained their positions through the course of events is difficult to determine. At least three, however, seemed intent on careers in educational administration when they planned their own college curricula.

These three attained advanced degrees in education from Duke before taking up the duties of their present posts. In addition to Mr. Burgess, they are DENNIS HARGROVE COOKE, '25, M.Ed. '28, president of High Point College, High Point, N. C.; and MERRITT E. HOAG, M.Ed. '36, of North Georgia College, Dahlonega, Ga.

As might be expected, practically everyone of Duke's 18 college presidents have had extensive teaching experience in institutions of higher learning, some of them at Duke. But only five, according to the record, taught to any great extent in public school systems. These five are Dr. Agnew, Mr. Burgess, Dr. Roberts, RALPH WALDO McDONALD, A.M. '27, Ph.D. '33, of Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio; and SAMUEL H. HOLTON, '21, A.M. '25, of Louisburg College, Louisburg, N. C. Dr. McDonald taught at Duke as a teaching fellow.

Six of the 18 presidents found more than a love for learning at Duke. Their wives are also alumnae.

Mrs. Agnew is the former Lucille Quillen, A.M. '32. Mrs. Burgess, the former Martha Stallings, was at Duke during the summer of 1933. The wife of DR. LUTHER L. GOBBEL, '18, A.M. '27, president of Greensboro College, Greensboro, N. C., is the former Marcia Rachel Russell, A.M. '28, daughter of former Dean of the Divinity School, the late Dr. Elbert Russell. Mrs. Samuel Holton is the former Christine High Huddy, R.N.

DR. RICHARD A. HARVILL, A.M. '27, inaugurated as president of the University of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz., just last month, is married to the former George Lee Garner, A.M. '30. Another recently elected president, CHARLTON C. JERNIGAN, '25, A.M. '26, Ph.D. '35, of Queens College, Charlotte, N. C., is married to a Duke classmate, the former Margaret Ledbetter, '25, A.M. '31.

Three of the presidents have, or have had, children enrolled at Duke. Dr. Cooke's son, Dennis, Jr., graduated in 1951; Dr. Gobbel's son Russell is a senior this year; and President Holton's daughter Mary-Marie is a junior.

The one alumna in this distinguished category of former Duke students is MARGARET DURHAM ROBEY (Mrs. H. Russell), '17, president of Southern Seminary and Junior College, Buena Vista, Va. Mrs. Robey succeeded her father, the late Robert Lee Durham, '91, whose name is connected with some of Duke's most venerable traditions. She was president of Duke Alumnae Association in 1933.

Perhaps the most renowned of all of Duke's alumni college presidents is DR. JAMES RHYNE KILLIAN, '25, LL.D. '49, chief executive of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass. Dr. Killian succeeded Dr. Karl T. Compton in 1949 after beginning his career at M.I.T. as editor of The M.I.T. Technology Review and rose to the vice presidency just after World War II.

It is interesting to note that these outstanding educators that Duke has contributed to the nation have, as a group, concentrated their activities in the South. Six as presidents of North Carolina institutions; three of Georgia schools; two of schools in South Carolina, Alabama, and Virginia; with the remaining three distributed among Arizona, Massachusetts, and Ohio.

Needless to say, all of these Duke alumni are influential members of top-ranking educational bodies on state and national levels. Many of them are authors of outstanding and widely read professional treatises, books, texts, and articles in various journals. Each of the 18 is recognized for accomplishments outside of administrative duties connected with guiding the destiny of a college. These accomplishments cover such fields as science, economics, law, religion, journalism, history, classical languages, government, and even politics.

Dr. Richard Anderson Harvill, A.M. '27, was inaugurated president of the University of Arizona at Tucson on November 16. Duke was represented at the ceremony by W. Speight Barnes, '25, A.M. '41, professor of law at Arizona.

Dr. Harvill, a native of Centerville, Tenn., earned the S.B. degree from Mississippi State in 1926 and the Ph.D. from Northwestern in 1932. He taught economics at Mississippi State, at Duke, at Northwestern, and at the University of Buffalo before going to Arizona as an associate professor in 1939. In 1946 he became a professor of economics and dean of the Arizona Graduate School. In 1947 he became dean of the College of Liberal Arts, a position he held until elected to the presidency. He has been active in numerous educational and professional groups as an economist and economic adviser.

Mrs. Harvill is the former George Lee Garner, A.M. '30, who was documents librarian at Duke Library for a number of years prior to 1936. The couple has two children, a boy and a girl.

Scenes from the Engineers' Homecoming

The Engineers' Wives Club, an organization of students' wives, entertained at a coffee hour on the morning of October 27 for wives of engineering alumni who were attending their homecoming at the College of Engineering. Pouring coffee is Mrs. Claude E. Stecker (husband, senior C.E.), president of the Club. To her right is Mrs. Chandler W. Brown (husband, B.S. '46, B.S.C.E. Professorship and Scholarship Foundation Created for Engineers

A gift of $126,000 to endow a chair of learning and scholarships in the College of Engineering at Duke University was announced recently by President Hollis Edens.

The chair will be known as "The Jones Chair of Engineering," in honor and memory of the late J. A. Jones of Charlotte, N. C., who founded the J. A. Jones Construction Company in 1894 and who was a life long supporter of the Methodist Church and its institutions. It is also in memory of his son, the late Raymond A. Jones, of Charlotte.

Donors of the gift were Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Jones, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Jones, Jr., and the J. A. Jones Construction Company, all of Charlotte. Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Sr., both graduated from Duke with the Class of 1912. Edwin, Jr. graduated from the University's College of Engineering in 1948.

"Duke University deeply appreciates the beneficeuce which creates this chair of higher learning and which will supply scholarship aid to young men training for the engineering profession," Dr. Edens stated. "It culminates many long years of support of Duke and its activities by Mr. James Addison Jones and his son, Mr. Edwin L. Jones, Sr.

"Mr. J. A. Jones gave generously and wisely to the Methodist Church and its institutions throughout his life. He was keenly aware of the need for strong support of Methodist educational institutions, such as the one from which Duke University sprang. He was, as well, one of North Carolina's pioneers in recognizing the need for a fundamental technical education for young men aspiring to the profession of engineering. His son and his grandson, both Duke alumni, inherited his concern for the welfare of education and religion in the State of North Carolina, as their recent generosity testifies.

"We welcome this opportunity to bring into permanent association with the University the name of a family whose philanthropy has greatly advanced the cause of education in the Southeast."

Income from the endowed fund, the donors specified, will be used to pay all or part of the salary of the dean of the College of Engineering and to give substantial scholarship assistance to worthy and qualified students in the College.

Dean of the College of Engineering is William Holland Hall, who has been at Duke since 1915 and whose efforts contributed greatly to the founding of the College of Engineering in 1938 and its subsequent advancements.

Edwin L. Jones, Sr., has been a member of the University's board of trustees since 1945.

The fraternity quadrangle was typical of scenes on campus preceding Homecoming week end. Students put in feverish hours of planning and physical labor on special decorations for the occasion. Delta Tau Delta arranged a puppet show; Pi Kappa Alpha's Blue Devil hit the gong with the mallet every time; and Phi Kappa Sigma's Judge Murray and football jury sentenced the Cavaliers to just punishment. Incidentally, when all was done and the prizes handed out, Phi Kappa Sigma took second place honors, and the other two honorable mention.

The Undergraduate View

by Ronny Nelson, '52

With students, townspeople, faculty, administration, and even the weather cooperating, Duke alumni had their day. Smiling, hand-shaking, back-slapping, they descended upon the West Campus Union lobby, where they registered and received large, round identification tags, and then spread out over the campus for a week-end of revisiting familiar haunts, renewing old acquaintances, and reminiscing over the good old days.

The campus was ready for them, had anticipated their return for weeks. Committees held last minute meetings to smooth out final details. Fraternities and other groups frantically put finishing touches on displays. The beauty queen and her court were briefed. The marching band went through their act for the last time in practice. And the football team rested. Everyone knew his cue, and on Friday night the big show began.

As darkness settled and spotlights came on, the sedate atmosphere of gothic arch and native stone was suddenly, magically transformed into one of gaudy color and blaring sound. Amplified music and voices, flashing lights, animated Blue Devils and Cavaliers, and smiling crowds all gave to the campus the appearance and air of one huge carnival. Fraternity chapter rooms were thrown open to the milling onlookers. And in the midst of it all, the judges went about their difficult job of selecting a winning display from a field unanimously termed "best ever."

On Saturday morning the carnival was gone. The displays were still there, just as noisy as the night before. And the crowds were even bigger. But now it was a college campus on the day of a home football game. The atmosphere was unique, something you find nowhere else. It was an atmosphere the alumnus so easily forgets, so gladly becomes a part of once more, if only for a short time.

The traditional Alumni Barbecue was held inside in the Old Gym. Officials of the University, along with the members of the Student Homecoming Committee, served as hosts, and it was such a success that the old grads refused to leave, but stayed to talk after the meal was finished. But come game time, they flocked to the stadium, for this was the highspot of the weekend, and they wouldn't miss any of it.

Footballwise, the anticipated highspot was anything but. With almost brutal disregard for the occasion, the audience, and the pre-game odds, Virginia's Cavaliers lashed out against a potentially strong Blue Devil team. Only once was the home club able to turn that potential into the real thing, while the invaders rolled up thirty points in a terrific second-half onslaught.

But if the football wasn't up to expectation, the rest of the show certainly was. Half-time events kept the alumnus busier than during actual playing time. The band did its stuff with clock-like precision: the card trick section frantically flipped and shuffled its colored cards in a series of well-worked-out welcomes and praises; the Homecoming Queen graciously accepted her crown amid a fan-fare of trumpets; the display winners received trophies for their week's work; and all in all, so great was the mid-field activity that the team had almost to ask permission before play could resume.

The sting of defeat rankled for the moment, but soon wore off as open houses, parties, and reunions built up to the climax of the weekend. The senior class staged the annual Homecoming Dance in the gym, fraternities gathered their past and present members for the last blow-out, and alumni joined into large and small groups in and around Durham to put the finishing touches to as fine a Homecoming as Duke has ever known.

For the second straight year Hoof 'n' Horn announced its intention of staging a first-semester musical in addition to its customary spring show, and suited the action to the word by calling for try-outs of all campus talent. The mid-December attraction will consist of the single most popular scene from each of club's last five offerings, and with an attempt being made to use all of the original talent that is still on campus, it ought to be well worth seeing.

Displaying that wholehearted support which so often characterizes the college student when his interest is truly aroused, East Campus coeds threw themselves solidly behind a very worthy cause. Blowing horns and waving signs, the girls

Phillips Brooks Club Holds Monthly Meets

For 20 years, ministers of all denominations from an area of more than 50 miles have been meeting at Duke once a month for informal seminars, designed to establish a bond between the University and ministers of the community.

Out of a small meeting of Durham ministers at the University in 1931, for an informal literary discussion, grew the Phillips Brooks Club, conceived by Dr. Frank S. Hickman of the Methodist inspired Duke Divinity School, and named by Dr. W. R. Cullon, Baptist professor of Bible at Wake Forest College, after Phillips Brooks, an Episcopalian who had sponsored a similar meeting of ministers for intellectual stimulation and Christian fellowship in Boston.

Sponsored by the Duke Divinity School as an informal seminar, the Club elects its own officers from among the denominations represented in its membership. There are no dues, but an offering is taken to defray incidental expenses. All ministers are cordially invited to attend.

The Club meets at the Duke Divinity School on the Monday morning following the third Sunday of each month from October through May. Two hour periods, 10:30 to 11:20 and 11:30 to 12:20, are devoted to lectures and discussions on various topics, theological and otherwise. The programs are planned jointly by the officers of the Club and a committee of the Divinity School faculty.

Three sets of lectures have been scheduled for the year to be presented by three Duke faculty members: Dr. Frank S. Hickman, professor of psychology of religion; Dr. H. Shelton Smith, professor of American religious thought; and Dr. Robert E. Cushman, professor of systematic theology. Psychology of religion will be represented by Dr. Hickman's series entitled "The New Psychology and Religious Experience." Theological criticism and construction are dealt with in Dr. Smith's series of four lectures on "Focal Points in Ecumenical Faith" and Dr. Cushman's two lectures on "The Person of Christ in the New Testament."

The first meeting of the Club this year was held in October. For the rest of the year, the schedule is as follows:

BOOKS

CHARLES STEARNS WHEELER: A FRIEND OF EMERSON

by John O. Eidson, Ph.D. '41. University of Georgia Press.

John O. Eidson, Ph.D. '41, professor of English at the University of Georgia and editor of the Georgia Review, has recently completed a biography of a little-known American who played a significant role in the career of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The biography is based largely on the manuscript journal and letters of Charles Wheeler, a young transcendentalist who fell under Emerson's spell in the 1830's, became a devoted disciple, and worked closely with him on important editorial and scholarly projects. Two appendices describe Wheeler's published and unpublished writings.

Dr. Eidson has dedicated his new book to the late Dr. James A. Chiles of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C. He holds degrees from Wofford, Vanderhilt and Duke. A native of South Carolina, Dr. Eidson has also written a volume entitled Tennyson in America.

THE ECONOMY OF TURKEY

Dr. B. U. Ratchford, chief editor. International Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Dr. B. U. Ratchford, Duke professor of economics, is chief editor of a book on The Economy of Turkey published in Washington, D. C., by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. He was given a leave of absence last fall to complete work on it.

The book, which has been translated into Turkish and presented to the government of Turkey, recommends improvements in Turkey's development and investment programs based on a compilation of reports on agriculture, industry, transportation, public administration and other fields.

A 14-man mission, including Dr. Ratchford, deputy-chief and chief economist, last year made a co-ordinated survey of economic conditions in Turkey under the joint sponsorship of the World Bank and the Turkish government. Recommendations were made after an analysis of the country's historical background and a study of its economic development during the last 30 years were completed.

Assistant editors are Professor William H. Nicholls, Vanderhilt University; Dr. Murray Ross, senior economist of the International Bank; and Robert W. Kerwin, fellow of the Middle East Institute.

THROUGH EIGHT DECADES

by Marion Timothy Plyler, '92, D.D. '37. The Seeman Printery, Incorporated.

Dr. Marion Timothy Plyler, '92, member of the North Carolina Conference and former editor of the N. C. Christian Advocate, has written a book especially dedicated to his seven children and nine grandchildren. Through Eight Decades As Minister, Editor, Author is a collection of essays by Dr. Plyler about various highlights of his life, and it includes a number of speeches and papers he has written during his lifetime that were especially appropriate for inclusion in this book.

The seven chapters of the book encompass Struggles of Early Years, New Opportunities Develop, Productive Period of My Ministry, Becomes Editor of the Church Paper, An Estimate of Will Rogers, Expanding Horizons, Busy for More than Half a Century, an appendix containing information about genealogical lines of his family and the family of Mrs. Plyler, and a second appendix written by Mrs. Plyler.

Though directed especially toward members of the Plyler family, this little book, printed by the Seeman Printery, Incorporated, Durham, contains much of interest to those who would learn more of post Civil War North Carolina, of the Methodist Ministry in North Carolina, of the early days of Trinity College, and of Dr. Plyler himself.

THE ROSE BOWL GAME

by Rube Samuelson. Doubleday & Company.

Followers of Duke football and, in particular, friends and admirers of Wallace Wade, will find this book by a West Coast sports writer one of the most highly readable football chronicles of a decade or more.

Mr. Samuelson, an intimate of that granddaddy of all post-season gridiron classics, the Tournament of Roses, has produced a book that purports to be the "inside" story. And it is pretty much just that. He traces events leading to, circumstances surrounding, and the aftermath of every Rose Bowl game from Michigan's clash with Stanford in 1902 to the California-Michigan tussle on Jan. 1, 1951. The key plays of each game are competently and excitingly described, with the influence of personalities involved duly recorded.

Not in the least neglected are the trials, tribulations, triumphs, and politics of the Bowl itself, and herein lie a number of first-told tales.

Duke readers will be particularly enticed by the accounts of Duke's two appearances in the Rose Bowl—once in Pasadena on Jan. 1, 1939, and again in Durham, in the transplanted version, in January of 1942. Wallace Wade, generally credited with bringing football fame and fortune to the South, appears almost as a thread upon which the story hangs. After his initial appearance as a guard in the Brown line in 1916 (Brown 14—Washington State 0), he returns to the story a total of five times as a coach—three times with Alabama and twice with Duke. Outstanding is the recital of the meticulous conduct of Wade-coached teams and their staffs, before, after, and during games both won and lost.

No alumnus can fail to enjoy a glow of pride in his Alma Mater and its men when this book is read, and it is recommended for football enthusiasts everywhere.

Military Training in School Suggested by Dr. Bolmeier

A recent issue of the journal "Educational Forum" contains a plea by Dr. E. C. Bolmeier, Duke education department member, for the utilization of public schools as an important link in the system of universal military training.

Dr. Bolmeier believes that the simpler aspects of UMT, such as good health habits, respect for law and order and national loyalty, could well be taught in elementary schools with an orientation toward preparedness, and that high school R.O.T.C. programs could be extended to include many more secondary schools than the very few now including this activity in their schedules.

"The machinery for providing universal training already exists," he writes. "It is the public school system. If schools would get into high gear for the task of developing strong bodies, civic attitudes, national loyalty and service competency, our national security would be greatly strengthened."

Bringing the girls into the picture, the educator asserts that they should not be excluded from high school military training. "Although girls would not be trained with rifles, they should be given training in physical conditioning. . . . Girls would also profit by the development of group discipline."

Blue Devils Approach Final Game With

Duke's young, eager, and sometimes overly generous Blue Devils have arrived on the eve of the climactic struggle with Carolina's Tarheels with a creditable—and in most quarters satisfactory—50-50 record. Four games have been won, four lost, and one tied.

The tie, coming against Georgia Tech's unbeaten Yellow Jackets in Atlanta, represented the team's best game to date. Tech was, and is, ranked as the No. 5 team in the nation. Although "moral" victories sometimes have the sting of consolation prizes, this one was particularly sweet. Against a potent and traditional rival, the Blue Devils played nearly flawless ball and demonstrated potentialities that will be realized more fully within the next couple of years.

Victories have been won over South Carolina (34-6), Pittsburgh (19-14), N. C. State (27-21), and V.P.I. (55-6).

Losses were to Tennessee's powerful Volunteers (0-26), Virginia's Homecoming invaders (7-30), Wake Forest (13-19), and William and Mary (13-14).

A charitable inclination toward opponents contributed to each of the defeats, with the Blue Devil's thoughtfully fumbling or tossing misdirected passes to set up opponent's scores or to thwart their own opportunities. Fumbling, in particular, has plagued the Devils throughout the season. Heads-up rivals have been pouncing on Duke bobbles like Junior hitting a gaily wrapped package on Christmas morning.

These fumbles, however, while regrettable, are understandable and forgivable. Youth, inexperience, and a new and difficult formation thrown against wiser opponents will frequently prove discretion superior to valor. But from the spectator's standpoint, let it be said that this team of young upstarts has provided a minimum of dull moments. And, curiously enough, miscues in every losing game have been pretty well confined to but one of the two regulation halves.

Against every team but Tennessee, the Blue Devils have outscored their rivals in at least one half of the game. They led Virginia 7-0 at halftime, scored 13 points to Wake Forest's none in the second half, and achieved the same feat against William and Mary. In the latter pair of contests they also emerged with the edge in statistical calculations.

Sure enough, it takes two halves to make a whole, but this is a year of looking ahead. The promises are what count.

Virginia 30-Duke 7

Ironically, Coach Murray's charges gave their most dismal performance of the season before a Homecoming crowd of some 30,000. Virginia's woefully underrated Cavaliers, slaughtered in effigy all over the campus in Homecoming decorations, rose up like insulted Goliaths and bulldozed through a baffled Duke defense in a wild and woolly second half.

The Devils invaded Virginia territory no less than six times in the first half before freshman Charlie Niven climaxed a 39-yard drive by scooting over from the one. The score came with less than two minutes remaining in the second quarter.

Virginia's spirit was miraculously revived just before the end of the third quarter, when halfback Charlie Smith scrambled back into his own end zone to recover a wild pitch-out. Before he could recross the goal line, Virginia's Paul Phipps and Tom Berry downed him for a 2-point safety. Trailing 2 to 7 at the beginning of the fourth quarter, the Cavaliers went touchdown crazy. A 60-yard drive ended with Ashwell plunging over from the two. The conversion was good and Virginia led 9-7.

On the next kick-off halfback Piney Fields was snowed under by three burly Cavaliers on his own 18. The ball was knocked out of his arms and reclaimed by Virginia. Four plays later Furst went over from the two to make it Virginia 16, Duke still 7.

The next Virginia score came when Knowles intercepted a Barger pass on the 50. Eight plays later Barkly passed to Scott for Virginia's third touchdown. The fourth marker came when Scott intercepted a Duke pass by Sam Eberdt and scampered 15 yards to paydirt. All Virginia points were scored in approximately 10 minutes of the game.

Duke 14-Georgia Tech 14

An inspired and fighting band of Blue Devils invaded Atlanta's Grant Field for their finest performance of the year. Duke entered the game a two-touchdown underdog against the 5th ranking Yellow Jackets.

Standouts in the game were freshman halfback Worth Lutz, who played nearly 60 minutes of ball and who scored one touchdown and passed for the other; fullback Jack Kistler; guard Bobby Burrows and tackle Ed Meadows, who played like they belonged in Tech's backfield. Meadows, from Oxford, N. C., has been one of the line standouts all year and is bidding to become one of Duke's greatest all-time tackles.

Safetyman George Grune intercepted a Tech pass by Crawford and raced to the Tech 11 before being dropped. The very next play Lutz hurled the ball into the waiting arms of end Blaine Earon for the score. Ray Green converted and Duke led 7-0 at halftime.

Tech took the kick-off to start the second half and held on to the ball until Crawford bowled over from the one to tie the score, with Rodgers' conversion. A few minutes later it looked like another rout when Tech's Wheat sifted through the line to block a punt by left-footed Red Smith, grab the ball, and race for another six-pointer. A good conversion made the score Tech 14-Duke 7.

Kistler and Lutz teamed up, however, to drive and pass the ball back into scoring territory for the Devils. Tech took over when the drive petered out, but alert Dudley Hager intercepted a second Tech pass. Kistler ran, Lutz passed, and hard-driving Red Smith hit the line to the one. From there Lutz took it over. Green calmly converted to tie the score. Tech was effectively repulsed by some fine line play and scrappy safety man George Grune for the balance of the final quarter.

Wake Forest 19-Duke 13

This was one the Devils wanted badly. A disastrous second quarter, however, gave Wake its fourth victory in as many years. The victory gave a Wake a clean sweep of the Big Four league, since it had previously defeated State and Carolina.

A scoreless first quarter saw both teams sparring cautiously for an opening, but in the second quarter Wake Forest scared Duke supporters into anticipating a rout worse than the one witnessed at Homecoming.

Wake began its first scoring drive from its own 40 at the beginning of the second frame, a drive climaxed about three minutes later when slingshot artist Dicky Davis rifled the ball over the goal line from 18 yards out to end Bob Ondilla. The conversion was good and Wake led 7-0.

Two Duke fumbles set up two more Wake scores in rapid succession. Wake recovered the first on Duke's 30 and the second on the 32. Hard-hitting fullback Bill Miller, whom Dukesters will be happy to see run out his eligibility, rammed over both times from the one-yard line to climax the two short drives.

But the Devils came out for the second half, trailing 19-0, like a team that had just discovered it could play ball.

Duke's first score came when the third quarter was five minutes old. Covering 68 yards in 10 plays, with Red Smith's 21-yard dash to the 11 the highpoint of the drive, Duke hit pay dirt when Lutz's pass to Red was caught in the end zone. The second touchdown came at the end of an 84-yard drive. Red Smith got off another 21-yard gallop from the vicinity of the Duke 20. Lutz fumbled a pitch-out, scooped the ball up deep behind the line, reversed his field, and raced for 23 yards behind a beautiful block by Tank Lawrence. In two more plays Smith and Kistler took the ball to Wake's two and Barger sneaked over from quarterback on fourth down. The conversion was missed and Duke trailed 13-19.

The Devils stormed back and were threatening again in the closing minutes, but an intercepted pass killed the chance for victory. In the second half Wake Forest registered but one first down against a suddenly stingy defense.

William and Mary 14-Duke 13

Fans who journeyed to Williamsburg to view a game rated as a toss up came away marvelling at the consistency with which Devils seemed to grant their opponents a winning margin in the first half only to storm back in the second to miss victory by a hair.

Against William and Mary's rejuvenated Indians, who had won five straight against major opposition after a slow start, Coach Murray uncorked a junior halfback named Lloyd Caudle. Caudle had played only briefly in one game, against South Carolina, previously, but this particular Saturday he ran like a mad bull and all but saved the day for the fighting Devils.

W&M scored after four minutes of the first quarter when the Indians quarterback Lewis threw a pass to Ed Weber, who trotted 17 yards to score. The try for the extra point was good, and it provided the winning margin. A young fellow named "Hadaacol" Hines did the kicking.

In the second period Indian halfback Tommy Koller broke around end on a naked reverse for an 80-yard dash to the Duke goal and Hines booted another extra point.

Fullback Byrd Looper (41) finds a nice hole around end as he goes for yardage against Virginia. Looking blocking assignments are end Bill Keziah (86) and Charlie Niven (10).

The second half, again, was all Duke. Coach Murray found his first string backs sidelined with injuries early in the third quarter. Caudle was inserted into the line up and he proceeded to take charge. With the ball on Duke's 48, the Raleigh, N. C., youngster took the ball on a double reverse to the W&M 39. Barger, trying to pass, had to run instead, and he got to the 29. A pass by Barger and two line plunges by Caudle accounted for Duke's first tally. Green kicked the extra point.

The second Duke drive started in the third quarter and extended into the fourth. It was for 70 yards with Caudle accounting for 35 of them. The score came with Barger inching over from the two. Ray Green, a highly dependable place-kicker, slammed his helmet to the ground in disgust when he missed the conversion and failed to tie the score.

Caudle, however, wasn't through. John Carey intercepted a W&M pass on the Indians' 40 after it had been deflected by end and captain, Jim Gibson. Caudle teamed with Barger, Red Smith, and Kistler to put the ball on the eight. A key play was end Howard Pitts catch of a Barger pass. The Raleigh substitute, however, who had played flawless ball until that point, got into the fumbling act and lost the ball on the four. Duke made one more threat, but a Lutz pass intercepted on the five ended it, and Duke bowed, 14-13.

And then Carolina

This issue of the REGISTER must go to press before the Carolina game on November 24. By the time it reaches readers, however, the result of this contest will be known.

Duke is expected to enter the game in the favorite's role. The Tarheels, facing some mighty tough opposition this year, have won but two games. For Duke a victory will mean tipping the season's record toward more victories than defeats. It will mean that first-year Coach Bill Murray has given his fans a season better than just good.

So, as usual, the crucial contest comes up with a lot at stake for both teams. It should be a whizzer of a game, wasn't it?

Late Flash

Duke's fired-up Blue Devils scored in the first, third, and fourth quarters to down North Carolina's Tarheels by a score of 19 to 7 to finish the season with a record of five wins, four losses, and a tie.

The Duke-Carolina game, played before 50,000 yelling fans under gray and threatening skies, was everything that this traditional contest is annually expected to be. It was hard-fought and featured some savage line play, with junior guard, Carson Leach, winning acclaim for his performance as the "fifth man in Carolina's backfield."

Duke's first score came in the first quarter after Red Smith ran 39 yards around end to the Carolina one and then slammed over on the next play. The score was 6-0 at halftime. Carolina, however, took the lead early in the third period on a pass play, Gravitte to Wallace, and a good conversion by Williams. The Devils, however, roared back on the kick-off and a series of runs put the ball on the one again, from which spot Jerry Barger plunged over. The final score came in the final quarter. Duke took over on downs on their own 32 and began a drive that ended when Piney Field skirted end from six yards out to score standing up.

Slip of Paper

Claire Bryant managed to look quite composed as she finally walked into the reception room. She had stood outside for a full minute, studying with great satisfaction the name on the door: Burton & Bryant, Attorneys-at-Law.

Suddenly the door at the left swung open, and a tall young man with a big grin filled the doorway.

"Hello, Mom!"

Together they walked into his office with its view of the tall buildings, the river, and the harbor out beyond. She looked and approved, then looked again and approved some more. She sat in the deep leather chair by the window and smiled back at her boy.

"Jack," she said, "for years people have been warning me not to dote on you too much. I took their advice seriously. I have tried hard not to spoil you. But today I'm bound to say I'm proud as a peacock of you—and as satisfied with myself and with life as I can be!"

"I'm happy, too, Mom. It was wonderful of Mr. Burton to take me in as a partner so soon. By the way—I've had Dad's big walnut desk moved up here. It fits in swell!"

"I noticed that," said Claire Bryant. "I wish he could see you now."

The young man grinned that nice, slow grin of his. "Just before you came in," he said, "I found something in the top drawer of the desk." He pulled a fragile, time-yellowed piece of paper out of his pocket. "That's Dad's writing, all right. But what the deuce does it mean?"

Claire took the piece of paper. Her face softened. "Yes . . . it's his writing. He was always writing himself notes in a sort of private shorthand he had. Can't you figure out what it means?"

The young man read the note again: "6-7-23—see RW re more ins."

"Who is R. W.?" he asked.

"That gives it away," she smiled. "R. W. is Robert Wilson . . ."

"You mean the agent who took care of Dad's insurance?"

"That's right—he was with the New York Life. Notice the date . . ."

"Six-seven-twenty-three—June seventh, 1923—why, that's the day I was born!"

His mother smiled. "Your father had a thousand plans for you. And being a lawyer, he never liked to put things off." She looked at the note again. "You see, your father got hold of Robert Wilson, whose advice he respected, and took out more insurance. That's why, when your father died, everything—including your law education—was provided for."

The grin again relieved the serious expression on the young man's face, "I suppose you don't frame a thing like this," he mused, looking at the piece of paper. He dropped it into the top drawer of the old walnut desk. "But I guess I'll keep it here handy—to remind me how I got off to a wonderful start . . . yes, before I even knew it!"

of commerce nor personnel between India and Pakistan that one might wish for, and as Pakistan requires full time attention, it is seldom that I have the opportunity to keep up contacts south of here. Nevertheless, should I ever visit the East Godavari District in Madras, a most interesting District from the standpoint of power development and ancient culture, I shall certainly try to locate Mantrala L. N. Sastri.

Thanks for the personal news of Duke and of the various efforts. I wish that I could reciprocate with a little chit-chat from here, but I am afraid anything I say today would be wrong tomorrow, and, besides, our most interesting news is reported more faithfully than I could report, by newspaper and current affairs analysts.

I did have a chance to meet Dr. Frank Graham while he was in Karachi, and for the first time had a feeling that North Carolina was adequately represented in Pakistan. On Dr. Graham's staff was Bill Aycock from Greensboro, who taught me when I was in high school. We had a most enjoyable and interesting dinner together the night before he left, but unfortunately even on a friendship basis he would not give out any of the top secrets concerning our most urgent and interesting problem, Kashmir.

Best regards to you and all the good people at Durham. Hope to see you on my next leave a year or two from now!

staged a triumphant eight-convertible parade around East Campus circle to officially open the annual Campus Chest drive, which this year calls for a donation total of $3,500. The opening was climaxed by Dr. Frank DeVyver's address on "The Importance of Giving" in the Auditorium.

Following up their successful sponsorship of the "Town Meeting of the Air," the Men's Student Government will bring Senator Robert Taft, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, to Page Auditorium late in November. The stop at Duke will be part of the Senator's Southern campaign tour. His address, plus a fifteen-minute question and answer session, should give students, many of whom will be voting for the first time in the coming election, a pretty good idea of just where Mr. Taft stands, and what issues the campaign will center around.

With polls of student opinion, library displays, and a mock court, the United Nations came to Duke. In celebration of UN Day, the flag of the international peace organization flew over the campus, and the Security Council met to discuss an attack on Formosa. With students taking the parts of the various member nations, one of which was represented by a Spanish-speaking foreign student, the session had an air of authenticity which was furthered by the late arrival of the Russian delegate. Recognized by the presiding Polish delegate, the representative for the U. S. demanded immediate armed intervention in Formosa. Although they failed to have the resolution passed due to a Russian veto, the delegates in favor succeeded in placing it on the agenda of the General Assembly.

TWO DOLLARS A YEAR

20 CENTS A COPY

Entered as Second-Class Matter at the Post Office at Durham, N. C., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.

I wish it were possible to say "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" to each of you. Because of your willingness to share in the alumni work, you have made this one of the happiest Christmases the staff, of the Alumni Office, and, for that matter, the entire University community has ever had. Because of your interest and enthusiasm, the University will be in a position to make a greater contribution in the field of education during the coming new year.

Many of the local associations have been unable to hold their meetings during the fall. Several have waited so that they could have them at a time that would be better suited to local conditions. Others have shifted their dates to suit the convenience of the speaker. Despite the constantly changing plans, this year's series of meetings is one that alumni can view with pardonable pride.

Founders Day, December 11, had as its speaker Gordon Dean, an alumnus of Duke University. This occasion gave the students an opportunity to express their appreciation for what the University has contributed to them and to make known in a public way their interest in assuring the University's future. This year the traditional tree planting exercises in connection with the program were held in Page Auditorium. Various comments indicated that everyone could hear what was going on for the first time.

I suggest you read the letter to President Edens from Hinohara. It reminds us that Duke University has been made possible because of the men who have given their lives in its service. Running through the entire pattern of the institution are the threads of the lives of the men and women woven together to give strength and purpose to the institution. It also reminds us that each former student can have a share in Duke's future. We can make the institution more effective by seeing that it has the necessary ingredients for greatness, or we can minimize it in our thinking and leave its future to someone else.

The basketball team has already played in Winston-Salem and Shelby, and is going to play in other towns. This gives the alumni an excellent opportunity to see this year's team in action. If you would like a schedule or information, drop us a line.

The Angier Duke Scholarship Committee received a greater number of applications this year than in any other year since it was established.

The Cover

In keeping with the season, the cover of this month's REGISTER has a religious theme. Pictured is the large chancel window of Duke Chapel which is situated behind the pulpit. The top and middle rows of figures picture ten of the twelve apostles. On the bottom row are five Old Testament prophets. This window is considered one of the most beautiful examples of stained glass art in the United States.

November 28, 1951

Dear fellow alums,

Since I've just moved, thought I'd better drop you a line with my new address and a word or two about what I've been doing since leaving my Alma Mater a year and six months ago.

After leaving Duke the thought of "going back home" didn't seem in the least bit exciting, so three weeks after graduation (in '50) found me making a grand tour of the employment agencies in New York City in the hopes of getting a job that was "different." And, being that I'm a lucky person to begin with, I walked right into a job so different that I'm always stuck for an answer when people ask me what I do. In the first place I work with Displaced Persons for an organization called Church World Service, which handles all Protestant D. P.'s—with the exception of the Lutherans—entering the country. My job title is "notification worker," a very elusive and nebulous term even to me. I, along with about 15 other notification and "pier" workers, go down to the piers whenever the D. P. ships arrive (U. S. Army transports), help the D. P.'s through customs, then send them on their way to wherever they're going in the country. Some stay here in N. Y., but many go out to farms in the Midwest, some to factory jobs in other big cities, or positions as domestics most anywhere. Some go as far as California or Washington. (To enter the country at all, all persons must have a "sponsor" who will guarantee them a job and housing.) By now I think I could find my way around Grand Central or Penn Stations blindfolded, for I am also a "station worker" which means taking the D.P.'s from the pier to the stations for entraining. You might be wondering at this point how I manage to communicate with them, and this I do by means of a very crude sort of German which I've picked up. When this fails, as in meeting a solely Russian-speaking Russian (most Europeans speak and understand some German) then one starts using one's hands instead of one's vocal cords. Back in the office we spend our time notifying sponsors of the arrivals of ships and straightening out problem cases which involve sponsorship—or lack of it. I venture to say that I've got the most unpredictable job ever heard of. In fact the word "routine" is most foreign to our ears. I never know from one minute to the next, let alone one day to the next, what I'm going to be doing next. I spend as much time out of the office as I do in, and I'm just as apt to be working from 12 to 8 as I am 9 to 5. The farthest I ever got from the ordinary man's routine day was during the recent dock strike when I wasn't called into work until 10 in the evening and worked until 4 the next morning. The best part of all, though, is the unusually wonderful bunch of people I work with. We're all young college grads from all parts of the country who were chosen primarily on the basis of our individual personalities and group compatibility, since we work

Glenn G. Geiger and family, New York

I found unparalleled opportunities

While I was still an undergraduate at the University of North Dakota, I made up my mind that I wanted to live and work in the New York area. But I was interested only in a position that would provide an adequate living, and of equal importance, one in which I would have personal contact with people and be of help to them with their problems.

So I began an intensive study of career possibilities. I found that the one field that offered exactly what I was looking for was life insurance. And after comparing various companies, I chose New England Mutual—the first mutual life insurance company chartered in America.

I've received wonderful training in New England Mutual. And I've found unparalleled opportunities to serve my fellow man and to give my family security.

I'm living and working in the city of my choice. I'm guiding the financial affairs of a wide variety of people, and I'm establishing many valued friendships.

No wonder I feel so strongly that life insurance offers immediate and satisfactory rewards for college graduates who work hard, have high ideals and a genuine interest in the welfare of other people!

If you would like more information about a career in which your individual ability and industry—and nothing else—determine your income, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston St., Boston 17, Mass.

One reason New England Mutual agents do so well is that they have a truly fine product to sell. The New England Mutual life insurance policy is a liberal and flexible contract that can give you just the kind of financial help you require.

And you will be pleasantly surprised to find that the rates for many New England Mutual policies are lower today than they were 20 years ago!

PAPERS AND ADDRESSES

WILLIAM PRESTON FEW

with a Biographical Appreciation by

ROBERT H. WOODY

$5.00

I have read Mr. Woody's "Biographical Appreciation" and his selection of Dr. Few's papers and addresses with keen interest. Dr. Few was not an easy man to know and it took years of association to understand and appreciate all of his rare qualities. By his skilful use of quotations and through his sympathetic interpretation Mr. Woody has succeeded, it seems to me, in drawing a true picture of this quiet scholar and able administrator whose whole heart and unending purpose were devoted to the educational ideals in which he so profoundly believed and whose life is forever inwrought into the life of Duke University.

—Alice M. Baldwin

Dr. Few's wise observations and comments on educational issues during his long service in Trinity College and Duke University are as valid in mid-twentieth century as when originally made, for some of those issues have had a way of persisting. Professor Woody's excellent introduction makes the man live as he was so well and so favorably known by many generations of Trinity and Duke men and women.

Campaign Total Tops $8,250,000 on December 11

Founders Day Report Shows Program Near Its Goal

Twenty days were left before the deadline of December 31, when Benjamin F. Few, '15, A.M. '16, reported to the National Council on Founders Day that $8,251,243.15 has been raised for the University through the Development Campaign.

Mr. Few, who is the Development Campaign's national chairman, also reported that 7,832 alumni and friends were listed as contributors up to December 11.

"And just today," he added, "nearly 100 new contributions have been received totaling several thousand dollars. This is in addition to the figures just announced."

Meanwhile, it should be added, new contributions are continuing to arrive at Campaign Headquarters at an undiminished rate.

This adequately illustrates the fact that campaign workers are pushing hard, right up to the last minute, to reach the goal of $8,650,000; and it also demonstrates the sustained enthusiasm on the part of all alumni that has characterized the Development Campaign right from its beginning.

Mr. Few's report was submitted to the National Council at its annual Founders Day meeting, which took place in the Union Ballroom following a luncheon with members of the Board of Trustees.

Presiding at the meeting was N. E. Edgerton, '21, of Raleigh, N. C., in the absence of Alonzo C. Edwards, '25, the National Council chairman.

A high spot of the meeting was the induction of two honorary members, David Ovens of Charlotte, N. C., and George Watts Hill of Durham. Their citation read, in part: "Because of their extraordinary interest in the objectives and purposes of Duke University, and by their faithful and distinguished service, (they) have demonstrated their continuing and recognized loyalty to the University."

Citations were read and certificates presented by P. Huber Hanes, Jr., '38, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Praise for Workers

"This is a superb report," Mr. Few commented, after announcing campaign totals, "and it has been made possible through the untiring efforts of many people without regard for personal convenience."

He paid high tribute to the many alumni, alumnae, and friends who have

Looking over the Founders Day report, and pleased with what they see, are (left to right) N. E. Edgerton, '21, Raleigh, N. C.; Ben F. devoted time and energy to the success of the program. Specially mentioned were B. Everett Jordan, '18, of Saxapahaw, N. C., chairman of the general canvass for North Carolina; J. Raymond Smith of Mount Airy, N. C., chairman of Initial Gifts for North Carolina; and George Watts Hill, who headed the campaign among non-alumni friends in the City of Durham, a campaign that surpassed its goal of $250,000.

"The important thing," Mr. Few declared, "is not the giving, but the development of the habit of giving to Duke University. There is no question in my mind but that if the habit of giving is continued, Duke will remain in its high place among leading national institutions."

Speaking informally to the National Council, President Edens termed the campaign's successes "truly remarkable," and he added to Mr. Few's praise of campaign workers and class agents, without whom, he said, the campaign would have been impossible.

"I sincerely hope," President Edens stated, "and I believe it will be true, that when we come to December 31, we shall be able to announce that we have exceeded our goal, and that all of us will be pleased with the results.

"I do not know of any other institution that has more tangible evidence of the willingness of its former students to serve it."

The Last Appeal

Meanwhile, preparations are underway for a final appeal for gifts before the December 31 deadline. Now in the mails for all alumni is a progress report and a special letter from Chairman Few calling for last minute support to put the campaign over its goal before the New Year.

Responses are still arriving to the most recent appeal by class agents, and a similar response to this final mailing should bring the campaign to a highly successful conclusion.

Exercises in Page

Speaking at exercises in Page Auditorium was Gordon Dean, LL.M. '32, chairman of the Atomic Energy Com-

Recognized by Council. George Watts Hill (left), Durham civic leader, and David Ovens, Charlotte, N. C., pioneer merchant and philanthropist, were elected to honorary membership in the Duke University National Council for outstanding service to the University. Mr. Hill headed the Durham City campaign and Mr. Ovens has been one of the campaign's most generous contributors. The induction ceremony was performed by P. Huber Hanes, Jr., '38, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

mission and formerly a member of the Duke Law School teaching staff. Excerpts from Mr. Dean's excellent address appear in this issue of the REGISTER.

The exercises opened with a carillon recital by Mrs. Mildred L. Hendrix, which began at 10:10 a.m. when classes were dismissed to allow students to gather in Page. Music for the Page program was provided by the University Brass Ensemble under the direction of Paul Bryan, and the Men's Glee Club, under the direction of J. Foster Barnes.

Presiding was President Edens, and the speaker was introduced by Dr. Paul M. Gross, vice-president of the University and president of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

At the conclusion of the program, Glenn Marlin, president of the College of Engineering senior class, accompanied by the senior class president of the Woman's College, Alice Youmans, and the senior class vice-president of Trinity College, Carl James, presented a tree to President Edens in observance of the annual tree planting ceremony that has been a tradition for more than 20 years.

Dean Calls for Calm Approach to Atomic Age

Gordon Dean, LL.M. '32, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, was the 1951 Founders Day speaker. The position that he holds makes Mr. Dean one of the nation's most important men, and he spoke concerning one of the world's most important topics. Below are excerpts from his address which should be of interest to all thinking men and women of this generation.

When I last visited the campus, back in March, 1950, I discussed the importance of keeping balance in our atomic energy program. With your indulgence I would like to repeat one paragraph from those remarks.

"This is an age of atomic bombs and international tensions. In such an age it has become fashionable to be extreme. It is a fashion which springs basically from the uncertainties and anxieties in the minds of people, and from the urge, in times when certitude is gone, to grasp at easy solutions to complex and troublesome problems. In such an age people tend to become rash in statement and extreme in position. . . . If there ever was a time in our history when we badly needed balance, it is today. . . ."

Too many people seem to be living in an unreal world marked by deep gloom, frenetic but undirected activity, or a fatalistic resignation to the coming of an atomic holocaust. Many of these people are going through the motions of living, but they are not really living, and they are not making the responsible contribution to society that society has every right to expect from them in time of crisis. . . .

The present crisis, while admittedly an uncomfortable one, is no worse—and in many ways is not so bad—as . . . other crises . . . at the time they occurred. But the lesson of history is that this crisis, like the others, will not be solved by allowing ourselves to become panicky or to slip into the lazy and irresponsible escape of fatalism. The answer lies rather in our ability to analyse the problem, to work out our answer to it, and to buckle down to the job of putting its solution into effect in a cool and businesslike manner.

In my opinion, one of the most valuable services to be performed by the great universities of this country, of which Duke is an outstanding example, is to assist in supplying the balance and perspective so badly needed in these times. Our universities are eminently qualified to perform this vital service, partly because they are the repositories of the accumulated wisdom of the ages, and partly because they are populated by rational, intelligent people accustomed to approaching problems analytically and unemotionally. . . .

The way to solve the problem of atomic energy is to stop turning away from it and to put it out on the table where it can be examined. If we do this, we can

Solomon's Temple

A Noted Replica Results from Research of Alumnus

"Then Solomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in Mount Moriah, where the Lord appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite." (II Chronicles 3:1)

Solomon's Temple, the most famous building in the Bible, was so spectacular that one royal visitor traveled by caravan more than 1,500 miles to see it and other marvels of Solomon's court, so magnificent that when the Queen of Sheba saw it there was no spirit left in her. Erected on Mount Moriah in Jerusalem, where Abraham had prepared to sacrifice Isaac, and fashioned of marble, cedar, gold and bronze, it never ceased to amaze peoples of the world.

Built for King Solomon by Hiram of Tyre about 950 B.C., the Temple stood for nearly four hundred years as the "cathedral" of the Hebrews until Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, in the 19th year of Nebuchadrezzar, King of Babylon, burned it and carried away all the brass and gold. To Biblical scholars, the Temple of Solomon is of great importance, since it marked a major change in public worship for Judaism.

Many reconstructions of the Temple have appeared at intervals since 1720, but they have resembled everything from a foundry to Victorian gingerbread. None has had extensive written or archaeological bases, but were mostly imaginative creations.

Exactng Research

Dr. Paul Leslie Garber, a Gurney Harris Kearns Fellow in Religion at Duke from 1937 to 1939, now head of the Bible department at Agnes Scott College, became interested some years ago in this much-misunderstood and misrepresented example of architecture. Dr. Garber spent four years doing research to find out all he could from every possible source exactly what the Temple must have looked like. Hope of a model was almost discarded because the cost of such an exacting piece of work was prohibitive, until E. G. Howland of Troy, N. Y., a professional model maker, offered to contribute his labor, and materials to promote the cause of Bible teaching. The completed model, executed in meticulous detail and built as exactly to scale as possible, is now insured for $10,000.

A great deal of praise has been given Dr. Garber for his scholarly undertaking. Three-fourths of an issue of The Biblical Archaeologist was devoted to the model, which was unveiled about a year ago in Buttrick Hall at Agnes Scott, where it is still on display. The reconstruction is thought by many to be the most accurate approach to the original ever made.

"(This) model of Solomon's Temple will enable students and laymen to visualize some pages of Biblical history better than the written or spoken word could do," says Professor Robert H. Pfeiffer of Harvard.

A filmstrip of the model reconstruction was released in March by Southeastern Films, Atlanta, Ga., and is available for distribution to educational and religious groups for $2.50.

"How would you find out what Solomon's Temple looked like?" writes Dr. Garber. "You would secure a student of the Bible who could look up what experts in Biblical languages know and what Biblical archaeologists have found. You would get a professional model maker skillful in working with miniature objects of wood, metal and plaster. You would allow these partners four and a half years to carry on correspondence half-way around the world, examine a dozen or more libraries and spend much time in what often proved unfruitful experimentation. What you'd get would be like the Howland-Garber model reconstruction of Solomon's Temple which is now on display at Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Ga."

Although the Bible gives exact measurements and explicit descriptions (I Kings 6-8, II Chronicles 3, 4, Jeremiah 52, and Ezekiel 40-42) of the building and its construction, many points are left in doubt, causing the wide discrepancy in former models. It was for Dr. Garber to determine what the missing details might be.

Elegant Simplicity

Many of the former reconstructions depicted the Temple as being very ornate. However, using the very detailed explanations in the Bible, Dr. Garber constructed a Temple at once simple in design and elegant in the rich materials used, a fine example of construction after the Phoenician manner. Evidence from both Biblical text and Biblical archaeol-

Dr. Garber is shown above with the base of the Temple, illustrating the floor plan and showing how prefabricated construction methods used in the original building were copied.

The entrance to the Temple illustrates the almost modern simplicity of design and the beauty of the legendary Temple, a building now considered much less ornate than earlier models depicted it and which owed its splendor to its materials and workmanship.

ogy substantiates everything included in the Howland-Garber reconstruction. Any features previously included in other reconstructions were omitted if recognized authorization could not be found.

Local Association Meetings

Wake County

The Wake County Duke Alumni held their annual meeting in the Social Room of the Edenton Street Methodist Church, November 20 at 6:30 p.m.

Retiring president, R. Shelton White, '21, presided and special guests at the dinner were President and Mrs. A. Hollis Edens, and the Reverend Robert E. Brown, B.D. '33, new District Superintendent for the Raleigh District of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church.

Principal speaker for the evening was E. M. Cameron, Director of Athletics at Duke, who discussed the history as well as current happenings in the Athletic Department.

New officers elected for the coming year were: Charles F. Blanchard, '45, LL.B. '49, president; L. L. Ivey, '15, vice-president; and J. Allen Norris, LL.B. '30, secretary-treasurer.

Two tickets for the Duke-U.N.C. game were won by James Johnston, '36, for holding the lucky ticket stub.

Also present at the meeting were Coma Cole Willard (Mrs. Walter B.), '22, president of the General Alumnae Association and Florence Fitzgerald Tunstall (Mrs. K. R.), '29, president of the Wake County Alumnae Association.

Caswell-Rockingham Counties

Duke alumni of Rockingham and Caswell counties met Tuesday, December 4, at the Belvedere Hotel in Reidsville, N. C. Dr. Charles E. Jordan, vice-president of the University in charge of public relations, spoke on the history of Duke University, citing the red letter days of the past which were significant to the University's progress.

Another Son of Alumnus in Freshman Class

Lewis Lynn Caviness, a Duke freshman this year, is another in the ranks of new students whose parents also attended Duke. Lynn is the son of William B. Caviness, '19, of Raleigh, N. C.

Fred Whitener, assistant to the Director of Alumni Affairs at Duke, showed a color movie of the 1951 Duke-Carolina football game.

Ralph Fonville, B.S. '41, presided at the meeting and was succeeded as president by Allen Gwyn, Jr., '47, LL.B. '50. Mr. Fonville will act as secretary-treasurer for the coming year.

New Hanover-Pender and Brunswick Counties

In the absence of Ethel Williams Barrett (Mrs. G. Warren), '36, who was critically ill, Jasper D. Davis, Jr., '41, presided at the meeting of Duke Alumni from New Hanover-Pender and Brunswick counties.

The group heard Dr. James Cannon, dean of the Divinity School, speak on the importance of local associations in helping to steer good students from their communities toward Duke.

A good dinner at the Azalea Room of the H & W Cafe, a congenial group and Dr. Cannon's dry wit all combined to make a most enjoyable evening for all those present.

New officers for the year are: Jasper D. Davis, Jr., president; Inez Newsom Fonvielle (Mrs. Louis O.), '24, president elect; William B. Newbold, '28, vice-president; Margaret G. Banck, '38, treasurer; and Malcolm Lander, '27, secretary.

Gaston-Lincoln Counties

Officers elected to serve the Gaston-Lincoln Alumni Association for 1951 and 1952 are George A. Trakas, '42, Gastonia, N. C., president; Jane Goode Ward (Mrs. Thurman R.), '36, Lincolnton, vice-president; W. F. Edkbert, M.D. '39, Cramerton, vice-president; Ivan L. Roberts, '26, B.D. '29, Mt. Holly, vice-president; C. W. Boshamer, Jr., '15, Gastonia, vice-president; W. C. Freeman, '31, Gastonia, secretary; and Elizabeth Bockmiller Williams (Mrs. Darrell B.), '49, Gastonia, treasurer.

Western New York

Duke alumni in Western New York State have a full schedule of activities. They made a profit of $289.85 on their Playhouse Benefit. Forty per cent was placed in the scholarship fund, 40 per cent in the local treasury, and 20 per cent was forwarded to the Development Campaign. Jean and Dick Weil, '36, and Midge Epes, '41, were chairmen of a picnic held a few days after the benefit. The group has also been sponsoring a monthly bridge group.

'42 Plans 10th

Several members of the Class of 1942 met on the campus on December 9 with Class President Jimmy Walker, of Raleigh, N. C., to begin preliminary planning for a big 10th Year Reunion.

Bob Clarke, with the Air Force R.O.T.C. unit on the campus, was named general reunion chairman, and during the next few weeks committees to handle arrangements, programs, and mailings will be named.

A meeting of these committees, Mr. Walker announced, will be called for January 26, the day of the Duke-Wake Forest basketball game. Further information for the reunion will be sent to all class members in the very near future.

The Duke-Ster, a newsletter published by the group, has met with great success. Jay Shirley, '41, and Joanne Miller, wife of Gar Miller, '39, are out-going co-editors.

A new plan for electing association officers has been proposed by Dick Weil, chairman of the nominating committee. The Executive Board suggested that instead of submitting a slate of officers, nine names be presented to compose a Board, three members to be retired and three to be elected each year. Any officers would be elected from the group and by the group. The purpose is to always have in office an interest group assuming responsibility instead of one or two people.

The fall dinner meeting was held by the group on November 7, at Katherine Lawrence's. A turkey dinner was served. Charles Jordan and John Dozier of Duke were special guests. Harold Peterson, Ph.D. '33, was in charge of the program, and Fran and Skip Bain, '51, were chairmen for the meeting.

Duke Economics Meet

A Duke University Breakfast was held at the Andrew Johnson Hotel in Knoxville, Tenn., on Saturday morning, November 17, in connection with the annual meeting of the Southern Economic Association. A total of 20 people were present including five staff members of the Duke Department of Economics and Business Administration, one former staff member, and 14 alumni of the Department. The 14 alumni represented 11 colleges and universities in the South and two other organizations. Following the breakfast there was a period of discussion in which the staff members summarized recent developments at the University for the benefit of the alumni.

Participating in the program of the Southern Economic Association were Lionel Wilfred McKenzie, Jr., '39, assistant professor of economics; B. U. Ratchford, A.M. '27, Ph.D. '32, professor of economics; and Edward C. Simmons and Joseph J. Spengler, both Duke professors of economics. Dr. Ratchford was elected vice-president of the Association for 1951-52 and will have the responsibility for preparing the program for next year's meeting, which will be held in Jacksonville, Fla., during the month of November.

Atlanta Chapter Award Is Now Held by Freshman

Charles P. McClellan, a Duke University freshman from Atlanta, Ga., is studying at Duke under a scholarship awarded him by the Atlanta Duke Alumni Association.

Established in 1941 by the Association, the scholarship fund is designed to provide financial assistance for the higher education of worthy students.

Charles graduated from North Fulton High School in Atlanta last June. Outstanding in high school activities, he was among the top 25 per cent of his class scholastically. He was president of the North Fulton High School chapter of the National Honor Society and treasurer of the senior class. His memberships included the Key Club, junior organization of the Kiwanis Club; the student council; Hi-Y Club; and the high school band.

Class of '27 Plans for Silver Anniversary

Twenty-two members of the class of '27 and some of their wives gathered for a dinner meeting at University House following the Wake Forest game on November 10. Dr. Furman G. McLarty, president, presided as plans were laid for the silver anniversary of the class to be held at commencement next June.

Committee chairmen were appointed as follows: A. H. (Bus) Borland, Durham, general chairman of the anniversary celebration; A. Hugo Kimball, Statesville, chairman of the 25th year gift committee; Albert A. Wilkinson, Greensboro, chairman of the booklet committee; George R. Wallace, Morehead City, chairman of the program committee; Elizabeth Churchill Underwood (Mrs. W. A.), Asheville, and J. Murrey Atkins, Charlotte, publicity co-chairmen; and Amos R.

Comans Are Praised in Trade Journal

The Coman Lumber Company in Durham has made quite a name for itself among small city lumber dealers. It is owned and operated by James Hilary Coman, Sr., '16, and his sons, William Thomas, '46, James Hilary, Jr., B.S. '44, and John S., who attended art school in New York. Still another member of the family, Willena Crouse Coman (Mrs. J. H., Jr.), '44, is also a Duke alumna.

The June issue of American Builder, in writing about last year's National Home Week, devoted three whole pages to a model home built in Durham by the Coman Lumber Company. More than 12,000 people came to see the home during the first two days it was open to the public in spite of inclement weather. The house was sold the first day for $22,000, and within 60 days from the time it was first opened for inspection, deals were closed on materials for 30 new houses.

When the decision was made by the Comans to participate in National Home Week and an exhibition house was chosen to be the focal point of interest, the father and sons team then had to choose a plan for the demonstration home. They decided upon a modern, ranch-style house. Timing was perfect, and the house was completed just before National Home Week. Decorator colors were used inside the home, and it was furnished for inspection by a local furniture store.

Kearns, High Point, chairman for reunion finances.

Each chairman spoke to the group of plans for his committee. The class booklet was discussed. In order to make this successful, all members of the class must fill in their information blanks for use in the biographical data. Members of the class who were present expressed hopes that there will be 100 per cent participation in the class gift to the Development Campaign. Anne Garrard of the Alumni Office outlined other tentative plans for the commencement week end for the group.

Special class notepaper was distributed to the members present. They plan to write notes urging other class members to attend the 25th anniversary at commencement.

Former Glee Club Singer Returns in Opera's Lead

In the years from 1941 to 1944, J. Foster ("Bishop") Barnes took an interest in a tenor soloist who was singing with the Duke Chapel Choir and the Duke Men's Glee Club. This month that same tenor returned to the Duke Campus to sing the role of Alfredo in the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company production of Verdi's opera "La Traviata," an off-the-series feature of the All-Star Artist Series. He is John Alexander, a native of Meridian, Miss., now on his first operatic tour. John made his debut in opera two years ago with the Cincinnati Summer Opera, singing the leading role in Gounod's "Faust."

As a pre-med student, John sang the tenor lead in "H.M.S. Pinafore," presented by the Duke Musical Club in his freshman year. He led many of the Sunday Night Sings on East Campus, and during 1943-44 was Glee Club president. John also was tenor soloist in the Duke Choir's presentation of the "Messiah."

Inducted into the Army in 1944, he continued to use his voice to good advantage, singing the part of Canio in "Il Pagliacci," presented by the Chanute Field soldiers in 1945 in Chicago.

After getting out of service, John began to study music in earnest. He became a student at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, and was given excellent reviews after his appearance in "Faust" and in recitals.

John's present address is c/o his voice teacher, Robert Weede, Demarest Mill Road, W. Nyack, N. Y.

Letter to President Edens Recalls Late Chancellor

Tamagawa-Heian (Peace) Church
3-5 Tamagawa-Okusawa
Setagaya-Ku, Tokyo, Japan

Oct. 23, 1951

Dr. A. Hollis Edens
Office of the President
Duke University
Durham, N. C.
U. S. A.

Dear President Edens:

My heart almost breaks when I think of the passing of Chancellor Flowers that took place just two months ago. Two of my dear friends, lovers of Duke, kindly informed me of it with newspaper clippings. The pictures of his later days on them do not fail to remind me of my good days at Trinity as he used to teach me trigonometry and at the Main Street Church Sunday School the Bible. I loved his eyes when he lovingly smiled and his lips seriously warned. I shall never forget his most spontaneous reply he gave to us at our S. S. when questioned about hell. "Boys, I really don't know how it looks like, and I truly hope I shall never need to know about it." Ever since I have never been bothered by the question concerning of the hell! I simply try to long after the heaven. In May 1938 I attended the General Conference of M. E. Church, South in Birmingham, Alabama, as the Fraternal Delegate of Japan Methodist Church and also had an opportunity to visit the Duke's Commencement. I called on him and he tightly shook my hand as usual calling me "Hinohara" with his characteristic smile even most beamingly. Some time in the fall in 1904 during the Russ-Japanese war I was reading some newspapers in the Library when Prof. Flowers happened to come in and saw me so absorbed in reading the news. He patted my shoulder and told me that he had held a little gift his S. S. Class meant to surprise me with as they knew I had been working hard to make my way through. He returned to his room and brought me a tobacco sack full of silver coins.

It was a Tuesday afternoon and on the Sunday previous I attended the West Durham Church to hear the late Rev. Langston preach. It was a Missionary Sunday and a special collection was taken up for his Church's assessment after his strong appeal. I had a quarter left in my pocket which was my last coin for some time to come. But I dared to give it for the cause only to be so ashamed of myself for my most insignificant offering hence deciding to give myself as well with it for the great cause. For I had been preparing myself for a teacher instead of preacher.

When I opened the sack I received from Prof. Flowers in my room I found there the jingling coins of silver and copper as much as $11.25. Only two days after I gave a quarter to the Lord and He gave it back to me plus eleven dollars almost immediately to my great surprise and gratitude.

The late Dr. Plato Durham, a man of great prayers, loved Kuguniya (who was made the Bishop of our Methodist Church in his later days) and gave him his own overcoat for his first winter at Trinity, but our Prof. Bob Flowers gave me Faith in God whose Love never faileth.

I know you all miss him, this great sainted man and most devoted Duke servant, more than words can express for your great Institution of Learning there. So much so we, or rather I, miss him very much here. But over There we will meet him again, if we only strive to live like him.

Dear President, please pardon for my lengthy words of condolence which I hope you will convey to the bereaved family of our beloved teacher and leader as I know them not well except one of his brothers. I have one of my sons studying at Emory's Graduate School of Medicine. I asked him to send to your office (in care of Miss Garrard) $5 for a little bouquet for my sake to decorate the monument of my dear teacher as a little token of my affection and gratitude. By the way, my son will pay a visit to you and to your great University, my dear Alma Mater sometime next year before he starts back for home. I hope you will help him to see your Medical School and fine hospital.

Yours most cordially,
Rev. Zensuke Hinohara

together so closely and informally. Our group also includes a few ex-D.P.'s with case histories as fascinating as any adventure story. One fellow worked in the underground in Italy during the war. All escaped Communism and have relatives who were less fortunate and didn't. One girl in our office lost her husband in Siberia. Among us also is the young screen-play writer, recently immigrated from England, who collaborated on "The Search" (which played at the Quadrangle my senior year) and wrote "Stairway to Heaven."

Wish I had time and space to tell you more of the interesting details and about some of the other things I've been doing while not on the job. I certainly do enjoy reading the ALUMNI REGISTER; I don't miss a page or paragraph of it. I am looking forward to my first visit back which I hope will be soon.

Dan Edwards, Ed Fike Take Posts in London

Dan K. Edwards, '35, former mayor of Durham who has been serving as Assistant Secretary of Defense in Washington, D. C., since last May, was recently appointed Vice United States Deputy of the North Atlantic Defense Council by President Truman. The appointment, which became effective November 19 with an indefinite term of office, has required Mr. Edwards to move his headquarters from Washington to London.

Ed Fike, '41, who is on leave of absence from his job as head of the Duke University Bureau of Public Information while serving as Mr. Edwards' administrative assistant, is accompanying him.

The new post has arisen out of increased responsibilities of the North Atlantic Defense Pact, according to Mr. Edwards. Mr. Edwards points out that "decisions have not been made as to the specific manner in which the mutual assistance program will be administered." His work will be essentially a policy-making and inter-governmental relations job. He will be assistant to Ambassador Charles Spofford, who is the United States representative on the North Atlantic Defense Council. That Council is composed of one representative from Duke University Wedgwood plates are still priced at $2.50 per plate. In the November REGISTER, the price was erroneously listed as $2.00 per plate. The plates, with 12 Duke scenes, are available in blue or mulberry, and are priced at $2.50 each; $14.00 for six scenes, and $24.00 for a set of 12 scenes.

Correction

In the last issue of the REGISTER it was erroneously stated that Dr. and Mrs. Richard A. Harvill are the parents of two children. This mistake occurred through a misinterpretation of published biographical data. Dr. Harvill was recently inaugurated as President of the University of Arizona. He was awarded the A.M. degree by Duke in 1927. Mrs. Harvill is the former George Lee Garner, A.M. '30.

each of the 12 North Atlantic Defense Pact nations.

In a letter to Mr. Edwards, President Truman said, "Your outstanding service in the military forces during World War II and recently as Assistant Secretary of Defense have contributed greatly to strengthening the security of our nation. I am happy that you are accepting this further assignment abroad where you can contribute to the building of the military strength of our allies in Western Europe."

Accepting the new position, Mr. Edwards commented, "I am delighted to get into this particular aspect of the United States defense problem. This area is one of the most vital of our defense activities at the moment. Our North Atlantic and European allies are our first line of defense."

Todd Wins History Prize

Richard C. Todd, Ph.D. '50, who is associate professor of history at East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville, N. C., has been awarded the Mrs. Simon Baruch University Prize of $1,000 which is offered biennially by the United Daughters of the Confederacy for an unpublished monograph or essay of high merit in the field of Southern history.

Dr. Todd's "A History of Confederate Finance," written as a doctoral dissertation at Duke, was chosen for the honor because of its contribution to the history of the Confederacy and of the War Between the States.

Selection of the prize-winning work was made on the bases of "effectiveness of research, originality of thought, accuracy of statement, and excellence of style." The award was presented to Dr. Todd by Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Montezuma, Ga., chairman of the Mrs. Simon Baruch University Prize Committee, at an evening ceremony in the George Vanderhilt Hotel, Asheville, N. C., during the National Convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Dealing with the various financial expedients used by the Confederacy in meeting its obligations at home and abroad, Dr. Todd's history focuses attention upon the "organization and personnel responsible for carrying out the financial measures of the Government and on the numerous problems confronting their operation."

"Federal specie located in the mints and customhouses of the South was confiscated," Dr. Todd states in the work; "property of alien enemies was sequestered, and military supplies were impounded; duties were placed on exports and imports; direct taxes were levied; donations and gifts were cheerfully accepted and gratefully acknowledged; and Treasury notes flooded the market while loans were floated in an attempt to stabilize the redundant currency and offer a basis for foreign exchange."

A native of Lancaster, Pa., Dr. Todd received his education at State Teachers College, Millersville, Pa., Pennsylvania State College, and Duke, where he held a graduate assistantship in 1946-47 and was awarded a fellowship in 1947-48 while working for his doctor's degree. Before coming to North Carolina, he taught at various high schools in Pennsylvania. He taught at High Point College, High Point, N. C., before joining the faculty of East Carolina College.

Mrs. Todd worked with the Department of Political Science and with the Alumni Office while her husband was in school. They are now living in their new home in Greenville.

Bunn Family Praised for Farm Achievement

A green farm, winter and summer, is the achieved ideal of Charles Settle Bunn, '17, and his family of Stanhope, N. C. The family includes Mrs. Bunn, the former Agnes Smith; their sons, Charles Ivey Bunn, '39, and his wife, Florence Craig Bunn, '47; Braxton, '46; Spruill, who is still in high school; and two daughters, Nan Bunn Cummings (Mrs. Ray), R.N., B.S.N. '47, and Sidney, '49. The Bunn homestead, Gold Leaf Farm, is an excellent example of the vital contributions to agriculture and modern farming.

Recognition has been given the Bunn family for their outstanding farming. The April, 1951, Country Gentleman carried a lengthy feature on the Bunn family and farm, complete with illustrations. A particularly significant award was made to Mr. Bunn and his family this year when they were designated a Master Farm Family. This nationally awarded honor provides an opportunity for farmers to receive appropriate recognition for outstanding endeavor which was denied them before. It is sponsored in the South by the Progressive Farmer and the agricultural extension services of the respective state colleges.

In November, the people of Nash County turned out more than 400-strong to further honor this Master Farm Family. The first family in the region ever to win the Master Farm Family designation in nearly 30 years of competition for this award, the Bunn family have proved that farming as a profession and as a way of life can be both successful and satisfying. A special ceremony was held in the Stanhope School auditorium. The crowds who came were not all able to get into the school. Afterwards they were all invited to a barbecue supper provided by the Bunn family. Miss Anne Garrard and Mr. Allen Tyree of the Duke Alumni Office attended the ceremony. Speakers included Colonel J. W. Harrelson, chancellor of North Carolina State College, and Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Settle Bunn were married in 1917, and after World War I they moved to the farm, where they have lived ever since. According to the Rocky Mount Evening Telegram, "The Bunn family have provided all that one could look for in the ideal farm family. They started on land they did not own and battled their way through mortgages and the other hardships until today they own not only the original tract, but have added considerably to it. They also have improved their methods, their stock and their knowledge of farming. More than that, they have made farming interesting enough for their children to want to remain on the soil. And in addition to all this, the Bunn family have been good neighbors all the way through."

Besides maintaining a green farm the year around, the Bunn family are among the leading livestock people in North Carolina. They have a milking herd of 100 cows, and have also found hogs very profitable. Tobacco, corn, oats, barley, certified seed wheat, alfalfa hay, and

Who Had the Bell?

While University officials and student leaders were launching their campaign against vandalism and state police extending by several links their long arm, school spirit began to shake off the comparatively dormant state in which it has lain since the end of last year's football season. The reason: the sixty-fourth renewal of the Duke-Carolina football series, slated for Duke Stadium.

As usual, the freshmen took the initiative, if by force in the beginning, certainly by their own willingness and sheer inability to remain untouched by the thing later on, as the entire student body was snatched up and swept along by the tide.

By Wednesday the materials of the traditional bonfire began to take visible shape on Freshman Field, and preparations for Friday night's colossal pep rally were well in the making. Thanksgiving Day proved the lull before the storm, as all concerned rested and gorged themselves, as is the custom. But by Thursday night it was on again stronger than ever.

Throughout the small hours four-hour shifts stood guard against trespassers from the Hill, and the night and next day passed without incident. During the rally and subsequent firing off, frenzy reached its highest pitch, and remained there well after the final gun had sounded the following afternoon, leaving Duke the 19-7 victor.

Until now the whole episode had come off with a surprising lack of incident, considering the amount of spirit that had been generated and sustained. But it wouldn't be a Duke-Carolina weekend without some sort of shenanigans, and this year was certainly no dud. The whole thing centered about the Victory Bell, a very real and revered symbol of success which Duke has had the good fortune to possess for the last year, the first, incidently, in its five-year history.

During the hectic confusion following the game, a Duke freshman charged with seeing that the bell got to wherever it was supposed to be, somehow managed, unknowingly, to enlist the aid of two Carolina hoys and their car in towing it to East Campus for another small rally. En route the party stopped off in downtown Durham, which ordinarily is pretty well off the beaten track between East and West, for some sort of birthday celebration.

Innocently believing himself to be in the midst of a strictly Duke gathering, the frosh proceeded to forget completely about the bell and plunge himself into a whopping good time. When he next thought of his responsibility, it was, of course, well on its way to Chapel Hill.

Several days of mystery followed, when almost no one knew the whereabouts of the bell and those that did weren't saying. Several newspapers played the story up, running a picture released from Chapel Hill showing the bell and absconders, and labeling it, "Somewhere in Orange County." But by the middle of the week no one had given much serious thought to the problem of how to get the bell back, nor even seemed worried about its safety. The Carolina hoys were suddenly put in the position of having something on their hands that nobody wanted, a situation contrary to their hopes and wishes.

Finally, on Thursday, a plan of revenge began to take form. Leaflets were posted around campus and shoved under doors announcing a mid-night raid on Hogan's Lake to recover the bell and also to make an attempt at snatching the Carolina Ram. Presumably everything was in readiness when the long arm of the Chapel Hill law reached out, scooped up the bell, and deposited it, intact and

Bob Chandler, sophomore of Mt. Airy, N. C.; Flint Liddon, sophomore of Yazoo City, Miss.; and Bill Donigan, junior of Belmont, N. J. In the wheelbarrow? evidently none the worse for wear, on the Duke campus, where it will reside until hostilities are renewed once again next year.

Thus a march on Chapel Hill was thwarted.

In a whirlwind campaign tour of North Carolina's universities, Senator Robert A. Taft stopped at Duke long enough to eat some lunch and talk for an hour to an overflowing crowd of students, most of whom he hopes will be old enough to vote by next November. Without benefit of notes, the Senator touched on Communism, the Democratic Administration, the Voice of America, his foreign policy, and the three major issues of the coming election campaign. But, strangely enough, he failed to go into detail about his views of the draft and UMT, the two subjects which are probably uppermost in the minds of most college students. It was noted by many that, although the Senator bore a closer resemblance to a professor lecturing than a candidate campaigning, still a politician is a politician, and the proof can usually be found in the things he doesn't talk about.

* * * * *

No sooner had Duke football breathed its last than basketball was upon us, and in bigger and better form than we had ever seen it. The season opened with hoop-famous Temple taking on the Blue Devils in the Indoor Stadium, or as many newspaper writers put it, Groat against Mkvv. Both Duke's team and its star fared equally well, over-shadowing the opponent with comparative ease. And almost as exciting as the game itself was the presence of Life magazine photographers, whose equipment and the use of it literally dazzled the crowd. Life sales will undoubtedly double on the campus until after the article appears.

* * * * *

Once again the age-old problem of class attendance has come to the fore, this time with some new and more convincing arguments. Sponsored by the Student Governments of both campuses and supported by campus newspaper columnists, the move is aimed at a more liberal cut system, which, interpreted by the student body, means unlimited cuts. Besides the usual case for the free cut system, which includes the desire of the student to stand on his own feet and make his own decisions, the idea has been put forward that if a professor were not guaranteed a full audience three times a week, rain or shine, but had to depend solely on the interest of his lecture and his ability to draw the student to his classroom, it might well improve the quality of lecture and lecturer, not to mention the student's capacity for assimilating information thrown out in these classes which he really wants to attend. At present the chances for adoption of any such system seem narrow, but then again, at Duke you never can tell.

Recent Honors - Expressions of Opinion

Dr. Gross Elected

Dr. Paul M. Gross, Duke vice-president and one of the nation's leading scientists and educators, has been elected to the presidency of the Conference of Deans of Southern Graduate Schools. Currently president of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies and a member of the Board of Directors of the National Science Foundation, Dr. Gross recently received the 1951 Science Award for distinguished service to the South from the Southern Association of Science and Industry. He has served as scientific adviser to the U. S. delegation to the UNESCO conference, and holds the highest award a civilian can receive, the President's Medal of Merit.

Dr. Powell Re-elected

Dr. B. E. Powell, Duke librarian, has been re-elected chairman of the American Library Association Board on Resources of American Libraries for a second one-year term. Dr. Powell is serving his fifth year on the Board, whose function is to study present resources of research libraries and suggest plans for coordination in the acquisition of research materials by American Libraries.

Dr. Cleland Named Visitor

Dr. James T. Cleland, preacher to the University, has been named visiting minister for this year's "Spiritual Life Mission" in Morristown, Tenn. Dr. Cleland will deliver seven sermons on the general theme, "Names for the Christian" during the six-day event designed to offer a sound and attractive interpretation of the Gospel by an effective and distinguished minister.

Professional Jargon

"Professional jargon is more precise and less liable to errors of interpretation than ordinary English," says Mrs. J. Harned, Duke University Medical School record librarian. In her new and unique book, Medical Terminology Made Easy, Mrs. Harned explains origins of medical words, presents techniques for learning meanings, spelling, and pronunciation, and gives a list and explanation of commonly recognized practices in medicine. Designed as a text, it will be used to train medical record librarians at Duke and elsewhere.

Aid for Atom Victims

Realizing the impossibility of administering anesthetics to the countless victims of an atomic attack, Dr. Kenneth L. Pickrell, professor of plastic surgery at Duke, thinks he has hit upon an answer. While exhibiting a trilene inhaler to the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, Dr. Pickrell explained that "trilene is a liquid and is not an anesthesia, or, simply, it doesn't produce unconsciousness. It takes away the pain without necessarily putting the patient out." With this inhaler, which could be operated by a child, vast numbers of patients could be treated quickly and efficiently.

Restraints Threaten Freedom

"Restraints upon the liberty of educational and intellectual activity are a challenge to the very principles of democracy itself," Dr. Glenn Negley, chairman of the Duke Philosophy Department told the North Carolina Philosophical Association in a speech delivered in Greensboro. "The very ideas, principles, and ideals of democracy must be subject to controversy and attack. In no other way can it be supposed that democratic ideas will provide us with reliable guides and purposes of action." Dr. Negley attacked Loyalty oaths and Congressional immunity as serious threats to our democracy. "No individual in a democracy can be allowed immunity from legal procedure," he said. "In democratic society, lawlessness is the eternal foe of liberty."

Solar Effect on Behavior

"Behavior and human feelings may be conditioned by external force to a degree hitherto unsuspected," said Dr. Leonard J. Ravitz, psychiatrist at Duke Medical School, while explaining a new theory to the Southern Medical Association. For two years, Dr. Ravitz has been experimenting with the idea that the behavior of insane—and normal—persons is linked to the solar system. By measuring the electric potential of the human body and plotting the mathematical results, the Duke psychiatrist discovered that marked changes were shown to coincide with sun-moon phases and with the seasons. "This doesn't mean," Dr. Ravitz said, "that we can diagnose insanity, but now we can definitely diagnose the changing degrees of mental disturbance."

To Slow Smoking Habit

"People who have to have cigarettes need psychological help, not scare tactics such as threats of stomach ulcers or lung cancer." This is the opinion of Dr. Gelolo McHugh, Duke psychologist, based on data collected over a five-year period and covering some 600 people. Instead of trying to swear off smoking, or limit smoking to a certain number of cigarettes each day, Dr. McHugh suggests that an hour or two of each day be set aside as a no-smoking period. In this way, according to Dr. McHugh's experiments, cigarette control gradually grows stronger, and the smoker is well on his way "to mastering cigarettes instead of being mastered by them."

OPS Questioned

"The Office of Price Stabilization is resorting to regulations which attempt to fix prices by freezing the methods used in computing prices instead of the prices themselves," wrote Duke economist Dr. Lloyd Saville in the current Southern Economic Journal. "Under this type of control the public tends to relinquish its power to hold prices down by consumer pressures, and inflationary tendencies often result." Outlining his opinions in an article entitled "A Problem in the Economics of Price Control," Dr. Saville set forth several alternative programs, based on the results of a detailed study of controls during World War II.

Struggle Can End in Stalemate

All-out war between Russia and the United States would probably end in a stalemate, Dr. Theodore Ropp, Duke history professor and military expert, said in a recent talk at a Pinehurst, N. C., forum. Backing up this statement, Dr. Ropp explained, "For the first time in modern European history, there is no great land army in Western Europe. Thus there is no balance of power. This has disastrously affected traditional U. S. foreign policy, which has turned on tipping that balance against the aggressor. The balance is slowly being restored, but the slowness of our progress makes it reasonably clear that a stalemate would result from an actual war." In regard to an atomic war, Dr. Ropp stated that although we lead Russia by a large margin in the stockpile of atomic bombs—he puts the number of U. S. bombs at 1,000 against fifty for Russia—delivery is a serious question, since the B-36 bomber is now becoming obsolete and the new jet bombers are just getting into production. "Their (Russia's) greatest weakness is still their inability to get at the United States, but we cannot get at them either except by air."

Religion in Medicine

"It is time religion began to speak its piece and exert its creative efforts in the field of health and mental hygiene," declared Dr. Russell L. Dicks of the Duke Divinity School upon the announcement of a new magazine, Religion and Health, which will make its appearance in February. The proposed pocket-size publication, which aims at "bridging the gap between medicine and religion," will be under the editorship of Dr. Dicks. In addition to regular departments, the magazine will feature articles by recognized leaders in the fields of religion and medicine.

Divinity School Seminars

DIVINITY SCHOOL SEMINARS FOR 1952, which are made possible through the James A. Gray Fund of Duke Divinity School, were recently announced. These will take place in Greenville, N. C., at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church on January 21 and 22, and in Winston-Salem, N. C., at the Centenary Methodist Church on January 24 and 25.

Topic of these two days' study courses for ministers will be "Our Mission" and will be led by Dr. Daniel J. Fleming, Emeritus Professor of Missions in Union Theological Seminary, and Dr. Robert E. Cushman, Professor of Systematic Theology in the Divinity School of Duke University.

The cost of three meals to be paid at each church by all registrants will be $4.00. Over-night accommodations and breakfast will be provided without cost, if requested.

Baldwin Scholarship Continues Growth

The Woman's College Scholarship Committee feels that the continuing widespread interest, both in the raising of funds and in the selection of scholars indicates the recognition of the value of concerted effort in expanding and administering impartially scholarships adequate to the needs in the Woman's College.

One of the more far-reaching scholarship funds in the Woman's College is the Alice M. Baldwin Scholarship Fund. On June 30, 1951, the fund reached a total of $22,703.26. This amount represents a gain during the fiscal year 1950-51 of $2,863.07 derived from class gifts, Campus Chest, individual contributions, and increase in investment account. Two items especially account for the major part of the gain: the Campus Chest contribution, which has constituted a vital annual source of support, was $840.69; and the Senior Class gift of $985.59 was made in memory of two deceased members, Berenice Lipscomb and Betsy Thorup.

The third of a series of engravings for the Baldwin Fund Chapel Window Note Paper project was made by Professor Earl Mueller. A small supply of note paper is still available. Income from this project goes to defray expenses, and all that is possible is put into the Fund's principle.

Interest from the Fund's principle made it possible to finance four scholarships for 1951-52. For the first three years of the Fund's operation, only one scholarship was awarded each year. In the fourth year, there were three scholarship recipients.

Acting on the principles of selection set up in the Plan of Establishment, the Committee awarded scholarships to those applicants deemed most worthy on the bases of scholarliness, character, contribution to Duke community life, and financial need. Out of 21 worthy applicants considered, Hester Van Metre Hough, '52; Anne Moreau Jansky, '54; Barbara Snyder, '52; and Christina Kathryn White, '53, were chosen as scholarship winners for 1951-52.

Members of the Woman's College Scholarship Committee for 1951-52 are faculty: Miss Mary Poteat, chairman; Richard L. Watson, Jr.; Julia R. Grout; alumnae: Mary K. Clyde (Mrs. P. H.), '27; Louise Seabolt, '25; students: Thelma Stevens, '52 (president, WSGA); Susan Piekens, '52 (student member at large); Rebecca Woollen, '52 (president, Panhellenic Council); and Joan Gilliam, '53 (Panhellenic scholarship chairman).

Flashy Devils Open With Four Wins

With five sophomores and a graduate student playing for the first time on a 12-man squad, Duke's basketball team appears headed for one of its best seasons in recent years.

In the Blue Devil's first three games in Coach Harold Bradley's second year at the helm, they scored impressive wins. They downed Temple 85-48 in the opener, lagged behind in the stretch but won over Hanes Hosiery 78-68, trounced North Carolina 77-59 in the Gerry Gerard Memorial Game, won out over highly regarded Bradley 87-69, and then astonished everyone by dropping a 72-73 decision to underrated Furman.

Dick Groat, six-foot guard from Swissvale, Pa., captains the team. He is one of six lettermen, the others being forwards Bill Fleming of Philadelphia, Kes Deimling of River Forest, Ill., and Dick Latimer of Bethesda, Md.; center Dick Crowder of High Point, N. C.; and guard Dick Johnson of Dayton, Ohio.

The sophomores are forwards Bernie Janicki of Ambridge, Pa., one of the high scorers in the early games, and Charlie Driesell of Norfolk, Va.; center Rudy Lacy of Roanoke, Va.; and guards Rudy D'Emilio of Philadelphia, and Fred Shabel of Union City, N. J.

The graduate student among the crew is six-five center Carl Glasow (pronounced Glass-O) of Rochester, N. Y. During the war he attended Cornell as a member of the Navy's V-12 program, graduating with a B.S. in mechanical engineering and winning two basketball monograms. Later he received his master's in physical metallurgy at the University of Rochester. After working as an engineer for one year, he entered Duke's Divinity School. He was discovered while playing intramural sports with the future preachers.

Groat, who led the nation's major college players in most points and most free throws last year, setting new national records in both departments with 831 points and 261 free throws, has again been the top scorer for the team in early games. He tossed in 33 tallies against Temple to outscore the Temple ace, Bill Mlkvy, 33-17, then added 26 points against Hanes Hosiery. He was held to only two points in the first half against North Carolina, but rallied to score 14 points in the second half before fouling out with two minutes left. Against Bradley he tallied 25 points, and got 15 in the Furman fracas.

Janicki scored 50 points in the first three games. He had 21 in the opener against Temple, 13 against Hanes Hosiery and 16 against Carolina.

While their scoring totals haven't been as sensational as some of the others, two of the three newcomers who have won starting berths have aided the team greatly with their all-round performances. They are Glasow and D'Emilio. Glasow is the center and owns a potent hook shot. D'Emilio, who in some ways follows Groat's style of play, is a great floorman.

The Blue Devil eagers face a strong schedule this season. Besides the regular campaign against Conference and inter-sectional foes, they will again play in the Dixie Classic Tournament at Raleigh. Runners-up in the meet last year, Duke faces a strong Columbia University team that won 22 games without defeat last season in the first round. The tourney runs for three days with all entries playing each day.

After the game with Bradley here, Duke will have ten home games left on the docket. Among the leading teams to be met here are Pennsylvania, N. C. State, Wake Forest, George Washington, William and Mary, Maryland, South

WHEN setting type we give due consideration to the ultimate purpose . . . In deciding whether to use linotype, monotype or hand composition, we first ascertain the function of the particular piece of work. Each method was designed for a specific service, therefore initial cost is beside the question. We shall be glad to assist you in deciding which of the three will do the best job for your particular problem. Our composing room service is planned for today's demands.

before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor ax, nor any tool of iron heard in the house." It was, perhaps, Dr. Garber says, the first pre-fabricated building in the world.

The Bible also says that much of the building, or at least the columns in front, the molten sea, and many of the ornaments inside were made from "brass." Dr. Garber found that discoveries had been made of Solomon's copper mines in Ezion-Geber, proving that brass in that day was poorly refined copper alloy which could be burnished until its smooth surfaces shone.

Many seemingly unexplainable questions arose, such as what kind of stone was used? Where did it come from? What size were the blocks? Did cedars of Lebanon grow large enough to produce beams which could reach from wall to wall? What color was the wood? These and many other problems, including the type of roofing, the method of door hinging, and the nature of the "winding stairs," presented themselves to Dr. Garber.

The finished Temple model shows three large inner chambers, surrounded by other smaller rooms or chambers. The doors leading outside reach almost to the roof, enabling the builders to carry in whole sections of ceiling or floor already pre-fabricated. In front, on either side of the entrance, are two brass pillars named Jachim and Boaz in the Bible. On the space in front of the Temple is a huge "molten sea" or open container resting on the backs of bronze oxen, an altar for sacrifice. The model itself is 78 inches long, 45 inches wide, and 38 inches high. Each $\frac{1}{4}$ inch represents one foot, and the scale fits exactly with the measurements listed in the Bible.

Contained within Solomon's Temple were such important religious relics as the Ark of the Covenant which held the two tables of stone which Moses had placed there. Dr. Garber has attempted to make replicas of the Ark and of the other furnishings and appointments that were inside the Temple.

Solomon himself sat in judgment in the Temple; it was there he settled the dispute of two women over a child they each claimed. It was no wonder that the shining marble and brass and gold building, paneled inside with cedar, was thought so marvelous, indeed a place most sacred on earth.

As the conclusion of the brochure prepared by Mr. Howland states: "The Lord, God, whom 'neither the heavens, nor the heaven of heavens can contain' did not dwell in a Temple handmade with hands, nor heeded any such Temple, but in response to his people's prayer, His dwelling place, and had said of Solomon's Temple 'My name shall be there.'"

Dean

find out, first of all, whether it is really too secret to be looked at, really too technical to be understood, and really too awesome to be contemplated.

Anyone who has done this, I believe, has found that although a lot in the field of atomic energy is secret, there is enough of it that is not secret to permit public understanding of the basic problems involved. The secrecy wall surrounds mainly the subject of how we make weapons. There have been more than a hundred million words officially published on what weapons will do, how atomic energy can be used in peaceful pursuits, how it can be controlled internationally, how it is controlled in the United States, and upon what basic scientific facts the whole structure of the atomic energy enterprise is built. These are the things that people can know if we are to stop cringing before the atom. . . .

If we look at atomic energy coolly and analytically, we no longer see a fearsome, uncontrollable force. We see instead what it really is—a new and potentially highly useful source of energy. In its practical aspects, it means:

1. Radioisotopes for better health, increased food supplies, new industrial products and continued scientific advancement.
2. Power to drive ships and airplanes and to light the cities and do man's work.
3. Weapons for the defense of our country and the free world. . . .

Here at Duke, you have the advantage of being more familiar with the atom than most people. This is illustrated by the research contracts you hold and by your leadership in the founding and management of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, whose board of directors is now so ably headed by Dr. Paul M. Gross. It devolves upon you, then, perhaps more than upon many other institutions, to think on these things and to do your part in convincing mankind that the atom is not something to fear, but that it is something to understand—and thus to master.

Bunn Family

ladino pasture are all grown on Gold Leaf Farm. The farm is now a three-family one, for Charles and Florence built a modern ranch type house near their parents. Charles is serving in the Army again, but expects to be out soon. They have a son, Charles, Jr., born July 14, 1951. Braxton lives in a third house. Sidney and Spruill also live at Gold Leaf Farm. One son, Mark, a Naval aviator, was killed during World War II.

About 700 acres, 350 open and the rest woodland, comprise the farm. Besides the Bunn family, there are a few happy and satisfied sharecroppers who have lived on the farm for many years.

The Bunn family, in spite of its intensified farm work, seems to find plenty of time to take part in community affairs. Mrs. Bunn is an accomplished pianist, though she says she does most of her playing on the kitchen range. And for the men there is always the grand sport of hunting. One look at this Master Farm Family is enough to prove they have most certainly deserved the award they received.

Carolina and North Carolina. Topping a road schedule are contests with N. Y. U. in Madison Square Garden January 10, Temple at Philadelphia two days later, and Navy at Annapolis on February 9.

JayVee Cagers

The Duke junior varsity cagers are being coached by Tom Connelly, co-captain of the 1941 Southern Conference champs. In his starting line-up are four boys, three of them freshmen, who measure six-four. The current starters are Don Cashman of New York City and Earl Skiff of Sebenectady, N. Y., at forwards; Harold "Herky" Lamley of Haverstown, Pa., at center; and Marv Decker of Bloomfield, N. J., and Hype Larsen of Woodbridge, N. J., at guards. All but Larsen are six-four and all but Larsen and Decker are yearlings. Larsen is a six foot senior and Decker is a promising sophomore.

Soccer Honors

Duke's varsity soccer team, coached by Jim Bly and runner-up to Maryland for the Southern Conference championship as a result of a 3-2 loss to the Terrapins in the final game of the season, claimed five of the 11 positions on the All-Conference team selected by coaches.

The machine operated by these technicians is only one of many devices utilized by America's progressive medical profession in treating the hospitalized ill. Prepaid hospital-surgical plans have a role in the drama of healing arts, too. Of all the plans in North Carolina, only Hospital Saving Association offers double approval protection of Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

No. 12...THE SQUIRREL

had me out
limb!”

This nimble-minded nutcracker almost tumbled for those tricky cigarette mildness tests. But he worked himself out of a tight spot when he suddenly realized that cigarette mildness just can't be judged by a mere puff or one single sniff. Smokers everywhere have reached this conclusion—there's just one real way to prove the flavor and mildness of a cigarette.

It's the sensible test... the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke—on a pack-after-pack, day-after-day basis. No snap judgments. Once you've enjoyed Camels for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), you'll see why...

After all the Mildness Tests...

Camel leads all other brands by billions
